A SESSIONS JUDGE cannot tender a pardon to an accused under s. 338 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882), where the offence for which he has been committed is not triable exclusively by the Court of Session, such as an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code.—EMPRESS v. SADHEE KASAL, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 936. Prinsep and Macpherson, JJ. July 1, 1884.

A COMMON brass drinking cup was stolen in October 1883, and was discovered in the possession of the accused in September 1884. Held, in a case in which the accused was tried for receiving stolen property, that his possession of the stolen property, coupled with the fact that he had failed to give an account as to how he became possessed of the property would, under ordinary circumstances, raise a probable presumption of his guilt, but where, as in this case, such possession was not a recent possession, but one eleven months subsequent to the act of theft, the presumption against him was so slight that, taken by itself, he ought not to be called upon to explain how his possession was acquired. The question of what is or is not a recent possession of stolen property is to be considered with reference to the nature of the article stolen. Rex v. Adam (3 C. & P. 600), Rex v. Cooper (3 C. & P. 318), Rex v. Partridge (7 C. & P. 551), followed.—INA SHEIKH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 11 Cal. 160. Mitter and Norris, JJ. Jan. 7, 1885.]

THE civil station at Rajkot is not part of British India within the meaning of Stat. 21 and 22 Vict. c. 106. Where the accused, a subject of a Native State, committed theft at Rajkot Civil Station, and was found in possession of the stolen property at Thana, held that, as the offence was not committed in British India, and as the accused was the subject of a Native State, the Sessions Court at Thana had no jurisdiction to try the accused for theft under s. 381 of the Penal Code. But it was competent to try him for dishonest retention of stolen property under s. 410 of the Penal Code as amended by Act VIII. of 1882.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ABDUL LATIB alias ABDUL RAHIMAN, I. L. R., 10 Bom. 180. Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Nov. 24, 1885.

A PERSON was convicted and sentenced under s. 411 of the Penal Code for dishonestly receiving a bull, knowing the same to have been criminally misappropriated. It was found that, at the time of the alleged misappropriation, the bull had been set at large by some Hindus, in accordance with Hindu religious usage, at the time of performing funeral ceremonies. Held that the bull was not, at the time of the alleged misappropriation, 'property' within the meaning of the Penal Code, inasmuch as, not only was it not the subject of ownership by any person, but the original owner had surrendered all his rights as its proprietor: that it was therefore nullius proprietas and incapable of larceny being committed in respect of it; and that the conviction must be set aside.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BANDHU, I. L. R., 8 All. 51. [Straight, J. Dec. 7, 1885.] Referred to in Queen-Empress v. Nihal, I. L. R., 9 All. 348, infra.

A HINDU who, upon the death of a relative dedicates or lets loose a bull, in accordance with Hindu religious usage, as a pious act for the benefit of the soul of the deceased, thereby surrenders and abandons all proprietary rights in the animal, which thereafter is not "property" which is capable of being made the subject of dishonest receipt or possession within the meaning of ss. 410 and 411 of the Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. Bandhu (I. L. R., 8 All. 51) and Queen-Empress v. Jamura (Weekly Notes, 1884, p. 87) referred to.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIHAL, I. L. R., 9 All. 348. [Straight, J. Jan. 7, 1887.]

A PERSON convicted under ss. 411 75 of the Penal Code is not convicted of "distinct offences" within the meaning of s. 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Queen Empress v. Zor Singh (I. L. R., 10 All 146) explained. Where an offence under s. 411 read with s. 75 of the Penal Code appears to be deserving of a greater punishment than the Magistrate trying it can award, the best course for him to adopt is to commit the accused for trial to the Court of Session.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KHALAK, I. L. R., 11 All 393. [Brodhurst, J. May 3, 1889.]

To constitute the offence of receiving stolen property, there must be some proof that some person other than the accused had possession of the property before the accused got possession of it. The judgment of the Court (Prinsep and Pigott, JJ.) was as follows: "The prisoners are convicted of dishonestly receiving stolen property, first, under s. 411 in respect of the goods belonging to one person, and, second, in respect of goods belonging to another. They were separately tried, and sentenced on each of these charges. There is no proof against them save the fact that the goods found in their possession were stolen from different persons, and were found in their possession under such circumstances as to prove a guilty knowledge on their part. There is no proof as to their receipt of the goods, nothing to show that they received them at different times or from different persons. All the goods in the possession of each prisoner may have been stolen by the same thief, and may have been by him delivered to that prisoner at the same time, although stolen on different occasions. If each prisoner received the goods found in his possession together at the same time, that would constitute only one offence. There is nothing in the fact that the goods were stolen at different times to constitute by itself proof that they were received at different times, or under such circumstances as to show that more than one offence was committed in receiving them. It need not be considered whether, if a thief brought to a receiver, say, a coat and a ring, stolen from different persons, and on the same occasion gave them to the receiver if he said, 'Here is a coat stolen from H; take this,' and the receiver took it; and also 'Here is a ring stolen from B; take this,' and the receiver took it, these acts would or would not constitute different offences, because there is nothing to show that such a case existed here. Here there is nothing but possession of stolen property found concealed established; and this is consistent with only one offence having been committed, so far as receiving is concerned; but, in truth, the offence proved is only the retaining of stolen goods. In this case, as observed, there is no proof of actual receiving; and it has been held in England (2 Russell on Crimes citing R. v. Cordy) that to constitute the offence of receiving there must be some proof that some person other than the prisoner had possession of the goods before the prisoner got possession of them, otherwise possession of them is only proof of the stealing, which is not found here.* If this rule prevails under the Penal Code (and we see no reason why it should not), the prisoners should have been convicted of the retention of stolen goods, knowing, or having reason to believe, that they were stolen, of the existence of which knowledge their concealment of the goods was evidence. We therefore set aside the conviction in the second trial. The first conviction in the first case we also set aside, and, in lieu thereof, we convict the prisoners under the same section (411) of dishonestly retaining stolen property, and sentence the prisoners on the findings in the first case, Ishan to four years, Ananda to six years, and Cushte to two years, all in rigorous imprisonment"—ISHAN MUCHI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 511 [Prinsep and Pigott, JJ. Feb. 21, 1888.] Approved in Queen-Empress v. Mukhan, I. L. R., 15 All. 317, infra.

THE accused were charged with retaining stolen property under s. 411 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860). The Sessions Judge, in his charge to the jury, merely directed them to find whether the property was stolen, and whether it was retained by the accused. Held that the charge was defective, and amounted to a misdirection. The Sessions Judge should have directed the jury to find (1) whether the property was stolen; (2) whether it was dishonestly retained; and (3) whether the accused knew, or had reason to believe, the same to be stolen property. Unless these questions were found by the jury in the affirmative, the accused could not legally be convicted of an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BALYA SO-

* See the case of Empress v. Uttom Koondoo, I. L. R., 8 Cal. 634, where, however, the point does not seem to have been taken.—ED. See supra at p. 506.

MYA, I. L. R., 15 Bom. 369. [Birdwood and Parsons, JJ. Oct. 9, 1890.]

A PERSON cannot be said to be an habitual receiver of stolen goods who may receive the proceeds of a number of different robberies from a number of different thieves on the same day. In order to support a conviction under s. 413 of the Penal Code of being an habitual receiver of stolen property, it must be shown that the property was received on different occasions and on different dates.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BABURAM KANSARI, I. L. R., 19 Cal. 190. [Norris and Beverley, JJ. Nov. 12, 1891.]

WHERE a person was found in possession of stolen property identified as belonging to different owners, but it did not appear that he had received such property at different times, held that such person could not properly be tried and convicted under s. 411 of the Penal Code separately in respect of the property identified by each owner. Ishan Muchi v. The Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 15 Cal. 511) approved.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MAKHAN, I. L. R., 15 All. 317. [Aikman, J. April 29, 1893.]

WHERE a document, purporting to be a Collectorate notice forming part of a record, and found by the Court to be genuine, was discovered to be in the possession of persons charged with retaining stolen property, it was held that, in a matter of this kind, it was right to raise legal presumptions arising out of the ordinary course of business, and to dispense with direct evidence of the document having been actually on the record or stolen from it. Though it be true that, before a man can be convicted of receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen, it must be shown that property has been stolen, held that the disappearance of the document from the record, plus the substitution of an imitation of it in its place, showed that it must have been taken with a dishonest object.—ISHAN CHUNDRA CHANDRA v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 21 Cal. 328. [Trevelyan and Rampini, JJ. Nov. 22, 1893.]

WHERE the sole evidence against a person charged with an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code consisted of the fact that the accused had pointed out the place where some of the stolen property was concealed in the field of another person, held that this was not in itself sufficient evidence to support a conviction under the above-mentioned section.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GOBINDA, I. L. R., 17 All. 576 [Edge, C.J., and Banerji, J. May 31, 1895.]

M AND K were convicted at the same trial of receiving stolen property, namely, currency notes, as well as of assisting in concealing or disposing of such notes which they knew or had reason to believe were stolen property. Each of them were charged with the same offences only in respect of a currency note of Rs. 500, but in respect of the charges on two other notes of Rs. 100 each, the charges against each of them related only to one of these notes. Held that there had been a misjoinder of parties, the transactions being altogether separate and distinct against each of them. Held further that the Sessions Judge in discharging one of the accused on the ground of misjoinder of parties had power to add to that order a direction that the accused should be re-tried. It was not obligatory on him to leave to the discretion of the Magistrate the course which should be taken in such a matter, and it was not intended by the order of discharge in the case of Queen-Empress v. Chandi Singh (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 395), to free the accused in that case from the consequences of his acts or to declare that no order for re-trial could be passed in such a case. Queen-Empress v. Fakirapa (I. L. R., 15 Bom. 491), and Empress of India v. Murari (I. L. R., 4 All. 147), referred to.—KUMUDINI KANTA GUHA v. THE QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 104. [Prinsep and Handley, JJ. June 28, 1900.]

K S, K P, and K M were tried jointly and convicted: K S under s. 407 of the Penal Code, K P and K M under s. 411 of that Code. No objection to the joint trial was taken either before the trying Magistrate or before the Appellate Court. Held, in revision (upon objection being taken to the joint trial of K S with K P and K M) that a misjoinder of parties is not fatal to the proceedings, but is an irregularity which requires that the Court should consider under the terms of s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure whether it has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. In the Matter of Abdur Rahman (I. L. R., 27 Cal. 839) followed. Held further that having regard to the explanation to s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the objection was not one which could be properly taken in revision; that the objection should have been raised at an earlier stage of the proceedings; and that therefore it might be taken that not having been so raised it had not in fact occasioned a failure of justice.—KALI PROSAD MAHISAL v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 7. [Prinsep and Handley, JJ. July 2, 1900.] Followed in Karu Kalal v. Ram Charan Pal, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 10, infra.

L K and J were tried jointly and convicted, L under s. 381 of the Penal Code of stealing tea in the possession of his master, K and J under s. 411 of the Penal Code of dishonestly retaining some stolen tea which they had received from L. It was contended that the joint trial of a person charged under s. 411 of the Penal Code with a person charged under s. 381 of the Penal Code was necessarily void and the conviction bad. Held that a misjoinder of parties is not fatal to the proceedings, but is an irregularity which requires that the Court should consider whether, under the terms of s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. Bishnu Banwar v. Empress (1 C. W. N. 35) referred to. In the Matter of Abdur Rahman (I. L. R., 27 Cal. 839), and Kali Prosad Mahisal v Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 28 Cal. 7) followed.—KARU KALAL v. RAM CHARAN PAL, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 10. [Pratt and Brett, JJ. Nov. 12, 1900.]

S. 411 of the Indian Penal Code does not apply to the person who is the actual thief. Where, therefore, a person whose bullock had been stolen in his absence traced it to the house of the thief, and there and then arrested him, and made him over to a chaukidar, from whose custody he escaped, it was held that this was not an escape from lawful custody within the meaning of s. 224 of the Code. Semble that if the owner of the bullock had himself been entitled to make the arrest, the subsequent custody of the prisoner by the chaukidar would have been a lawful custody. Queen-Empress v. Potadu (I. L. R., 11 Mad. 480) referred to.—KING-EMPEROR v. JOHRI, I. L. R., 23 All. 266. [Blair and Aikman, JJ. Mar. 14, 1901.]

DURING the trial of a case the accused obtained a process for the attendance of a witness. Before the witness appeared the accused asked the Court to countermand the order for his attendance, but the Court refused to do so. When the witness attended the accused declined to examine him. He was thereupon examined by the Court, and upon the accused claiming the right to cross-examine the witness, the Court refused to allow him to do so. Held, that under the circumstances the witness could not be regarded as a witness for the defence, and that the accused should have been given an opportunity to cross-examine him. Held, also, that offences under ss 411 and 489 (c) of the Penal Code are distinct offences, and should be tried separately. — MOHENDRO NATH DAS GUPTA v. EMPEROR, I. 412. Whoever dishonestly receives or retains any stolen property, the possession whereof he knows or has reason to believe to have been transferred by the commission of dacoity, or dishonestly receives from a person whom he knows or has reason to believe to belong, or to have belonged, to a gang of dacoits, property which he knows or has reason to believe to have been stolen, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Dishonestly receiving property stolen in the commission of a dacoity.

CHARGE.—That you, on or about the , at , dishonestly received stolen property, the possession of which you knew, or had reason to know, had been transferred by the commission of dacoity, and that you thereby committed an offence, &c.—2 W. R. Cr. L. 23, No. 352 of 1865.

A SENTENCE of transportation under ss. 412 and 59 of the Penal Code cannot exceed ten years.—QUEEN v. MOHANUNDO BHUNDARY, 5 W. R. 16. [Seton-Karr and Macpherson, JJ. Jan. 20, 1866.]

IT must be proved that the prisoner received or retained plundered property, knowing it to be plundered property, before he can be convicted under s 412 of the Penal Code.—IN THE MATTER OF BISHOO MANJEE, 9 W. R. 16. [Jackson and Mitter JJ. Feb. 12, 1868.]

THE practice of dividing the facts which constitute the parts of one offence into several minor offences condemned. A person convicted of dacoity under s. 395, Penal Code, cannot be convicted also of dishonestly receiving stolen property under s. 411, or of receiving property transferred by commission of dacoity under s 412, when there is no evidence of the commission of more than one offence Mode of treating the confession of prisoners as evidence in a case of receiving stolen property pointed out.—QUEEN v SHAHABUT SHEIKH, 13 W. R. 42. [Norman, Offg. C. J., and Bayley, J. Mar. 8, 1870.]

MERELY being seen getting on board a boat with four persons, who have, on their own admissions, been convicted of belonging to a gang of dacoits, is not sufficient evidence against those so seen. To make an admission of guilty knowledge of the means by which money, supposed to have been acquired by dacoity, was obtained, evidence under s: 150 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV. of 1861), corresponding with s. 26 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), it must be shown that the admission was antecedent to the discovery of the money—QUEEN v. KAMAL FUKEER, 17 W. R. 50. [Couch, C.J., and Ainslie, J. April 15. 1872.]

A AND B were committed for trial, the former for dacoity under s. 395 of the Penal Code, and the latter under s. 412 for receiving stolen property, knowing it to be such. A made two confessions, and in both he stated he had handed over to B some pieces of gold and silver stolen at the dacoity. When B was arrested, a gold ring and a silver wristlet were found in his possession. At the trial A pleaded guilty, and B claimed to be tried. A goldsmith deposed that he had made the ring and wristlet found with B out of pieces of gold and silver given to him for the purpose by B. On this evidence, and on the confessions made by A, the Sessions Judge convicted B. On appeal to the High Court, held that, A and B not having been tried jointly for the same offence, the confession of A was inadmissible as evidence against B. There was, therefore, no evidence of the identity of the goods stolen at the dacoity with those found in B's possession, and the case against him failed. Conviction quashed.—EMPRESS v. BALA PATEL, I. L. R., 5 Bom. 63. [Westropp, C.J., and Melvill, J. April 7, 1880.]

IN considering whether the possession of stolen goods raises a presumption of dishonest receipt of stolen property, the attention of the jury should be drawn to the necessity of satisfying themselves that the possession is clearly traced to the accused. The fact of stolen property being found concealed in a man's house would be sufficient to raise a presumption that he knew the property to be stolen property, but it would not be sufficient to show that it had been acquired by dacoity—EMPRESS v. MALHARI, I. L. R., 7 Bom 731. [Melvill and Pinhey, JJ. Oct. 11, 1882.]

CERTAIN persons, who were not proved to be British subjects, were found in possession, in a native state, of property, the subject of a dacoity committed in British India. They were not proved to have taken part in the dacoity, and there was no evidence that they had received or retained any stolen property in British India. They were convicted of offences punishable under s. 412 of the Penal Code. Held that no offence was proved to have been committed within the jurisdiction of a British Court.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KIRPAL SINGH, I. L. R., 9 All. 523. [Edge, C.J., and Brodhurst, J. April 25, 1887.]

TEN persons were committed to a Sessions Court charged with offences under the Penal Code, ss. 395, 396; and some of them were also charged with offences under s. 412. One of the accused had made a confessional statement before the Magistrate, who recorded it, but did not make on it a memorandum to the effect stated in the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 164, and did not admit it in evidence for the reasons that the accused was produced from the custody of the police in which he had been detained for five days, and there was a proposal on the part of the police to treat him as an approver. It appeared that a perusal of the preliminary register would have shown that the accused were either guilty under s. 396, or not guilty under s. 395 at all. The accused were tried by the Sessions Judge with a jury. The confessional statement was not admitted in evidence. The jury found the accused not guilty of dacoity, but the Judge, disagreeing with the verdict, referred the case to the High Court under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 307. Held (1) that the procedure adopted by the Judge was wrong, and that he should have tried the accused with the aid of assessors under the Penal Code, s. 396; (2) that the Judge should have enquired, under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 533, whether the confessional statement had been duly made; and (3) that, under the circumstances, the High Court should determine on the evidence on record, after giving due weight to the opinions of the Judge and the jury, whether the accused were guilty under s. 395.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ANGA VALAYAN, I. L. R., 22 Mad. 15. [Collins, C.J., and Benson, J. Mar 31, April 14, 1898.]

A PRISONER cannot be tried at the same trial for receiving or retaining (s. 411, Penal Code), and habitually receiving or dealing in (s. 413), stolen property. The proper course is to try the accused, first, for the offences under s. 411, and if he is convicted, to try him under s 413, putting in evidence the previous convictions under s. 411, and proving the finding of the rest of the property in respect of which no separate charge under s. 411 could be made or tried by reason of the provisions of s. 453 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1872).—IN THE MATTER OF UTTOM KOONDOO: EMPRESS v. UTTOM KOONDOO, I. Assisting in concealment of stolen property.

SEVERAL stolen sacks of corn are made over to A and B, who know they are stolen property, for the purpose of concealing them. A and B therefore voluntarily assist each other to conceal the sacks at the bottom of a grain-pit. A and B may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under ss. 411 and 414 of the Penal Code.—CRIM. PRO. CODE (Act V. of 1898), s. 235, ill (f).

WHERE persons are charged with assisting in concealing or disposing of property which they know or have reason to believe to be stolen, the nature of the property, as well as the circumstances under which it was being made away with, must be taken into consideration.—REG. v. HARISHANKAR FAKIRBHAT, 2 Bom. H. C. R 130. [Couch and Warden, JJ. Mar. 16, 1865.]

A PRISONER, who, having received stolen property, concealed it in his house, could not be charged and convicted for two offences, viz., of having dishonestly received stolen property under s. 411 of the Penal Code, and of assisting in the concealment of stolen property under s. 414, which applies to persons whose dealing with the stolen property is not of such a kind as to make them guilty of dishonestly receiving or retaining it.—GOVT. v. MUSST. NOWLIA, 1 Agra H. C. R 9. [Pearson and Spankie, Offg. JJ. Aug 1, 1866.]

WHERE the petitioner was convicted of having voluntarily assisted in concealing stolen railway pins in a certain person's house and field with a view to having such innocent person punished as an offender, held that the Magistrate was right in convicting and punishing the petitioner for the two separate offences of fabricating false evidence for use in a stage of a judicial proceeding under s. 193 of the Penal Code, and of voluntarily assisting in concealing stolen property under s. 414, Penal Code.—EMPRESS v. RAMESHAR RAI, I. L. R., 1 All. 379. [Spankie, J. April 23, 1877.]

THE mere being in possession of stolen property dishonestly without a guilty knowledge is not a substantive offence. It is an offence under s. 411 to dishonestly receive stolen property, knowing or having reason to know the same to be stolen property, or to dishonestly retain it with the like knowledge. To support a conviction of dishonestly retaining stolen property, it ought to be shown that the accused, being in innocent possession of the property, acquired the knowledge that it was stolen, and thereafter retained it dishonestly. When a person is shown to stand in such a relation to stolen property as falls short of possession by him of such property, his manner of dealing with the property may warrant a charge of assisting in concealing or disposing of, or making away with, the property with a guilty knowledge, that is, a charge of an offence under s. 414.—KHONA v. EMPRESS, Panj. Rec., No. 31 of 1879.

THE word "believe" in s. 414 is much stronger than the word, "suspect," and involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property with which he was dealing was stolen property. It is not sufficient in such a case to show that the accused person was careless, or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient inquiry to ascertain whether it has been honestly acquired.—EMPRESS v. RANGO TIMAJI, I. L. R., 6 Bom. 402. [Melvill and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Dec. 21, 1880.] The following is a full report of the case:—

"This was a criminal application under the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court.

"On the 4th August 1880, the accused was convicted by C. Wiltshire, First-class Magistrate of Dharwar, of the offence of having voluntarily assisted in the disposal of stolen property under s. 414, and sentenced to suffer rigorous imprisonment for one year, and to pay a fine of Rs. 100, or, in default, to suffer imprisonment for six months more.

"On the 12th October 1878, a bullock was sold by one Rango, and purchased by Basalingapa, on the guarantee of the accused that it was the property of Rango. It was in evidence that the bullock belonged to one Maharudrapa, and that it had been stolen from him. In his examination before the Magistrate, the accused stated that he knew Rango, who had left his village some time ago during the famine, and gone to some other place to earn his livelihood; that Rango had told him (the accused) that he (Rango) had purchased the bullock for Rs. 16. From that statement of the accused, the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the accused knew, or had reason to believe, the bullock to be stolen property, inasmuch as he knew Rango to be so poor that the latter was obliged to leave his village in order to earn the means of his livelihood in some other place. The Magistrate accordingly convicted the accused of the offence charged. On appeal, the conviction and sentence were upheld by the Sessions Judge (A. C. Watt) of Dharwar on the 4th September 1880.

"The accused thereupon made an application to the High Court for the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction.

"The High Court (Melvill and West, JJ.) sent for the record and proceedings of the case.

"On the receipt of the record and papers, the application was heard by Melvill and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ.

"Manekshah Jehangirshah for the accused.—There is no evidence in the case to show that the accused knew or had reason to believe that the bullock was stolen property. There were no circumstances connected with the sale of the bullock which would induce any reasonable man to believe that it had been stolen. The lower Courts were wrong in inferring, from the acquaintance of the accused with Rango and his statement in his examination, any knowledge or belief on the part of the accused that the bullock was stolen property. The facts proved in the case do not constitute the offence of which the accused has been held guilty.

"The Hon. Rao Saheb V. N. Mandlik (Acting Government Pleader) appeared on behalf of the Crown.

"The following is the judgment of the Court delivered by—

"Melvill, J.—It lay upon the prosecution in this case to prove that the accused person knew or had reason to believe that the bullock was stolen property. It was not sufficient to show that the accused was careless, or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient inquiry to ascertain whether it had been honestly acquired. The word 'believe' in s. 414, Indian Penal Code, is a very much stronger word than 'suspect,' and it involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property with which he was dealing must be stolen property. The only circumstance alleged in the present case is that Rango, whose honesty the accused guaranteed, had left his village during the famine to earn a livelihood elsewhere. The Court find it impossible to hold that it is a legal inference from this single circumstance that the accused had reason to believe, or, in other words, that he had sufficient reason to feel convinced, that Rango could not, during so long an interval, have acquired sufficient means to purchase a bullock of the value of Rs. 16.

"On the ground, therefore, that there is no evidence on which a conviction could legally be based, the Court reversed the conviction and sentence, and ordered the fine, if paid, to be refunded."

B AND R, accused of offences under s. 414 of the Penal Code, gave information to the police which led to the discovery of the stolen property. This information was to the effect that the accused had stolen a cow and calf, and sold them to a particular person at a particular place. Held by the Full Bench (Mahmood, J., dissenting) that s. 27 of the Evidence Act is a proviso, not only to s. 26, but also to s. 25, and that, therefore, so much of the information given by the accused to the police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, as related distinctly to the facts thereby discovered, might be proved. Empress v. Kaurpala (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 225) dissented from. Per Mahmood, J., that s. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act is not a proviso to s. 25, but only to s. 26, and that, therefore, the statements in question were wholly inadmissible in evidence. Empress v. Pancham (I. L. R., 4 All. 198) referred to by Straight, Offg. C.J., and Mahmood, J. Per Straight, Offg. C.J., that, where a statement is being detailed by a constable as having been made by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a certain fact or certain facts, the strictest precision should be enjoined on the witness, so that there may be no room for mistake or misunderstanding. Observations by Straight, Offg. C.J., as to the mode in which the testimony of witnesses should be recorded in cases where two persons are being tried. Observations by Straight, Offg. C.J., and Duthoit, J., upon the nature of confessions by accused persons in India, and the circumstances in which such confessions are made.—EMPRESS v. BABU LAL, I. L. R., 6 All 509. [Straight, Offg. Of Cheating.

415. Whoever, by deceiving any person, fraudulently or dishonestly, induces the person so deceived to deliver any property to any person, or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or intentionally induces the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes, or is likely to cause, damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation, or property, is said to "cheat."

Explanation.—A dishonest concealment of facts is a deception within the meaning of this section.

A PERSON attempted to obtain his recruitment in the police of a district by giving certain information which he knew to be false to the District Superintendent of Police. Held that such person had not thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 177 or s. 188 of the Penal Code, of the offence of attempting to "cheat" within the meaning of s. 415 of the Code—EMPRESS v. DWARKA PRASAD, I. L. R., 6 All. 67. [Tyrrell, J. Sep. 25, 1884.]

A FALSELY represented himself to be B at a university examination, got a hall-ticket under B's name, and headed and signed answer-papers to questions with B's name. Held that A committed the offences of forgery and cheating by personation.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. APPASAMI, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 151. [Collins, C.J., and Parker, J. Jan. 18, 1889.]

TO constitute the offence of cheating under s. 415 of the Indian Penal Code, the damage or harm caused or likely to be caused to the person deceived in mind, body, reputation, or property, must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom. Where, therefore, certain persons were charged under s. 419 of the Indian Penal Code, one with personating another person before a Registrar, and the others with abetting such personation, and causing the Registrar to register a divorce, under the provisions of Bengal Act I. of 1876, with the wife of the personated person, and where the lower Courts convicted the accused under that section, holding that, as such registrations were voluntary and a source of gain to the Registrar, harm was caused to the Registrar in mind and reputation by registering false divorces, as well as by losing his fees in the future through persons being less likely to avail themselves of his services, and that, therefore, an offence under the section had been committed. Held that the possibilities contemplated by the lower Courts were too remote, that the facts did not constitute an offence under the section; and that the conviction must therefore be set aside.—MOJEY v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 17 Cal. 606. [Norris and Macpherson, JJ. Mar. 18, 1890.]

IN construing ss. 24 and 25 of the Penal Code, the primary and not the more remote intention of the accused must be looked at. Queen-Empress v. Girdhari Lal (I. L. R., 8 All. 653) cited. Under the rules of the Calcutta University a private student desiring to appear at the Entrance Examination is required to forward to the Registrar, with his application for permission to appear, a certificate to the effect, inter alia, that he is of good moral character, and has submitted himself to a test examination by, and furnished exercise to, the person signing the certificate sufficient in that person's opinion to show that his qualifications give a reasonable probability of his passing the examination. Such certificate has to be signed by one or other of the persons mentioned in the rules, amongst them being the head-master of a high school under public management. On such certificate being sent to the Registrar and the prescribed fee paid, that officer forwards a receipt to the candidate with his roll-number thereon, which is also an authority for him to appear at the examination, and enter the examination hall. A private student forwarded to the Registrar, with his application for permission to appear, a certificate in the prescribed form, purporting to be signed by the head-master of a high school, such signature, however, being, as the applicant well knew, a forgery. The Registrar, knowing at the time that the signature of the head-master was not genuine, sent to the applicant the receipt for his fee and the necessary authority allowing him to appear at the examination, and in due course the applicant appeared, took his seat in the hall at the desk allotted to him, and commenced the examination. Upon charges being preferred against the applicant of using as genuine a forged document (s. 471), and attempting to cheat (ss. 415 and 511), held that his primary object or intention was, by falsely inducing the Registrar to believe that the certificate was signed by the head-master of a Government school under public management, to be permitted to sit for the Entrance Examination, and that such intention could not be held to be "fraudulent" or "dishonest" within the meaning of ss. 25 and 24 of the Penal Code. Held, consequently, that the use of the forged document, though with the knowledge or belief that it was forged, was not fraudulent or dishonest, and that, as these are essential elements to offences under ss. 471 and 415 of the Penal Code, the accused had not committed either of the offences charged. Held, further, that the accused had not committed any offence under the Penal Code. Jan Mahomed v Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 10 Cal. 584) cited. In a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court, under s. 432 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as to whether, on the facts stated, any offence has been committed by an accused person, it lies on the prosecution to make out that an offence has been committed, and under the circumstances the prosecution must begin.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. HARADHAN alias RAKHAL DASS GHOSH, I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380. [Norris and Beverley, JJ. April 20, 1892.]

416. A person is said to "cheat by personation" if he cheats by pretending to be some other person, or by knowingly substituting one person for another, or representing that he or any other person is a person other than he or such other person really is.

CHARGE.—That you, on or about the , at , cheated the complainant by falsely pretending that a certain ornament was made of gold, and thereby deceived him, and dishonestly induced him to deliver to you the sum of Rs. 100 as the price of the said ornament, whereas the said ornament was not made of gold; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under, &c.

AN indictment for cheating under ss 415 and 420 of the Penal Code should state that the property obtained was the property of the person defrauded. A PASSENGER by railway travelling in a carriage of a higher class than that for which he has paid fare is not guilty of cheating under s. 417 of the Penal Code, but is indictable under the Railway Act (XVIII. of 1854).—REG. v. DAYABHAI PARJARAM, 1 Bom. To induce a son to pay his father's debts, by acting merely on his fear of consequences to his father, is not cheating. A CHAUKIDAR, who obtains money from another, either by fraudulent inducement or dishonestly, or by putting that person in fear of injury, is punishable under s. 417 of the Penal Code (cheating), or ss. 383, 384 (extortion), but not for criminal misappropriation of public money entrusted to him as a public servant.—QUEEN v. RAMNARAIN CHAUKIDAR, 3 W. THE mere issue of a hukumnama (to collect statistical information) by a police-officer is no legal ground for a conviction of abetment of cheating or of extortion.—QUEEN v. MEAJAN, 4 W. R. 5. [Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ. Sep. 9, 1865.]

IN a case of cheating, the prisoner was sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 300, two hundred of which was ordered to be paid to the prosecutor as compensation. The Sessions Judge, on appeal, confirmed the conviction. On receiving a petition from the prisoner, the High Court directed the Sessions Judge to submit the records of the case. Kemp, J., observed: "I find, on reading the evidence, that the petitioner and others held a joint-decree against the prosecutor for Rs. 194-10. Execution was sued out; the property of the prosecutor attached; and its sale was imminent, when prosecutor is said to have entered into an amicable arrangement with the petitioner, agreeing to pay Rs. 154, provided a petition was filed in Court, and the sale was stayed. The petitioner did not fulfil this promise. The sale took place, and a portion of the property was purchased by the petitioner's vakil. I hold that this is a simple breach of contract, for which the prosecutor, if so advised, has his civil remedy in a suit for damages. The prosecutor may have been led to expect that the petitioner would take measures to withdraw the execution-process, and to stay the sale; but there is no evidence whatever that, at the time the petitioner agreed to settle matters for Rs. 154, it was then his intention not to do what he led the prosecutor to expect that he would do. The main element which constitutes the offence of cheating is therefore wanting—namely, there was no intention then present to deceive, and thereby to induce the prosecutor to make conditional arrangements for an amicable adjustment of the decree. I would quash the conviction of the prisoner and direct his release."—IN THE MATTER OF SADOO CHURN PAL, 4 W. R. 13. [Loch, Kemp, and Seton-Karr, JJ. Sep. 18, 1865.]

THE mere taking money one day, and dishonestly running away without paying the next day, is not necessarily cheating. There must be an intention to deceive and defraud at the time of taking the money, and the subsequent conduct of the prisoner would only be evidence to show the previous dishonest intention.—QUEEN v. HEERAMUN HULWAYE, 5 W. WHERE two girls were bought by the prisoners on speculation, taken to a foreign and distant district, palmed off as women of a much higher caste than they really were, and married to two Rajputs, after receiving the usual bonus, held that the prisoners could not be convicted under s. 373 of the Penal Code, but of cheating and false personation under ss. 415 and 416.—QUEEN v. DABEE SINGH, 7 W. R. 55. [Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ. April 8, 1867.]

ACCUSED was found guilty of having endeavoured to evade payment of a railway-fare, by the production of an old pass, altered as to date and number of persons. Held that, although Act XVIII. of 1854 provides for the punishment of any attempt to evade payment of fare, the accused was, in the present instance, rightly convicted, not under that Act, but under the Penal Code, of an attempt to cheat, because there were distinct acts constituting cheating which accompanied such evasion. — CROWN v. GUNPUT, Panj. Rec., No. 6 of 1868.

WHERE the accused secretly entered an exhibition-building without having purchased a ticket, and was there apprehended, it was held that such act did not amount to the offence of cheating under s. 415 of the Penal Code. A PERSON hiring certain property for use at a wedding, paying a portion of the hire, and giving a written promise to pay the balance of the hire, and to restore the property after the wedding, he being well aware that there was to be no wedding, and intending, when he got the property, to apply for its attachment in a civil suit in respect of an alleged claim, is guilty of cheating.—QUEEN v. KADIR BUX, 3 N.-W. WHERE the High Court was of opinion (in a case in which no appeal lay to it) that the facts found by the Court that tried the prisoners, and the Court of appeal from such Court, did not constitute the offence of cheating, of which the prisoners had been convicted, the High Court, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, reversed the conviction and sentence. To justify a conviction for the offence of cheating, there must be some evidence of an intention to cheat at the time when the promise (the omission to perform which completes the offence of cheating) is made.—REG. v. HARGOVANDAS AND HARKISSANDAS, 9 Bom. H. C. R. 448. [Cibbs and Melvill, JJ. Jan. 25, 1872.]

WHERE the accused were convicted of cheating under s. 415, Penal Code—the one of selling watered milk, and the other an inferior sort of sweetmeats—they were acquitted; the former, because the purchaser knew, and was told, the milk was watered, and so there was no deception; and the latter, on the ground that the purchaser might have tasted the sweetmeats before buying, and the sweetmeats were not composed of any material injurious to health.—QUEEN v. KALEE MODOCK, 18 W. R. 61. [Glover and Pontifex, JJ. Nov. 8, 1872.]

A MISREPRESENTATION by false description of one's position in life falls under the heading of cheating, and not under that of forgery. Where, therefore, a document purported to have been signed by "G L, patwari," and it was said that it was signed by G L, but at a time when G L was not a patwari, it was held that the document was not a forgery within s. 464 of the Penal Code.—JOY KURN SINGH v. MAN PATUCK, 21 W. A PERSON who purchased rice from a famine relief officer at a certain rate (16 seers to the rupee), on condition that he should sell it at a seer the rupee less, was convicted of cheating under s. 420, Penal Code, because he did not sell it at the rate agreed on, but at 12 seers to the rupee. Held that as, within the meaning of ss. 23 and 24, Penal Code, there had been no wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one, no offence had been committed under s. 415, Penal Code. —REG. v. LAL MAHOMED, 22 W. THE accused purchased an agreement-stamp from a licensed vendor, representing himself to be one Hema. The vendor entered Hema's name in the register as purchaser Held that a charge of cheating could not be sustained. Per Plowden, J.—Though the accused, by personating Hema, deceived the stamp-vendor, and induced him to make an incorrect entry in his register, which act was likely to cause damage to the stamp-vendor, it was not shown that the accused had any fraudulent design upon the vendor, and it was not enough if his intention was to use the stamp to the injury of Hema. Per Lindsay, J.—There was a deception within s. 415, but the act of selling a stamp to one personating another could not possibly cause damage to a bond-fide vendor in any way, and the mere fact of the accused personating Hema did not induce the vendor to sell the stamp.—GIRDHAREE v. CROWN, Panj. Rec., No. 16 of 1876.

IN a prosecution for an attempt to cheat, under ss. 417-511 of the Penal Code, the accused was charged and convicted of having, at the central octroi-office, made false representations as to the contents of certain kuppas (skin vessels), the object of which was to obtain a certificate, entitling him to obtain a refund of octroi-duty. Prior to granting him the certificate, the octroi-officers examined the contents of the kuppas, and found that the representations of the accused regarding them were untrue. In consequence of this discovery no certificate was given to him, and he was charged and convicted as above mentioned. The procedure necessary for obtaining a refund of octroi-duty was that the central office, on satisfying itself that the articles produced were of the nature stated, would grant a certificate, which certificate would have to be indorsed by the outpost clerk, when he passed the goods (on which refund was claimed) out of the town, and the owner would have to take back the certificate so indorsed to the central office, and present it to be cashed. Held that, even assuming the accused to have falsely represented the contents of the kuppas as alleged, he had not completed an attempt to cheat, but had only made preparation for cheating, and that the conviction must therefore be set aside.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DHUNDI, I. L. R., 8 All. 304 [Brodhurst, J. May 8, 1886]

A PERSON who induced a farmer to ferry him over the river by promise of payment, and then refused to pay the toll, was held to be guilty of cheating under s. 417.—GOVT. v. LUCHMEE NARAIN SINGH, 2 N. A., N.-W. P., Pt. IV., 431.

THE offence of cheating must, like that of extortion, be committed by the wrongful obtaining of a consent The difference is, that the extortioner obtains the consent by intimidation, and the cheat by deception.—INDIAN LAW COMMISSIONERS' REPORT, Note N, 112.

PRISONER was requested to make an entry in a book of account belonging to the complainant to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of accounts; instead of making this entry as requested, prisoner entered in a language not known to complainant that this sum had been paid to complainant. He was convicted of forgery under s. 465 of the Penal Code. Held that the offence was not forgery, but an attempt to cheat.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KUNJU NAYAR, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 114. [Muttusami Ayyar and Shephard, JJ. Sep. 9, 20, 1888.]

A MAN may be guilty of an attempt to cheat, although the person he attempts to cheat is forewarned, and is, therefore, not cheated. R. v. Hensler (11 Cox C. C. 570) referred to. M wrote a letter to the Currency Office at Calcutta, enclosing the halves of two Government currency-notes, stating that the other halves were lost, and inquiring what steps should be taken for the recovery of the value of the notes. The Currency Office having, upon inquiry, discovered that the amount of the notes had been paid to the holder of the other halves, and that the notes had been withdrawn from circulation and cancelled, sent M the usual form of claim to be filled up and returned to it. It appeared from the evidence that the Currency Office never contemplated paying M in respect of the notes. The form was filled up and signed by M, and returned by him to the Currency Office Held that, although there was no intention on the part of the Currency Office to pay the amount of the notes, M was guilty of an attempt to cheat.—GOVT. OF BENGAL v. UMESH CHUNDER MITTER, I. L. R., 16 Cal. 310 [Macpherson and Trevelyan, JJ. Nov. 6, 1888.]

THE following important judgment was delivered by the High Court, Calcutta, in a case of cheating, in which a Bench of Honorary Magistrates, Calcutta, convicted the accused :—

"The petitioner has been convicted under s. 420 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for one month by a Bench of Presidency Magistrates in Calcutta The charge against him was that he falsely represented to Munraj that he would pay the value of three tins of ghee when they would be taken to his house, and thereby he fraudulently induced the said Munraj to deliver to him the said three tins; that Munraj would not have agreed to part with the said tins had he not been deceived in the way mentioned above.

2. The evidence given in this case shows that the petitioner called at the shop of Munraj, and settled the price of three tins of ghee. He then told Munraj, to send the three tins of ghee to his house, promising to pay the price thereof to a servant of the shop, if he would accompany him Munraj agreed to this, and the tins were sent through a cooly to the house of the petitioner, and he instructed his brother, an employè in the shop, to go with the petitioner to receive the promised payment The employè of the shop, on arriving at the petitioner's house, was told to wait for an hour. After that space of time had elapsed, the petitioner told him to come again in the night, when he would be paid. This servant of the shop called again at the petitioner's house in the night, but did not find him at home. The owner and this servant went again to that house in the same night, but did not find the petitioner there. Thereupon a complaint was lodged in the local thana.

3. An application was made to this Court by the petitioner for revision of the finding and the sentence substantially on two grounds: First, that the Bench of Magistrates exercised their discretion improperly in refusing to adjourn the case to enable the petitioner to adduce evidence in support of his defence. Secondly, that neither is there a finding in the judgment of the Bench of Magistrates that he deceived Munraj by making any false representation, nor is the evidence sufficient to support such conclusion.

4 As regards the first ground, we are of opinion, after perusing the affidavit filed by the petitioner, and the letter (4) of explanation submitted by the Bench of Magistrates, that there was no improper exercise of discretion on their part in refusing the application for adjournment. But, considering the reasons recorded by the Bench of Magistrates in their judgment, which they were bound to record under clause (i) of s. 370, C. P Code, we think that they are not sufficient to support a conviction under s. 420. The bare fact of a person taking delivery of goods, promising to pay cash, and ultimately failing to keep his promise, would not amount to cheating. It must be shown, in the first place, that the representation that the representer would pay the value of goods sold to him in cash was made falsely, i e., the representer knew that either he did not mean to pay in cash, or that he would not be able to pay in cash. This fact must be established in order to show that the representation is false In the next place, it must be shown in the evidence that the seller was deceived by the false representation, that is to say, that he would not have delivered the goods if he disbelieved the representation in question

5. These two important facts are not found in the judgment of the Bench of Magistrates; and, as we, upon the evidence adduced in this case, are unable to say that, without any reasonable doubt, these two facts are true, the omission of the Bench of Magistrates referred to above warrants us in setting aside the conviction. We accordingly set it aside. As the petitioner was enlarged on bail pending the hearing of this rule, the only further order necessary is that the bail-bond be declared as discharged.—JATHARAM v. MUNRAJ (unreported). [Mitter and Trevelyan, JJ. Feb. 26, 1889.]

ON the 5th May 1894 C applied in writing, under the provisions of s. 133 of Act III. of 1884, to a municipality for a license to be granted to him in respect of two carriages and six ponies, and filled up and signed the usual statement required by the section. The sum payable in respect of the license was received, and the license asked for by C was granted to him, and at the same time the statement was sent to an overseer of the municipality for verification. On the 7th May the overseer reported that C had in his possession eight ponies and one horse. On the 8th May the chairman of the municipality passed an order directing C to be prosecuted for making a false statement in the schedule to his statement regarding the number of animals in respect of which he applied for the license. On the 9th May C presented a petition asking that the tax on the three animals might be received, and stating that he did not think he was liable to take out a license for them, as they were old and diseased, and unfit for work. On the 13th May the chairman passed an order on this application that he had no power to interfere, as the prosecution of C had already been ordered. Meanwhile, on the 9th May, a paper was sent to the Magistrate headed "List of municipal cases under Act III of 1884," in which C appeared as charged with an offence under s. 199 of the Penal Code for "filing a false statement, that is to say, putting down in the schedule six ponies only instead of eight ponies and one horse." On the 12th May the Deputy Magistrate directed a summons to issue to C, returnable on the 23rd. On the 18th May the District Magistrate passed an order to the effect that the municipality could not institute a prosecution under the Penal Code, but that the Deputy Magistrate had power to do so, and that he should consider the provisions of ss. 182 and 417, read with 511 of the Penal Code, as applicable to the facts of the case. On the 19th May the summons was issued, and the case was heard on the 23rd and 24th May and 19th June, on which date formal charges under ss. 199, 182, and 417-51 of the Penal Code were framed. Thereafter the hearing proceeded till the 16th July, when, on an application to the High Court, the proceedings were stayed, and a rule issued to show cause why they should not be quashed. It was contended at the hearing of the rule that the High Court should not interfere at that stage of the proceedings under its revisional jurisdiction. Held that the High Court has power to interfere at any stage of a case, and that, when it is brought to its notice that a person has been subjected as in this case, for over two months, to the harassment of an illegal prosecution, it is its bounden duty to interfere. Held, further, that it was quite clear that the municipality had no power to institute the proceedings, and that, having regard to the provisions of s. 191 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it did not appear that the Deputy Magistrate, having no private complainant before him, had power of his own motion to institute them, but that, whether he had such power or not, the admitted facts of the case did not in law constitute any of the offences with which C was charged, and that the whole proceedings must be quashed. The Municipal Act is intended to be complete in itself as regards offences committed against the Municipal Commissioners, and there is no indication of any intention to render a delinquent also liable to punishment under the Penal Code. There is no penalty in the Act attached to the omission to make a return under s. 133, and no words in the Act constituting the making a false return a penal offence, and, as there are no such words in the Act as are necessary to make the provisions of the Penal Code applicable, the Court has no power to import them. The Municipal Commissioners in such a case have the remedy provided by the Act itself.—CHANDI PERSHAD v. ABDUR RAHMAN, I. L. R., 22 Cal 131. [Petheram, C.J., and Beverley, J. Aug. 13, 1894.]

ENGLISH CASES ON CHEATING.

WHEREVER a person fraudulently represents as an existing fact that which is not an existing fact, and so gets money, &c., that is an offence within the Act.—R. v. WOOLLEY, 1 Den. 559; 3 C. and K. 98; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 165.

WHERE a carrier, falsely pretending that he had carried certain goods to A B, demanded, and thereupon obtained from the consignor, sixteen shillings for the carriage of them, it was holden to be within the Statute.—R. v. COLEMAN, 2 East, P. C. 672. See R. v. Airey, 2 East, 30.

A FOREMAN represented to his master that a certain sum was due to the workmen under him, and obtained a cheque for the amount stated to be due. The amount of the cheque exceeded by seven shillings the amount really due to the workmen. The foreman paid the workmen, but kept the surplus seven shillings to himself. He was held to have been guilty of obtaining the cheque under false pretences.—R. v. LEONARD, 1 Den. 303; 2 C. and K. 514.

THE essence of the offence of cheating is deceit. Thus, where a workman stated that he had done more work than he really had, and requested payment for the work he stated he had done, and his master, knowing that it was a false over-charge, and wishing to entrap him, paid him the amount demanded, it was held that the workman could not be indicted for obtaining money under false pretences, as it was not the falsehood which induced his master to part with the money. —R. v. MILLS, Dears. and B. 205, 20 L. J. (M. C.) 79.

THE defendant, on entering the service of a railway company, signed a book of rules, a copy of which was given to him. One of the rules was: "No servant of the Company shall be entitled to claim payment of any wages due to him on leaving the Company's service until he shall have delivered up his uniform clothing.' On leaving the service, the defendant knowingly and fraudulently delivered up to an officer of the Company, as part of his own uniform, a great-coat belonging to a fellow servant, and so obtained the wages due to him. It was held that he was properly convicted of obtaining by false pretences the money so paid to him as wages. —REG. v. BULL, 13 Cox. 608 (C. C. R).

WHERE the defendant falsely pretended to J N that he was entrusted by the Duke de Lauzan to take some horses from Ireland to London for him, and that he had been detained so long by contrary winds that his money was all spent, by means of which representation he induced J N to advance him money, this was holden to be within the Act. —R. v. VILLENEUVE, 2 East. P. C. 830.

So, where the defendant, who had actually taken premises, and was doing a small business in coal, obtained forty coal-bags on credit from the prosecutor by falsely pretending that he had a lot of trucks of coal at a railway-station on demurrage, and that he required forty coal-bags, this was held to be a false pretence within the Statute.—R. v. WILLOT, 12 Cox. 68 (C. C. R).

So, where the defendants, falsely pretending that they had made a bet with A B that one of them should run ten miles within an hour, prevailed upon J N to join them in the bet, and obtained from him twenty guineas as his share in it, the Judges held this to be within the Statute, notwithstanding the pretence was probably one against which common prudence might have guarded.—YOUNG v. R., 3 T. R. 98.

WHERE an attorney, who had appeared for J S, who was fined 2*l.* on a summary conviction, called on the wife of J S, and told her that he had been with J N, who was fined 2*l.* for a like offence, to Mr. B and Mr. L, and that he had prevailed on Mr. B and Mr. L to take 1*l.* instead of 2*l.*, and that, if she would give him 1*l.*, he would go and do the same for her; and she thereupon gave him a sovereign, and afterwards paid him for his trouble; and it was proved that the attorney never applied to Mr. B or Mr. L respecting either of the fines, and that both were afterwards paid in full: it was held that the attorney was guilty of obtaining money by false pretences.—R. v. ASTERLEY, 7 C. and P. 191.

WHEN a servant, who had authority to buy goods, and was to be repaid on producing a ticket containing a statement of the purchase, produced such a ticket, and obtained the amount stated therein, no purchase having, in fact, been made, this was held to be not larceny, but obtaining money by false pretences.—R. v. BARNES, 2 Din. 59; 20 L. J. (M.C) 34. And see R. v. Prince, 38 L. J. (M.C.) 8; L. R., 1 C. C. R. 150.

WHERE the foreman of a manufacturer, who was in the habit of receiving from his master money to pay the workmen, obtained from him, by means of false written accounts of the wages earned by the men, more than the men had earned or he had paid them, the Judges held it to be within the Act; they said that all cases where the false pretence creates the credit are within the Statute; and here the defendant would not have obtained the excess above what was really due to the workmen were it not for the false account he had delivered to his master.—R. v. WITCHELL, 2 East, P. C. 830.

IT was the prisoner's duty to ascertain daily the amount of dock-dues payable by his master, and, having ascertained it, to apply to his master's cashier for the amount, and then to pay it in discharge of the dues. On one occasion, by representing falsely to the cashier that the amount was larger than it really was, as he knew, the prisoner obtained from the cashier the sum he stated to be, and then paid the real amount due, and appropriated the difference to his own use. This was held to be not larceny, but obtaining money by false pretences.—R. v. THOMPSON, L. and C. 233; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 57. It is difficult to distinguish the essential facts of this case from those in R. v. Cooke, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 295; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 68, where the prisoner was held to be guilty of larceny. R. v. Thompson was cited and observed upon in R. v. Cooke, although not overruled, Bovill, C.J., saying that the decision in R. v. Thompson went entirely on the question whether there was a larceny in the obtaining of the money in the first instance, and that the point was not considered whether the subsequent misappropriation was larceny.

So, where the defendant obtained goods by falsely stating that he wanted them for J S, who lived at N, and was a person whom he would trust with 1,000*l.*, and who went out to New Orleans twice a year to take goods to his sons, this was held to be a sufficient false pretence within the Statute.—R v. ARCHER, Dears, 449.

So, where the false pretence alleged was, that a person who lived in a large house down the street, and had had a daughter married some time back, had been to him (the defendant) about some carpet, and had asked him to procure a piece of carpet, whereby the defendant obtained from the prosecutor twenty yards of carpet: this was held sufficient.—R. v. BURNSIDES, Bell 282, 30 L. J. (M C.) 42

OBTAINING as a loan from the drawer of a bill accepted by the prisoner, and negotiated by the drawer part of the amount, for the purpose of paying the bill, under the false pretence that the prisoner was prepared with the residue of the amount, was holden to be an offence within the Statute, the prisoner being shown not to be prepared, and not intending so to apply the money.—R v. CROSSBY, 2 M and Rob 17.

IN like manner, where the defendant obtained goods by a false statement that a bill, drawn on and accepted by himself, and purporting to be payable at the London and Westminster Bank, which he gave the prosecutor for the price of the goods would be paid at the bank the next day, and that he had made arrangements for it, this was held a false pretence within the Act.—R v. HUGHES 1 F and F. 355

WHERE the Secretary of an Odd Fellows' Lodge told a member that he owed the Lodge 13*s.* 6*d.*, and thereby obtained that sum from him fraudulently, whereas the member owed 2*s.* 2*d* only, he was held to be rightly convicted of obtaining money by false pretences.—R v. WOOLLEY, 1 Dn. 559, 3 C. and K 98; 19 L J (M. C.) 165.

A CREDITOR who wilfully and fraudulently represents to a third person who holds moneys of his debtor that a larger sum is due to him from the debtor than is really the case, and thus obtains from such third person payment of the larger sum, is guilty of a false pretence within the Statute, and that, too, although he may have obtained a judgment by default, not set aside, against his debtor for the larger sum.—R. v. TAYLOR, 15 Cox. 265, 268.

OBTAINING money by means of false statements of the name and circumstances of the defendant or any other person, in a begging letter, is within the Statute.—R. v. JONES, 1 Den. 551; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 162.

WHERE the defendant obtained money from a woman under the threat of an action for breach of promise of marriage, he being, in fact, a married man already, an indictment laying as the false pretence that he was entitled to maintain an action against her for the breach of promise, was held by Maule, J., to be good, for that this was a false pretence within the Statute.—R. v. COPELAND, C. and Mar 516.

AN indictment charging the prisoner with obtaining money from a wife whose husband had run away, by falsely pretending to her that she, the prisoner, had power to bring him back, is good and sufficiently states an indictable offence.—R. v. GILES, L. and C. 502, 34 L. J. (M C.) 50.

WHERE the defendant pretended that he was carrying on an extensive business as a surveyor and house-agent, and thereby induced the prosecutor to deposit with him 25*l* as a security for his (the prosecutor's) fidelity as a clerk, whereas the defendant was not carrying on any business as a surveyor or house-agent, this was held to be a false pretence within the Statute.—R. v CRABB, 11 Cox. 85 (C C R.) But where the defendant pretended (1) that he was doing a good business, and (2) that he had recently sold a good business, and thereby induced the prosecutor to deposit with him 50*l* as a security for the prosecutor's fidelity as an assistant, whereas, in truth, defendant's business was worthless, and the defendant was a bankrupt, it was held that neither of the false pretences alleged came within the Statute. As to the first pretence, it was a mere exaggerated representation of value upon which, though fraudulently, an indictment would not lie, and as to the second, it was too remote. R v Williamson, 11 Cox. 328, per Byles, J. It will be noticed that, in the former of these two cases, there was no existing business at all, whereas, in the latter, there appears to have been an existing, although a worthless, business. See also R. v. Watson, Dears, and B. 348; 27 L J. (M C.) 18, in which, although it was not necessary to decide the point, Erle, J, said: "I wish not to be supposed to assent to the proposition that an indictment [for false pretences] can be sustained by proof of mere exaggeration of the prosperity of a business, where there is an original business. It is difficult to draw a decided line, but I think it has been decided that exaggerated praise does not render a person liable within the Statute." As to the general doctrine that exaggerated praise does not render a prisoner liable within the Statute and the limitation of that doctrine, see R v. Bryan and other cases, post.

WHERE the prisoner sold to the prosecutor a reversionary interest which he had previously sold to another, and the prosecutor took a regular assignment of it, with the usual covenants for title, Littledale, J., ruled that he could not be convicted for obtaining money by false pretences, for, if this were within the Statute, every breach of warranty or false assertion at the time of a bargain might be treated as such, and the party be transported.—R. v. CODRINGTON, 1 C. and P., 661. In R. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; Dav. and M. 208, that decision was much questioned; and it was strongly intimated that the execution of a contract between the same parties does not secure from punishment the obtaining of money under false pretences in conformity with that contract. And in R. v. Abbott, 1 Den. 173; 2 C. and K. 630, it was decided unanimously by the Judges, upon a case reserved, that the law was so. And see also R. v. Burgon, Dears and B. 11, 25 L. J. (M. C.) 105, and R. v. Goss, Bell 208, 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86, in which, upon the authority of R. v. Abbott, the same law was laid down.

IN a recent case, R. v. Meakin, 11 Cox 270 (C. C. R.), where the defendant induced the prosecutor to lend him money on a bill-of-sale of furniture, and the joint and several promissory note of the defendant and another person, by representing that the furniture was unincumbered, whereas the defendant had previously given a bill-of-sale of the same furniture to another person, although not to its full value, this was held to be an indictable false pretence. Where the indictment charged that the defendant, having in his possession a certain weight of twenty-eight pounds, falsely pretended to C that a quantity of coals, which he delivered to C, weighed sixteen hundred weight (meaning 1,792 pounds weight), and were worth 1*l.*, and that the weight was fifty-six pounds, by means of which he obtained a sovereign from C with intent to defraud him of part thereof, to wit, 10*s.*; whereas the coals did not weigh 1,792 pounds, and were not worth 1*l.*, and whereas the weight was not fifty-six pounds, and whereas the coals were of the weight of 896 pounds only, and were not worth more than 10*s.*, and whereas the weight was twenty-eight pounds only, the Judges (according to the report) held a conviction on the indictment wrong, on the ground that all the pretences, except that relating to the weight, were mere false affirmations, and that, as to the weight, there was no allegation to connect the sale of the coals with the use of the weight. —R. v. REED, 7 C. and P. 848. It was stated by Lord Denman, C. J., in Hamilton v. R., 29 B. 271, that this case of R. v. Reed was misreported, and that no such decision was given, but His Lordship seems to have been mistaken in this, see Dears and B. 35, note (e). But, at all events, the case of R. v. Reed can no longer be considered to be law since the decision in R v. Sherwood, Dears. and B. 251, 26 L. J. (M. C.) 81. There the defendant, having contracted to sell and deliver to the prosecutrix a load of coals at 7*d.* per cwt. delivered to her a load of coals which he knew weighed only 14 cwt., but which he stated to her contained 18 cwt., and produced a ticket, showing 18 cwt. to be the weight, which he said he had himself made out when the coals were weighed, and she thereupon paid him the price as for 18 cwt., which was 2*s.* 4*d.*, more than was really due, and it was held that the defendant was indictable for obtaining the 2*s.* 4*d* by false pretences. This decision was approved and followed in R. v. Lee, L. and C. 418; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 129.

SO, where the prosecutor bought of the defendant and paid him for a quantity of coal on a false representation by him that there were 15 cwt., whereas, in fact, there were only 8 cwt., but so packed in the cart as to have the appearance of a larger quantity, this was held to be an indictable false pretence.—R. v. RAGG, Bell 214, 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86. See also R. v. Eagleton, Dears. 515; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 158.

A PERSON who obtains from a pawnbroker upon an article which he falsely represents to be silver, a greater advance than would otherwise have been made, is guilty of a false pretence within the Statute, although the pawnbroker has the opportunity of testing the article at the time.—R. v. BALL, C. and Mar. 249; see R. v. ROEBUCK, Dears. and B. 24; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 101; R. v. Goss, Bell 208; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 86.

AND a false representation that a stamp on a watch is the hall-mark of the Goldsmiths' Company, and that the number 18 put thereon indicates that it is made of eighteen-carat gold, is a false pretence, and is not the less so because accompanied by the representation that the watch is a gold one, and some gold is proved to have been contained in its composition.—R. v. SUTER, 10 Cox. 577.

BUT a false representation of what is mere matter of opinion, falling within the category of untrue praise in the course of a contract for sale, is not indictable. The defendant was convicted on an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, the pretences charged being that certain spoons were of the best quality; that they were equal to Elkington's A. (meaning spoons made by Messrs. Elkington, and stamped by them with the letter A); that the foundations were of the best material; and that they had as much silver on them as Elkington's A. The representations were made to a pawnbroker for the purpose of obtaining, and the defendant did thereby obtain, advances of money on the spoons, which were, in fact, of inferior quality, and were of less value than the money advanced on them, and the pawnbroker stated that he was induced, by the defendant's misrepresentations alone to advance the money, and that, if he had known the real quality of the spoons, he would have advanced no money on them. The jury found the defendant guilty of fraudulently and falsely representing that the spoons had as much silver on them as Elkington's A, and that the foundations were of the best material &c., and that he thereby obtained the money. It was nevertheless held by a large majority of the Judges that the conviction could not be sustained —R. v. BRYAN, Dears and B 265, 26 L. J. (M C) 84. See also R. v. Levine, Cox. 374. The decision in R. v. Bryan is said by Erle, C J., to have been given "upon the sound principle, that indefinite praise upon a matter of indefinite opinion cannot be made the ground of an indictment for false pretences." R. v. Goss, 29 L J (M. C.) 90: and by Byles, J., to have been governed by the maxim, Simplex commendatio non obligat.— R. v. ARDLEY, L. R. 1. C. C. R. 306; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 88.

BUT a false representation respecting an alleged matter of definite fact knowingly made is a false pretence within the statute, and that, too, although the representation is merely as to the quality of goods sold or pledged. Therefore, where the defendant induced the prosecutor to purchase a chain from him by fraudulently representing that it was fifteen-carat gold, when, in fact, it was only of a quality a trifle better than six carats, knowing at the time that he was falsely representing the quality of the chain as fifteen-carat gold, it was held that the statement, that the chain was fifteen-carat gold, not being mere exaggerated praise, nor relating to a mere matter of opinion, but a statement as to a specific fact within the defendant's knowledge, was a sufficient false pretence to sustain an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences.—R. v. ARDLEY, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 301; 40 L. J. (M. C) 85.

AND where the defendants induced a purchaser to buy and pay for a cheese of a very inferior description by the wilfully false statement that a taster of a different and superior cheese produced as a sample had formed part of and been taken out of the cheese sold, it was held that he might be convicted of obtaining money by false pretences —R. v. GOSS, Bell, 208; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 90.

So, where the defendant sold spurious blacking as "Everett's Blacking," he was held to be indictable for the false pretence. —R. v. DUNDAS, 6 Cox. 380.

WHERE the defendant falsely represented to the prosecutrix that certain packages which he sold to her contained good tea, whereas, in fact, each package contained a mixture of which only one-fourth part was tea, the remaining three-fourths consisting of sand and other articles unfit for food or drink, and the jury found that the defendant knew the real nature of the contents of the packages, that it was not tea, but a mixture of articles unfit for drink, and that he designedly falsely pretended that it was good tea with intent to defraud, and the defendant was convicted, it was held that the conviction was right.—R. v. FOSTER, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 301, 40 L. J. (M. C.) 128.

THE Assistant Judge of the Middlesex Sessions having directed a jury that the decisions of the Judges were to the effect that a mere representation of an article as gold, however small the portion of gold it contained, amounted only to an exaggeration of its quality, and would not support a criminal charge, Willes, J., said that he must except to this direction —R. v. SUTER, 10 Cox 577, 578.

THE defendant and two other persons entered into articles of partnership, by the terms of which the profits were to be divided equally among them. By a subsequent verbal arrangement the defendant was to act as agent for the sale of the partnership-goods, and was to receive a commission on all orders obtained by him, which commission was to be paid out of the partnership-funds before any division of profits was made. The defendant, by falsely pretending that he had obtained some orders, got his partners to pay him a sum for commission. It was held that he was not indictable for false pretences, his charges were payable out of the partnership-funds, and his false statement was a misrepresentation concerning a partnership matter, and would have to be investigated, and the sum paid duly considered, in taking the partnership-accounts, in order to ascertain the profits.—R. v. EVANS, L. and C. 252; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 38.

IT is not necessary that the pretence should be in word; the conduct and acts of the party will be sufficient, without any verbal representation —R. v. HUNTER; R. v. CARTER, 10 COX. 642, 648.

THUS, if a person obtain goods from another upon giving him in payment his cheque upon a banker, with whom, in fact, he has no account, this (although not indictable as a fraud at common law, R. v. Lara, 6 T. R. 565; see R. v. Flint, R. and R. 460) is a false pretence within the meaning of the Act. —R. v. JACKSON, 3 Camp. 370.

BUT, if the defendant, at the time he gives the cheque, believes, although he has no account at the bankers, that the cheque will be paid on presentation, he cannot be convicted of a false pretence.—R. v. WALNE, 11 Cox. 647 (C. C. R.).

THUS, where the defendant bought a mare and paid for her on Thursday by a cheque drawn on a banker with whom he had no account, but told the prosecutor not to present the cheque until Saturday, to which the prosecutor assented, but nevertheless did present it on Thursday, when it was dishonoured, and it appeared from the evidence that the defendant was on Thursday in daily expectation of having money paid to him which would have enabled him to place the banker in funds to meet the cheque on Saturday, this was held to be no false pretence. Id. But a man who makes and gives a cheque for the amount of goods purchased in a ready-money transaction makes a representation that the cheque is a good and valid order for the amount inserted in it; and if such person has only a colourable account at the bank on which the cheque is drawn without available assets to meet it, and has no authority to overdraw, and knows that the cheque will be dishonoured on presentation, and intends to defraud, he may be convicted of obtaining such goods by such false pretence.—R. v. HAZELTON, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 134; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 11.

WHERE the prisoner was charged with falsely pretending that a post-dated cheque, drawn by himself, was a good and genuine order for 25*l.*, and of the value of 25*l.*, whereby he obtained a watch and chain; and the jury found that, before the completion of the sale and delivery of the watch by the prosecutor to the prisoner, he represented to the prosecutor that he had an account with the bankers on whom the cheque was drawn, and that he had a right to draw the cheque though he postponed the date for his own convenience, all which was false; and that he represented that the cheque would be paid on or after the day of the date, but that he had no reasonable ground to believe that it would be paid, and that he had no funds to pay it; he was held to be properly convicted.—R. v. PARKER, 2 Mood. C. C. 1; 7 C and P. 825.

BUT when the indictment stated that the defendant falsely pretended to A B that he was a captain in the East India Company's service, and that a certain promissory note, which he then delivered to A B, was a valuable security for 21*l.*, by means of which false pretences he fraudulently obtained from A B 8*l.* 15*s*; whereas the defendant was not a captain, &c., and the note was not a valuable security, &c.; it was holden, on error, that, as it did not appear that the note was the defendant's own promissory note, or that he knew it to be worthless, there was no sufficient false pretence in that respect; and as the two pretences were to be taken together, that the indictment was bad.—R. v. WICKHAM, 10 A. and E. 34; 2 Per and D. 333; 8 L. J. (M C) 87. See also R. v. Philpotts, 1 C and K. 112.

WHERE the prisoner passed the note of a country bank which he knew had stopped payment, it appearing that one of the partners was solvent, Gaselee, J., held that he could not be convicted for obtaining money under false pretences.—R. v. SPENCER, 3 C. and P. 420.

IT would seem, however, that an indictment which charged that the defendant obtained money by falsely pretending that a certain piece of paper was a bank-note then current, and of the value for which it purported to be made, would be supported by evidence that it was the note of a bank which had stopped payment, and was no longer in existence, and that it had paid only a small dividend, and that these facts were known to the defendant.—R. v. EVANS, Bell 187; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 20. But, in that case, an allegation that the note was of no value whatever was held not to be supported by the above evidence.

WHERE an indictment charged the defendant with obtaining money, by falsely pretending that a piece of paper was a bank-note then current, and of the full value of 5*l.*, and the evidence was that the piece of paper was the note of a bank which had stopped payment forty years before, and had not re-opened and that the defendant knew it, this evidence was held sufficient to justify a conviction, although it appeared from the cross-examination of a witness for the prosecution that the bank note had been made bankrupt, and the bankruptcy proceedings were not produced, and there was no evidence as to what dividend, if any, had been paid.—R v. DOWEY, 37 L. J. (M. C.) 52.

WHERE a man obtained goods and money for a forged note of hand for ten shillings and six pence, the Judges held it to be a false pretence within the Act.—R. v. FREETH, R. and R. 127.

IN another case, however, where the prisoner obtained goods by means of a forged order, Taunton, J., held that he could not be indicted for obtaining them by false pretences, but should have been indicted for forgery, R. v Evans, 5 C and P. 553, and the same was afterwards held by Parke, B., and Coltman, J., in R v. Anderson, 2 M. and Rob 471. But see now 14 and 15 Vict., c. 100, s. 12

AND when the cashier of a bank who had a general authority to conduct the business of the bank, and to part with its property on the presentation of a genuine order from a customer, was deceived by a forged order, and parted with the property of the bank to the person who presented the order, and who knew the order to be forged, it was held that the latter was guilty of obtaining by false pretences the money so paid on the order.—R. v. PRINCE, 38 L. J. (M C.) 8, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 150.

FRAUDULENTLY offering a "flash-note" in payment, under the pretence that it is a bank-note, is a false pretence within the Statute.—R. v. COULSON, 1 Den. 592; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 182.

A PERSON who fraudulently obtains goods by forwarding to the vendor the half of a bank-note, having previously parted with the corresponding half to a third person, is guilty of obtaining goods by false pretences as by forwarding the half-note he represents that he has the corresponding half ready for the vendor's satisfaction.—R v. MURPHY, 13 Cox. 298 (Irish C. C. R.).

WHERE a man assumed the name of another to whom money was required to be paid by a genuine instrument, this was holden to be a pretence within the meaning of the Act —R. v. STORY, R. and R. 81.

SO, where a person at Oxford, who was not a member of the University, went, for the purpose of fraud, wearing a commoner's gown and cap, and obtained goods, this was held a sufficient false pretence to satisfy the Statute, though nothing passed in words.—R. v. BARNARD, 7 C. and P. 784.

THE pretence (as may be collected from the authorities above quoted) must be of some existing fact, made for the purpose of inducing the prosecutor to part with his property. Therefore, a pretence that the party would do an act he did not mean to do as a pretence to pay for goods on delivery, is not a false pretence within the Act, but merely a promise for future conduct.—R. v. GOODHALL, R. and R 461.

SO, where the defendant obtained money from the prosecutor by the false pretence that he was going to pay his rent, whereas he had no intention of paying his rent, this was held to be no false pretence with the Statute.—R v. LEE, L and C 309; 9 Cox. 304.

SO, also, a false pretence that the defendant wanted the loan of 30*l.* to enable him to take a public house is not within the Statute —R. v. WOODMAN, 14 Cox. 179.

AND a pretence to a parish-officer, as an excuse for not working, that the party had not clothes, when he really has, though it induced the officer to give him clothes, is not a pretence within the Statute, the statement being rather a false excuse for not working than a false pretence to obtain goods.—R. v. WAKELING, R. and R. 504.

AN indictment for obtaining money from A under the false pretence that the defendant intended to marry A, and wanted the money to pay for a wedding suit he had bought, was held not sufficient to sustain a conviction.—R. v. JOHNSON, 2 Mood. C. C. 254.

AND when the false pretence averred in the indictment was, that the defendant having executed certain work, there was a certain sum due and owing to him on account of it whereas only a smaller sum was due to him, this was held bad as not sufficiently averring a false pretence of an existing fact, and being proveable by evidence of a mere wrongful overcharge.—R. v. OATES, Dears. 459; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 123.

WHERE an indictment alleged that the defendant falsely pretended to P, who lived at one T's, that the said P was to give the defendant 10s., and that T was going to allow him 10s. a week, it was held (Blackburn, J., and Pigott, B., dub.) that the indictment did not allege with sufficient certainty any false pretence respecting any existing fact.—R. v. HENSHAW, L. and C. 444; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 132.

BUT where the statement consists partly of a fraudulent misrepresentation of an existing fact and partly of an executory promise to do something in futuro—as, that the defendant kept a shop, and that the prosecutrix might go and live with her at the said shop until she obtained a situation; whereas the defendant kept no shop; and the jury find that the prosecutrix parts with her money or goods, relying wholly or in part upon the misrepresentation of fact; this is a sufficient false pretence within the Act.—R. v. FRY, Dears. and B. 449; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 68

So, where the false representation was that the defendant had brought certain skins, and would sell them to the prosecutor.—R. v. WEST, Dears. and B. 575; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 227.

AND when a married man induced a woman to give him money by representing himself to be unmarried, and by promising that with the money he would furnish a house and return and marry her, he was held indictable for obtaining money by false pretences.—R. v. JENNISON, L. and C. 157; 31 L. J. (M.C.) 146.

IT is also to be observed that a promise to do a thing in futuro may involve a false pretence that the promisor has the power to do that thing, for which false pretence the promisor may be indictable.—R. v. GILES, L. and C. 502; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 50.

AND where the false pretence charged was that the defendant said he had got a carriage and pair, and expected it down, either that day or the next, this was held to be proved by evidence of his having said that he expected his carriage and pair down.—R. v. HOWARTH, 11 Cox. 588 (C. C. R.).

WHERE money was obtained by the defendant by the false representation that W was about to publish a new directory, and that the defendant was collecting information for it, this was held to be a false pretence of an existing fact.—R. v. SPEED, 15 COX 24 (C. C. R.) Indeed, it may be laid down generally that, as it is not necessary that the statement of the existing facts should be in words, but may be conveyed by the conduct and acts of the party, so also, if made by words or writing, it is not necessary that such statement should be made expressly, if the statement may be naturally and reasonably, although not necessarily, inferred from such words or writing.—R. v. Cooper, L. R. 2 Q. B. D. 510; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 219. Thus, where C was convicted of obtaining potatoes from the prosecutor by falsely pretending that he was then in a large way of business, that he was in a position to do a good trade in potatoes, and that he was able to pay for large quantities of potatoes as and when the same might be delivered to him, and the evidence that C had so pretended was the following letter written by him to the prosecutor: "Send me one truck of regents and one truck of rocks, as samples, at your prices named in your letter, let them be good quality, then I am sure a good trade will be done for both of us. I will remit you cash on arrival of goods and invoice. I may say, if you use me well, I shall be a good customer" It was held, affirming the conviction, that the words of the letter were fairly and reasonably capable of a construction supporting the pretences charged, and that it was a question for the jury whether the writer intended the prosecutor to put that construction upon them.—Id.

A FALSE pretence actually made to A in B's hearing, whereby money is obtained from B, may be laid as made to B.—R. v. DENT, 1 C. and K. 249.

AND where the indictment alleged the false pretence to have been made to B and others, and it was proved that B was one of a firm, and that the false pretence was made to him alone, but with intent to defraud the firm, it was held sufficient, the words "and others" being rejected as surplusage.—R. v. KEALEY, 2 Den. 68; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 57. The jury may connect together representations made in several distinct conversations (supposing them to be in their nature connectible), and convict the defendant for obtaining money, &c., by means of false pretences made in those several conversations — R. v. WELLMAN, Dears 188; 22 L. J. (M C.) 118.

A FALSE pretence made through an innocent agent is the same as if made by the defendant himself, and may be so charged.—R. v. BUTCHER, Bell 6; 28 L. J (M. C.) 14.

K REPRESENTED to B that he had a quantity of good tabacco, and induced B to agree to buy some. P was with K at the time, and it was arranged that P was to deliver the tobacco to B, and that B was to pay P for K. P afterwards delivered to B two bales purporting to be tobacco as in pursuance of the contract, and received payment from B. The bales contained little else but rubbish; K and P were parties to the fraud. It was held on these facts that K was liable to be convicted on an indictment charging him with obtaining money from B by falsely pretending that he was possessed of a quantity of good tobacco.—R. v. KERRIGAN, L. and C 383; 33 L. J. (M. C) 71.

WHERE the indictment charged the defendant with falsely pretending to the prosecutor, whose mare and gelding had strayed, that he would tell him where they were, if he would give him a sovereign down; and the prosecutor gave the sovereign, but the defendant refused to tell, the conviction was held bad; the indictment should have stated that he pretended he knew where they were. —R. v. DOUGLAS, 1 Mood. C. C. 462

AN indictment against A and B charged that C was possessed of a mare and A of a horse, and that A and B falsely pretended to C that B was then and there possessed of a certain sum of money, to wit, 12*l.*, and that, if C would exchange his mare for A's horse, B was willing and ready to purchase the horse of C, and give him 12*l.* for it; whereas, in truth and in fact, B was not then and there possessed of the said sum of 12*l.*, and was not then and there ready and willing to purchase the said horse of C, and to pay him the 12*l.*, and it was held bad on demurrer, for not averring that the defendant knew that B was not possessed of the 12*l.*—R. v. HENDERSON, 2 Mood. C. C. 192; C. and Mar. 328. But as the word "knowingly" is not in the Statute, an indictment which does not contain that word, but follows the words of the Statute, is sufficient after verdict—R v. BOWEN, 13 Q. B. 790, 19 L. J. (M. C.) 65. See Hamilton v. R., 9 Q. B. 271: 16 L. J. (M. C.) 9.

THE indictment also must negative the pretences by special averment as in the above precedent, and where such an averment was omitted it was holden to be an error, and the judgment was reversed.—R. v. PERROTT, 2 M. and Sel 379, 386.

WHERE the false pretence alleged was, that the defendant "then was a captain in Her Majesty's 5th Regiment," &c., the pretence was held to be well negatived by an averment that the defendant was not, "at the time of making such pretence," a captain, &c.—HAMILTON v. R., 9 Q. B. 271.

IT was also holden, in cases decided on former Statutes, that the indictment should state that the money, &c. obtained was the property of the person whom it was intended to defraud, since, otherwise, a conviction or acquittal on this indictment could not be pleaded in bar to a subsequent indictment for larceny in respect of the same transaction.—SILE v. R, Dears. 132; 1 E. and B. 533; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 41. But this allegation is expressly declared to be unnecessary by the present Statute, 24 and 25 Vict., c. 96, s. 88. It is not necessary to allege that the pretence was made with the intent of obtaining the money, &c.; it is sufficient to show that the pretence was made, that the money, &c., was obtained thereby with intent to defraud, and that the pretence was false to the knowledge of the defendant.—HAMILTON v. R., 9 Q. B. 271. It is still, however, necessary to allege in the indictment that the defendant obtained the money, &c, "with intent to defraud," and if those words be omitted, the indictment is bad, and cannot be amended under 14 and 15 Vict., c. 100, s. 1, by inserting them—R. v. JAMES, 12 Cox. 127. per Lush, J If it be a valuable security that was obtained, the indictment need not, it seems, show it to be still unsatisfied at all events, it is good after verdict without such averment.—Id. The offence is completed by the obtaining of the money, &c., and it is no defence where the indictment charges the obtaining of money, that the money has been obtained only by way of a loan, and that the defendant intends to repay it; R. v. Crossley, 2 M. and Rob. 17; because the property in money that is lent passes as much in a case of loan as on a sale, there being no expectation that the same money which is lent will be returned See the judgment of Crompton, J., in R. v. Burgon, Dears. and B. 11.

WHERE, however, a chattel is obtained by way of loan, the property in the chattel does not pass (see the judgment of Crompton, J., supra), and since to constitute an obtaining by false pretence it is equally essential, as in larceny, that there shall be an intention to deprive the owner wholly of his property, if it appears that the defendant has no such intention, but merely intended to obtain the use of the chattel for a limited time, he cannot be convicted of obtaining the chattel by false pretences—R. v. KILHAM, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 261; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 109.

AND, therefore, where the defendant, by false pretences, obtained from a livery stable-keeper a horse on hire, rode it himself during the time of hiring, and afterwards returned it to the stables, it was held that he could not be convicted of obtaining the horse by false pretence—Id. See R. v. Boulton, 1 Ben. 508; 2 C and K. 917, 919; L. J. (M. C.) 67.

ENGLISH CASES ON CHEATING—concld.

WE have seen that the offence is completed by the obtaining of the money; and, therefore, where it was transmitted in a letter, posted by the defendant's request in county A, but which reached him in county B, it was held that this was an obtaining of the money in county A, and that the venue was rightly laid there.—R. v. JONES, 1 Den. 551; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 162. See R. v. Buttery, cit. 4 B. and Ald. 179.

Punishment for cheating by personation.

A WITNESS falsely deposing in another's name should be charged with giving false evidence under s. 193, and not with cheating by personation under ss. 415 and 419 of the Penal Code.—REG. v. PREMA BHIKA, 1 Bom. H. C. R. 89. [Forbes, Westropp, and Tucker, JJ. Nov. 5, 1863.]

THE prisoner, having passed himself off as a police officer, and cheated several villagers out of money, was held guilty of cheating and falsely personating a public servant.—QUEEN v. SADANUND DOSS alias SONA BISWAS, 2 W. R. 29. [Kemp, J. Jan. 30, 1865.]

A MAN, named Yesu, gave the accused four annas with which to purchase for him (Yesu) a stamp. When the stamp collector asked the accused for his name, he said "Yesu," instead of giving his own name. It was held that this was furnishing false information under s. 177, not cheating by personation under s. 419.—REG. v. RAGHOJI BIN KANOJI, 3 Bom. H. C. R. 42. [Couch, C.J., and Newton, J. Mar. 6, 1867.]

WHERE a person represented a girl to be the daughter of one woman when she was within his knowledge the daughter of another woman, held that he was guilty of cheating by personation under s. 416 of the Penal Code, and that it was unnecessary to bring in s. 109 relating to abetment.—QUEEN v. DHANPUT OJHAH, 7 W. R. 51. [Glover, J. April 5, 1867.]

WHERE two girls were bought by the prisoners on speculation, taken to a foreign and distant district, palmed off as women of much higher caste than they really were, and married to two Rajputs after receiving the usual bonus, held that the prisoners could not be convicted under s. 373 of the Penal Code, but of cheating and false personation under ss. 415 and 416.—QUEEN v. DABEE SINGH, 7 W. R. 55; 3 Wyman's Rev., Civ., and Crim. Rep. 32. [Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ. April 8, 1867.]

WHERE A intended to register a deed, but was too ill to do so, and B, who was known to A, personated A, and had the deed registered in her name, it was held that, in the absence of anything to prove that it was intended to defraud anybody, A was not guilty of cheating by personation under s. 419 of the Penal Code but an offence under s. 93 of the Registration Act (XX. of 1866). C and D, who abetted A, were convicted of an offence under s. 94 of the said Act.—In re LOOTHY BEWA, 11 W. R. 24; 2 B. L. R. A. Cr. 25. [Norman and Jackson, JJ. Mar. 31, 1869.]

WHERE the accused represented to the prosecutor that a girl was a Brahmin, and thereby induced him to part with his money in consideration of the marriage of the girl to his brother, when the girl was really of the Sudra caste, it was held that he was guilty of cheating by false personation under s. 416.—QUEEN v. MOHIM CHUNDER SIL, 16 W. R. 42. [Ainslie, J. Sep. 2, 1871.]

WHERE the accused enlisted in the police, calling himself a Jat, got an appointment, and drew pay as a Government servant, whereas he was in reality an Ahir, a caste whose enlistment was prohibited, which fact was well known to the accused, held that the Magistrate rightly held that the offence of cheating by personation had not been committed. Semble, that the accused might have been convicted under s. 182.—EMPRESS v. BUDDHU, Panj. Rec., No. 24 of 1880.

A FALSELY represented himself to be B at a university examination, got a hall-ticket under B's name, and headed and signed answer-papers to questions with B's name. Held that A committed the offences of forgery and cheating by personation.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. APPASAMI, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 151. [Collins, C.J., and Parker, J. Jan. 18, 1889.]

To constitute the offence of cheating under s. 415 of the Indian Penal Code, the damage or harm caused or likely to be caused to the person deceived in mind, body, reputation, or property, must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom. Where, therefore, certain persons were charged under s. 419 of the Indian Penal Code, one with personating another person before a Registrar, and the others with abetting such personation, and causing the Registrar to register a divorce, under the provisions of Bengal Act I. of 1876, with the wife of the personated person, and where the lower Courts convicted the accused under that section, holding that, as such registrations were voluntary and a source of gain to the Registrar, harm was caused to the Registrar in mind and reputation by registering false divorces, as well as by losing his fees in the future through persons being less likely to avail themselves of his services, and that therefore an offence under the section had been committed. Held that the possibilities contemplated by the lower Courts were too remote; that the facts did not constitute an offence under the section, and that the conviction must therefore be set aside.—MOJEY v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 17 Cal. 606. [Norris and Macpherson, JJ. Mar 18, 1890.]

Ct. of Ses., Presy. Mag., or Mag. of 1st class. Cognizable. Warrant. Bailable. Not comp.

Cheating and dishonestly inducing a delivery of property.

420. Whoever cheats and thereby dishonestly induces the person deceived to deliver any property to any person, or to make, alter, or destroy the whole or any part of a valuable security, or anything which is signed or sealed, and which is capable of being converted into a valuable security, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

A PERSON who purchased rice from a famine-relief officer at a certain rate (16 seers to the rupee), on condition that he should sell it at a seer the rupee less, was convicted of cheating under s 420 of the Penal Code, because he did not sell it at the rate agreed on, but at 12 seers to the rupee. Held that, as within the meaning of ss. 23 and 24 of the Penal Code there had been no wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one, no offence had been committed under s. 415 of the Penal Code. —QUEEN v. LAL MAHOMED, 22 W. R. 82. [Couch, C.J., and Ainslie, J. Sep. 15, 1874.]

A CONTRACTOR in the Public Works Department, who was charged with cheating in respect of a sum of money which he received on account for work which it was alleged he had not then finished, was acquitted on the evidence, because it was not proved (1) that there was a false pretence made use of by accused; (2) that he knew he was making use of a false pretence, or that he intended to defraud; (3) that the Public Works Department were deceived by the pretence on account of their belief in its truth, and (4) that the accused received the money with the intention of causing wrongful loss to the Government.—QUEEN v. KALIPUDDO PORAMANICK, 23 W. Presy. Mag. or Mag. of 1st or 2nd class. Uncog. Warrant. Bailable. Not comp.

Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent distribution among creditors.

421. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently removes, conceals, or delivers to any person, or transfers, or causes to be transferred, to any person without adequate consideration, any property, intending thereby to prevent, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby prevent, the distribution of that property according to law among his creditors or the creditors of any other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

422. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently prevents any debt or demand due to himself or to any other person from being made available according to law for payment of his debts or the debts of such other person shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonestly or fraudulently preventing debt being available for creditors.

WHERE A entered into an agreement with B not to compromise a case with C, because he had assigned the benefit of the suit to B as a security for the due payment of some monthly instalments of money, and A, notwithstanding, did afterwards compromise the suit with C, it was held that A could not be convicted under s. 422 of the Penal Code, unless the compromise with C was made dishonestly or fraudulently towards B.—IN THE MATTER OF NOBIN CHUNDER MUDDUCK, 22 W. R. 46. [Phear and Morris, JJ. July 29, 1874.]

THE petitioners mortgaged their property and under the terms of the agreement certain persons were appointed managers of the estate under certain conditions in regard to payment of the moneys realized by them. In execution of a decree obtained by the managers in a suit brought in the names of the petitioners a certain putni taluk was sold for Rs. 3,000. The debtor settled with the petitioners that, on payment of Rs. 1,000, the sale was to be set aside. The money was paid into Court, and an application was made by the petitioners for the withdrawal of this money. The Court, however, made no order on this application. The petitioners were convicted of an attempt to commit an offence under s. 422 of the Penal Code. Held that, having regard to the relation between the petitioners and their managers at whose instance the proceedings were taken, it could not properly be said that an attempt to commit an offence under s. 422 of the Penal Code was made. That the interference of the petitioners and their application to obtain the money paid into Court might have been breaches of their contract with the mortgagees, but such conduct could not necessarily be regarded as dishonest or fraudulent so as to render them liable to punishment. Their attempt to get this money was more to put an end to the management than to prevent the money from being available for payment of their debt under the mortgage. Nobin Chunder Mudduck (22 W. R., Cr. 46) referred to.—HARA KUMARY CHOWDHURANI v. R. SAVI, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 314. [Prinsep and Handley, JJ. July 5, 1900.]

423. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently signs, executes, or becomes a party to, any deed or instrument which purports to transfer or subject to any charge any property or any interest therein, and which contains any false statement relating to the consideration for such transfer or charge, or relating to the person or persons for whose use or benefit it is really intended to operate, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Ditto.

Dishonest or fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing a false statement of consideration.

424. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently conceals or removes any property of himself or any other person, or dishonestly or fraudulently assists in the concealment or removal thereof, or dishonestly releases any demand or claim to which he is entitled, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Ditto.

Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property.

WHERE a Deputy Magistrate, considering that the attachment of a carriage in execution of a decree of a Civil Court was illegal, because it was placed in the custody of the judgment-debtor's husband, and that the husband, had acted fraudulently in recovering and concealing the wheels and axles of the carriage on its subsequent distraint for arrears of municipal tax, convicted him of an offence under s. 424 of the Penal Code, the conviction was set aside. A Deputy Magistrate has no authority to order arrears of municipal tax due by a person to be paid out of a fine levied on him.—QUEEN v. BROJA KISORE DUTT, 8 W. R. 17. [Jackson and Hobhouse, JJ. June 17, 1867.]

To sustain a charge of concealment of property under s. 424, there must be evidence of the persons intended to be defrauded by such concealment.—QUEEN v. RAM DWAYA, Panj. Rec., No 16 of 1868.

THE offence which s. 424 of the Penal Code contemplates is such a concealment or removal of property from the place where the property is deposited as can be considered fraudulent, whether the fraud is intended to be practised on creditors or partners. Case of Kiamuddin v. Allah Buksh (15 W. R. 51) distinguished.—IN THE MATTER OF GOUR BENODE DUTT, 21 W. R. 10; 13 B. L. R. 308n. [Markby and Birch, JJ. Dec. 4, 1873.]

IN matters relating to the grant of sanction to prosecute under s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882), a Court is regarded as "subordinate" to another Court where the latter is the Court to which an appeal from the former ordinarily lies, and an application for such sanction must be made to such superior Court, even in those particular cases in which an appeal lies to some other Court, e.g., to the High Court. A decree-holder applied to the First-class Subordinate Judge for sanction to prosecute his judgment-debtor, under ss. 206 and 424 of the Penal Code, for fraudulent concealment of certain moveable property, worth about Rs. 10,000 awarded by the decree. This application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge The District Judge declined to interfere, on the ground that, the decree being appealable to the High Court, the High Court alone could deal with the application under s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held that, though the decree in the present instance was appealable to the High Court, still, as appeals from the Court of the First-class Subordinate Judge ordinarily lay to the District Court, the former was subordinate to the latter Court within the meaning of s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—In re ANANT RAMCHANDRA LOTLIKAR, I. L. R., 11 Bom. 438. [West and Birdwood, JJ. Nov. 16, 1886.]

A JUDGMENT-DEBTOR, whose standing crops were attached, harvested them while the attachment was in force, and was convicted of theft. Held that the accused was not guilty of theft, but of the offence of dishonestly removing the property under Penal Code, s 424 Per Benson, J.—The offence was also criminal misappropriation within the meaning of Penal Code, s. 403.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. OBAYA, I. *Of Mischief.

425. Whoever, with intent to cause, or knowing that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to the public, or to any person, causes the destruction of any property, or any such change in any property, or in the situation thereof, as destroys or diminishes its value or utility, or affects it injuriously, commits "mischief."

Mischief.

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to the offence of mischief that the offender should intend to cause loss or damage to the owner of the property injured or destroyed. It is sufficient if he intends to cause, or knows that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to any person by injuring any property whether it belongs to that person or not.

Explanation 2.—Mischief may be committed by an act effecting property belonging to the person who commits the act, or to that person and others jointly.

A, a joint-owner of a parcel of land, erected on it an edifice without the consent and against the will of B, another joint-owner. A dispute having arisen in consequence, the Magistrate held an inquiry, and made an order under s. 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code, awarding to A exclusive possession of the part of the land on which the edifice had been erected. Held per Jackson, J., that such order was erroneous, as the matter was not one to which s. 530 could apply. B subsequently brought a suit in the Civil Court to establish his title to joint possession of the whole parcel, and for a declaration that A was not entitled to erect any edifice thereon, and he further prayed that such edifice should be removed. B obtained a decree, whereupon his servants went on the land, and pulled it down. They were charged before the Deputy Magistrate with having committed mischief, and on this convicted and fined. Held per Jackson, J., that, as there had been no causing of wrongful loss, the accused had not been guilty of mischief. On the 8th October, the accused, who were the servants of B, found that the men in the employ of A were again putting up this erection, a nawbut-khana, and accordingly protested against its erection, pulled down the bamboos, and thrust aside the servants of A, throwing to the ground one man who was clinging to the bamboos. On the 9th October 1877, these servants were charged before the Magistrate with rioting, and, being called upon for their defence, named several witnesses, and summonses on the following morning were issued for their appearance; but they were not found. The accused then applied for further time for the appearance of the witnesses. This the Magistrate refused to grant, and convicted the accused on 12th October 1877. Held per Jackson, J., that, this being a warrant case, it was the duty of the Magistrate to summon the witnesses that might be offered by the accused, and that he might, at his discretion, have adjourned the case. Held, further, per Jackson, J., that the meaning of s. 359 of the Criminal Procedure Code is, that, if, among the persons named by the accused as witnesses, the Magistrate considers that any witness is included for the purpose of vexation and delay, he is to exercise his judgment, and enquire whether such witness is material, but that the section is not intended to enable the Magistrate to inquire into what the defence of the accused person is to be, and to consider whether, on learning the nature of the defence, he is absolutely to abstain from summoning the whole of the witnesses cited by the accused; and further that, in the present case, there was not any purpose of vexation or delay, and that, by the refusal to grant further time, the accused had been probably prejudiced in their defence. Held, further, per Jackson, J., that, as the accused were not on the land in question as members of an unlawful assembly, nor for any unlawful purpose, the conviction, as well as the procedure, was illegal. Held per Cunningham, J., that the accused were merely exercising the remedy of abating a private nuisance, and were exercising a legal right of self-defence. Held, further, per Cunningham, J., that the acts of the complainants in erecting the nawbat-khana amounted to mischief, and came within the purview of s. 425 of the Penal Code. Held, further, per Ainslie and McDonell, JJ., that the High Court, in the exercise of its powers of extraordinary jurisdiction, cannot, in criminal matters, interfere, unless all other remedies provided by law have been previously exhausted. Therefore, where parties who had been convicted of riot by a Magistrate, and who, having a right of appeal to the Sessions Court, instead of doing so, moved the High Court under cl. 15 of the Charter, the Court would not interfere until that remedy had been resorted to. —DENONATH GHATTACK v. RAJCOOMAR SINGH, I. L. R., 3 Cal. 573. [Jackson and Cunningham, JJ. Mar. 25, 27, 1878.]

THE word "object" in s. 295 of the Penal Code does not include animate objects. A bull dedicated and set at large at the sradha of a Hindu in accordance with religious usage is not an "object" within the meaning of that section. Where such an animal was killed by certain Mahomedans secretly and at night in the presence of none but Mahomedans for the sake of the meat and value of the skin, held that no offence had been committed under s 295. Queen-Empress v. Imam Ali (I. L. R., 10 All. 150) followed. Held, further, that such a bull is not "moveable property" within the meaning of ss. 378 and 403, or "property" within the meaning of s. 425 of the Penal Code, and could not therefore be the subject of theft, criminal misappropriation, or mischief. The fact that such a bull receives some attention from the cowherd of the persons who set it at liberty, and is daily fed by him by direction of his employers, and is not used for breeding purposes without their permission being asked, is not inconsistent with a total surrender by those who set it at liberty of all their rights as proprietors. Queen-Empress v. Bandhu (I. L. R., 8 All. 51) followed. Queen-Empress v. Nalla (I. L. R., 11 Mad. 145) referred to and commented on. For the purpose of construing a section of an Act and ascertaining the intention of the Legislature, the Report of the Indian Law Commissioners or a Select Committee appointed to consider a Bill may be referred to. Queen-Empress v. Kartick Chunder Das (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 721) followed.—ROMESH CHUNDER SANNYAL v. HIRU MONDAL, I. L. R., 17 Cal. 852. [Norris and Macpherson, JJ. Mar. 27 & April 15, 1890.]

Punishment for mischief.

A DOUBLE sentence for theft and mischief is illegal and improper.—BICHUK AHEER v. AUHUCK BHOONEA, 6 W. R. 5. [Jackson and Campbell, JJ. June 18, 1866.]

THE prisoners had cleared a piece of Government land, cutting down without permission and appropriating the trees thereon, and were convicted of theft under s. 379 and of mischief under s. 425, and sentenced, the first prisoner to one month's imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 40, and the second prisoner to pay a fine of Rs. 10. Held that the convictions and sentences were not illegal, as the mischief preceded the theft, which could not have been committed till the trees were severed from the ground. — REG. v. NARAYAN KRISHNA, 2 Bom. H. C. R. 392. [Couch, C.J., and Newton, J. June 27, 1866.]

WHERE a person levelled, filled up, and cultivated a watercourse over his own lands which conveyed water to the land of the prosecutor, it was held that this act was mischief within the meaning of s. 425, if the defendant knew that the prosecutor was entitled to the water, and that, by this act, his right would be obstructed. The authority vested in the Criminal Court of punishing persons for acts of mischief is one which must be exercised with great caution, and it must be very clear before conviction that the accused has brought himself within the meaning of s. 425.—IN THE MATTER of RAM GOLAM SINGH, 6 W. R. 59. Wyman's Rev., Civ., and Crim. Rep. 47. [Loch and Jackson, JJ. Aug. 27, 1866.]

STEALING property, and then destroying it, are but one offence, viz., theft—not two, theft and mischief; but the fact that the offender has rendered the property irrecoverable should be considered in awarding punishment.—CROWN v. HAMIRA, Panj. Rec., No. 37 of 1866.

A COURT copyist obtained the file of a case from the record-officer by pretending that a copy of the decree was required. He afterwards returned the file having abstracted and destroyed a receipt given by the decree-holder for the money paid by the defendant in satisfaction of a decree. Held that he was guilty of mischief.—CROWN v. TAHUL RAM, Panj. Rec., No. 112 of 1866.

S. 425 of the Penal Code supposes that the destruction was caused with the intention to cause wrongful loss or damage, and does not apply to cases of mere carelessness; and s. 17, Act III. of 1857, supposes the mischief (cattle-trespass) was done intentionally, and not by negligence.—In re ARAZ SIRKAR, 10 W. R. 29. [Loch and Glover, JJ. Aug. 21, 1868.]

To constitute the offence of mischief according to the Penal Code, the act done must be shown to have caused destruction of some property, or such a change in the property or the situation of it as destroys or diminishes its value or utility, or affects it injuriously. The probable consequential damage to other property would not of itself constitute mischief.—PRO., Oct. 22, 1868, 4 Mad. H. C. R., Ap. 15.

A RIGHT of fishery was in dispute between the zamindar of Bali and the zamindar of Maharajpur. The former obtained a decree declaring the fishery to be his, in proceedings in which the latter was not a party Thereupon, the servants of the zamindar of Bali removed a bamboo-bar which the Maharajpur people had erected to prevent the passage of fish. For this removal the Bali people were convicted of mischief, and fined. On a reference to the High Court, it was held that the conviction could not stand, as the Maharajpur zamindar had not shown that he was legally entitled to the fishery in dispute, and it did not appear that the defendants were acting otherwise than under a bond-fide belief that the Maharajpur people were encroaching on their master's rights. In so removing a bar which interfered with those rights, it could not be said that they acted with intent to cause, or knowing it to be likely that they would cause, wrongful loss to the opposing party.—QUEEN v. DENOO BUNDHOO BISWAS, 12 W. R. 1; 3 B. L. R., A. Cr. 17. Norman and Jackson, JJ. June 1, 1869.

THE defendants were convicted of mischief under s. 427 of the Penal Code for grazing their cattle upon waste lands without payment of certain capitation-fees to which the prosecutor was entitled. Held that there was no evidence that the defendants caused mischief.—PRO., July 22, 1870, 5 Mad. H. C. R Ap. 20.

To render a person liable under s. 425 of the Penal Code for mischief in consequence of damage done by cattle-trespass, he must in some way have caused the cattle to enter the prosecutor's fields, knowing that by so doing he is likely to cause damage. Mere neglect to keep the cattle from straying is not sufficient.—FORBES (MAJOR) v. GRISH CHUNDER BHUTTACHARJEE, 14 W. R. 31; 6 B. L. R. Ap. 3. [Couch, C.J., and Jackson, J. Aug. 12, 1870.]

THE accused were convicted of mischief. The facts were that, whilst the accused were employed in floating timber through a bridge, some of the logs struck against the arch of the bridge. Held that the conviction was bad. — PRO., Nov. 4, 1870, 5 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 40.

THE mere fact of allowing cattle to stray, whereby damage is caused to the complainant, affords no evidence to support a conviction on the charge of mischief.—PRO., Nov. 10, 1871, 6 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 36.

WITHOUT evidence that the accused intended, or knew that he was likely to cause wrongful loss or damage to the complainant, the offence of mischief under s. 425 of the Penal Code was held not made out.—KASHI NATH GHOSE v. DINOBUNDHOO MYTEE, 16 W. R. 62. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Dec. 2, 1871.]

A CONVICTION for mischief was quashed in a case where it appeared that the complainant had formerly destroyed crop belonging to the accused, and the latter, instead of complaining at once, merely bided his time, and then took the complainant's crop.—MAHOMED FOYAZ v. KHAN MAHOMED, 18 W R. 10. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. June 7, 1872.]

IN a case in which the accused was charged with having cut and carried away bamboos, the right to which was disputed, it was held that he could not be convicted of mischief under s 427 of the Penal Code.—SHAKUR MAHOMED v. CHUNDER MOHUN SHAH, 21 W. R. 38. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Jan. 28, 1874.]

DEFENDANTS were convicted of committing mischief under the following circumstances. During certain seasons of the year they received water through a certain sluice for the irrigation of their lands. At another season the sluice was closed, and the water allowed to flow to the lands of other cultivators The arrangement was prescribed by the Revenue Authorities, and the defendants violated it by opening their sluice during the seasons prescribed for the irrigation of the lands of the other cultivators Held by the High Court that the conviction could not be sustained; that there had been no destruction of property, or diminution in the value or utility of property by defendants, within the definition in s. 425 of the Penal Code.—PRO., Nov. 12, 1874, 7 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 39.

A PERSON commits mischief if he cuts trees on land which he claims, but of which possession after an execution-sale has been legally made over to another person, without any objection or formal intervention on his part. —SONAI SARDAR v. BHUKTAR SARDAR, 25 W. R. 46. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. May 12, 1876.]

WHERE an accused person had, at the instance of the Magistrate who had come across him while out walking one morning, been placed on his defence for mischief, and summarily tried and sentenced to two months' rigorous imprisonment; and the Magistrate had, by a letter to the Registrar of the High Court, furnished the explanation that the accused had, while extending a garden, and laying the foundation of a house, encroached on the inner slope of a river embankment, and thereby endangered the safety of the whole station, held, firstly, that, in order to justify a conviction for the offence of mischief, it must appear that the accused person had done a particular act with intent to cause, or knowing it to be likely to cause, wrongful loss; and that, as the house and garden on which the accused was engaged would be the first to be swept away in the event of the dreaded breach in the bund and consequent irruption of the river, such guilty knowledge or intent could not reasonably be inferred on his part; and, secondly, that in a case of this kind, where Government had been made prosecutor, but no complaint had been offered to the Magistrate, who had acted on his own impulse, the Magistrate had erred seriously in dealing with the case summarily, and sentencing off the accused to imprisonment.—IN THE MATTER OF PRAN NATH SHAHA AND ROMANATH BANERJEE, 25 W. R. 69. [Jackson and McDonell, JJ. June 6, 1876.]

THE accused, A, C, and another, members of the Municipal Committee of Jalapur, permitted a tree within municipal limits to be cut for a public purpose against the order of the Municipal Committee as a body. Held that accused had not committed the offence of mischief as defined in s. 425.—AMIR CHAND v. CROWN, Panj. Rec., No. 9 of 1878.

IF a person enters on land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bond-fide claim of right, and without any intention to intimidate, insult, or annoy such other person, or to commit an offence, when, though he may have no right to the land, he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass. So also, if a person deals injuriously with property in the bond-fide belief that it is his own, he cannot be convicted of mischief. The mere assertion, however, in such cases of a claim of right is not in itself a sufficient answer to charges of criminal trespass and mischief. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender; and, if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bond-fide claim of right, then it cannot refuse to convict the offender assuming that the other facts are established which constitute the offence. Where a person committed a trespass with the intention of committing mischief, thereby committing criminal trespass, and at the same time committed mischief, held that such person could not, under cl. 3 of s. 454 of Act X. of 1872 receive a punishment more severe than might have been awarded for either of such offences. The provisions of that law do not, in such a case, prohibit the Court from passing sentence in respect of each offence established. —EMPRESS v. BUDH SINGH, I L. R., 2 All. 101 [Turner, J. Jan. 24, 1879.]

THE destruction of a document evidencing an agreement void for immorality may constitute the offence of mischief within the the meaning of s. 426 of the Penal Code.—REG. v. VYAPURI, I. L. R., 5 Mad. 401. [Kernan and Muttusami Ayyar, JJ. July 11, 1882.]

THE owner of an animal who buries it after its death is not guilty of mischief or any other offence, although he does so with the express object of preventing the Mahars of the village from taking its skin according to the custom of the country.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GOBINDA PUNJA, I. L. R., 8 Bom. 295. [West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Jan. 31, 1884.]

WHERE complainant had, for the purpose of removal, placed certain goods upon a cart, and accused came and unyoked the bullocks, and turned the goods off the cart on to the road, and complainant thereupon went away at once, leaving them there, held that, under these circumstances, a conviction under s. 341 of the Penal Code could not be sustained, but that there was such "mischief" as to bring the offence within s. 425. Held also that s. 425 does not necessarily contemplate damage of a destructive character. It requires merely that there should be an invasion of right and diminution of the value of one's property, caused by that invasion of right, which must have been contemplated by the doer of it when he did it.—In re JUGGESHWAR DASS. JUGGESHWAR DASS v. KOYLASH CHUNDER CHATTERJEE, I. L. R., 12 Cal 55. [Garth, C J., and Prinsep, Wilson, Field, and O'Kinealy, JJ. Sep. 4, 1885.]

THE damage contemplated in s. 425 of the Penal Code need not necessarily consist in the infringement of an existing, present, and complete right, but it may be caused by an act done now with the intention of defeating and rendering infructuous a right about to come into existence. Any person who contracts to purchase property, and pays in a portion of the purchase-money, has such an interest in that property, although his title may not be complete, or his right final and conclusive, that the destruction of such property may cause to him wrongful loss or damage within the meaning of s. 425.—

FISH in a public river cannot be said to be property in the possession of the person who may have the fishery right, and the infringement of the right is not theft under s. 378 of the Penal Code. The accused were charged with unlawfully taking fish along with some eleven others in a public river, the right of fishing in which had been let out by the Government to the complainant, and the lower Court, among other offences, convicted them of theft, criminal misappropriation, mischief, criminal trespass, and unlawful assembly. Held that the conviction was wrong, and that no offence had been committed.—BHAGIRAM DOME v. ABAR DOME, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 388. [Norris and Ghose, JJ. Jan. 24, 1888.]

AN accused person was convicted under s. 457 of the Penal Code of house-breaking by night in order to commit an offence (mischief and assault), and also under ss. 426 and 352 for the offences of mischief and assault, and punished separately for each offence These offences formed parts of one transaction. Held that the sentences were legal.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIRICHAN, I. L. R., 12 Mad 36. [Kernan and Muttusami Ayyar, JJ. April 17. 1888.]

P M was convicted by a Magistrate under s 426 of the Penal Code on a charge of mischief by tearing up a promissory note for Rs. 20. Held that the offence charged fell under s. 477 of the Penal Code, and was therefore triable by a Sessions Court only.—In re MADURAI, I. L R., 12 Mad. 54 [Wilkinson and Shephard, JJ. Sep. 11, 1888.]

THE words "any person in possession" in s. 441 of the Penal Code do not mean only "a complainant in possession." Certain persons were prosecuted under ss. 426 and 447 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860) for committing mischief and criminal trespass by entering upon a certain field which was in the possession of the complainant's tenants, and destroying the seed sown therein. The defence raised was an alibi; it was also contended on behalf of the accused that the field belonged to one of them, and that the complainant had no title whatever to it. The Magistrate, who tried the case, declined to go into the question of title; he found that the complainant's tenants were in possession of the field; and, disbelieving the evidence of alibi, he convicted the accused, and sentenced them to fine. On application in revision to the High Court it was urged (inter alia) that the complainant, not being the person in possession, could not legally institute the criminal proceedings, and that, therefore, the conviction was bad. Held that, looking to the nature of the false defence set up by the accused, this was not a case for interference in revision, as to do so would encourage perjury. Held also that the words "any person in possession" in s. 441 of the Penal Code do not mean only "a complainant in possession," there being no authority for taking the offences of mischief and criminal trespass out of the general rule which allows any person to complain of a criminal act. Reference in the case of Kalinauth Nag Chowdhry (9 Cal. CERTAIN Hindus, present at a caste dinner, had sat down to partake of the food which had been served to them, when certain other members of the caste came, and, after telling those who were seated to move to another place, which they refused to do, threw down a shoe amongst the men who were seated. The persons who threw the shoe were convicted of mischief, on the ground as their action had polluted the food, and had, from a Hindu religious point of view, rendered it unfit to be eaten. On reference by the Sessions Judge it was held that this conviction was wrong; neither could the accused be convicted under s. 298 or under s. 504 of the Indian Penal Code on the facts found.—KING-EMPEROR v. MOTI LAL, I. L. R., 24 All. 155. [Blair, J. Nov. 15, 1901.]

Mischief by injury to works of irrigation, or by wrongfully diverting water.

HELD by the majority of a Full Bench (Innes, J., dissenting) that it is not part of the definition of the offence of causing a diminution of water-supply for agricultural purposes that the act of the accused should be a mere wanton act of waste It is sufficient that the act is done without any show of right.—RAMAKRISHNA CHETTI v. PALANYANDI KUDAMBAR, I. WHERE, upon the evidence, it appeared that the complainant was the exclusive owner of a water-course, and that the accused had no sort of right to assert any claim to it, the causing of a diminution of the supply of water by the accused, even though in the assertion of a right, was held to be only an additional wrong, and to constitute mischief within the meaning of s. 430 of the Penal Code. Ram Krishna Chetti v. Palanyandi Kudambar (I. IN a case of mischief by fire with intent to cause the destruction of a dwelling-house, the charge should lay the intent as an intent to cause the destruction, not of a house simply, but of a house used as a human dwelling.—QUEEN v. DURBAROO POLIE, 8 W. R. 30. [Hobhouse, J. June 29, 1867.]

HELD by Glover, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under s. 511, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by Mitter, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about with it cannot support a conviction under ss. 436 and 511. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s. 511, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards the commission of the offence, but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it.—QUEEN v. DOYAL BAWRI, 3 B. or, having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there with intent thereby to intimidate, insult, or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence, is said to commit "criminal trespass."

IN this section the word "offence" has the same meaning when the thing punishable under the special or local law is punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine.—S. 40, Penal Code.

A PERSON who forcibly enters upon property in the possession of another, and erects a building thereon, or does any other act with intent to annoy the person so in possession, is guilty of criminal trespass within the meaning of s 441 of the Penal Code without reference to the question in whom the title to the land may ultimately be found.—QUEEN v. RAM DYAL MUNDLE, 7 W. R. 28. [Kemp and Markby, JJ. Feb 4, 1867.]

IN order to convict of criminal trespass under s. 441 of the Penal Code, it must be proved that the property was in the possession of the prosecutor, and that the entry was made with intent to "commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person in possession of the property."—In re KALINATH NAG CHOWDHRY, 9 W. HELD by Jackson, J. (setting aside the order of the Magistrate. Markby, J., dissenting) that a Magistrate ought not to decline to go into a case of criminal trespass under s. 441 of the Penal Code, because the complainant did not make out his title to the land; the offence may be committed in respect of property in a person's possession, even though such possession may not have originated in right.—QUEEN v. SINGH, 11 W. R. 11. [Jackson and Markby, JJ. Feb. 17, 1869.]

IT is essential to a conviction for criminal trespass under s. 441 of the Penal Code that there should be the intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person.—QUEEN v. CHOORAMONI SANT, 14 W. R. 25. [Jackson and Mitter, JJ. July 30, 1870.]

THE accused were convicted of criminal trespass under s. 441 of the Penal Code for driving their carts across an open green in violation of an order issued by the Municipal Commissioners. Held that there was nothing to show that the Municipal Commissioners had authority to issue such an order, and that the breach of it was not criminally punishable.—PRO., Oct. 28, 1870, 5 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 38.

ACCUSED was ejman of complainant's family. Complainant obtained a decree setting aside an alienation made by accused. In execution, complainant obtained possession from the alienee. The accused entered on this land. Held that he had not committed the offence of criminal trespass.—PRO., Feb 10, 1871. 6 Mad. H. C. R. Ap., 19.

AN intention to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person in possession of a house, does not mean to insult or annoy any person in constructive but in actual possession of the premises.—ISHUR CHUNDER KURMOKAR v. To bring an act of trespass within the meaning of the Penal Code, s. 441, the entry upon the land must be with the intent to annoy, which means with the purpose of annoying the person in possession.—IN THE MATTER OF SHIB NATH BANERJEE, 24 W. R. 58. [Phear and Lawford, JJ. Oct. 1, 1875.]

A PERSON plying a boat for hire at a distance of three miles from a public ferry cannot be said, with reference to such ferry, to commit "criminal trespass" within the meaning of that term in s. 441 of the Penal Code. If, when directed by the order of a public servant, duly promulgated to him, to abstain from plying a boat for hire at or in the immediate vicinity of a public ferry, a person disobeys such direction, he renders himself liable to punishment under the Penal Code.—MUTHRA v. JAWAHIR, I. L. R., 1 All. 527. [Spankie, J. Dec. 15, 1877.]

ENTRY into a local fund market with intent to evade payment of market dues is not criminal trespass.—REG. v. VARTHAPPA, I. L. R., 5 Mad. 382. [Muttusami Ayyar and Tarrant, JJ. Aug. 29, 1882.]

WHEN a stranger, uninvited and without any right to be there, effects an entry in the middle of the night into the sleeping apartment of a woman, a member of a respectable household, and, when an attempt is made to capture him, uses great violence in his efforts to make good his escape, a Court should presume that the entry was made with an intent such as is provided for by s. 441 of the Penal Code. An accused person in the middle of the night effected an entry into a house occupied by two widows, members of a respectable family. On an alarm being given, and an attempt made to capture him, he made use of great violence, and effected his escape. Upon these facts he was charged with offences under ss. 456 and 323 of the Penal Code. The defence set up was an alibi, which was disbelieved by both the lower Courts. Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the house, but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s. 456. It was contended that, as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence, the conviction was illegal. Held that, under the circumstances of the case, the Court ought to presume that the entry was effected with such intent as is provided for by s. 441, and that the conviction should be upheld.—In re KOILASH CHANDRA CHAKRABARTY: KOILASH CHANDRA CHAKRABARTY v. THE QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 16 Cal. 657. [Prinsep and Hill, JJ. May 20, 1889.]

C, A RATE-PAYER in a municipality, who had filed a petition against an assessment which, in his absence, had been dismissed, entered a room where a Committee of the Municipal Commissioners were seated, hearing and deciding petitions in assessment matters, ostensibly with the object of presenting a petition for the revision of his assessment. The Chairman of the Committee ordered him to leave the rooms, and on his refusal to do so he was turned out. Outside the room in the verandah, he addressed the crowd, complaining that no justice was to be obtained from the Committee. C was prosecuted on these facts at the instance of the Chairman of the Committee, and convicted of house-trespass under s. 448 of the Penal Code. Held that the conviction was wrong, and that no offence had been committed. The prosecution was bound to prove, in order to support a conviction of a charge under s. 441 or 442, that the property trespassed upon was at the time in the possession of a complainant who could compound the offence under s. 345 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the complainant had failed to prove that the room was in his possession, and had, in fact, shown that he was merely sitting in it with other persons at the invitation and with the consent of the person, whoever he might be, who had the immediate right to such possession. Held, further, that, even if the complainant could be held to be in possession of the room, there was no evidence of any intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person, it appearing that the object of the accused in going into and remaining in the room was to endeavour to induce the complainant and his colleagues to reconsider their decision, the verbal insult on which the conviction was based having been uttered after C had left the room.—CHANDI PERSHAD v. EVANS, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 123. Petheram, C.J., and Beverley, J. Aug. 13, 1894. Referred to in Imperatrix v. Keshavlal, I. L. R. 21 Bom. 536, infra.

THE accused in the middle of the night effected an entry into a room occupied by four women. On an alarm being given, and an attempt made to capture him, he escaped. He was charged with an offence under s. 456 of the Penal Code The defence set up was disbelieved by both the lower Courts. Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the room, but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s. 456. It was contended that, as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence, the conviction was illegal. Held that the facts proved were good evidence of an intent and of an intrusion on privacy within the meaning of s. 509 of the Penal Code, and that therefore the intent to commit an offence within the meaning of s. 441 was made out. Balmukand Ram v. Ghansamram (I. L. R., 22 Cal. 391) followed.—PREMANUNDO SHAHA v. BRINDABUN CHUNG, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 994. [Pigot and Banerjee, JJ. July 22, 1895.]

THE words "any person in possession" in s. 441 of the Penal Code do not mean only "a complainant in possession." Certain persons were prosecuted under ss. 426 and 447 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860) for committing mischief and criminal trespass by entering upon a certain field which was in the possession of the complainant's tenants, and destroying the seed sown therein. The defence raised was an alibi; it was also contended on behalf of the accused that the field belonged to one of them, and that the complainant had no title whatever to it. The Magistrate, who tried the case, declined to go into the question of title; he found that the complainant's tenants were in possession of the field, and, disbelieving the evidence of alibi, he convicted the accused, and sentenced them to fine. On application in revision to the High Court it was urged (inter alia) that the complainant, not being the person in possession, could not legally institute the criminal proceedings, and that, therefore, the conviction was bad. Held that, looking to the nature of the false defence set up by the accused, this was not a case for interference in revision, as to do so would encourage perjury. Held also that the words "any person in possession" in s. 441 of the Penal Code do not mean only "a complainant in possession," there being no authority for taking the offences of mischief and criminal trespass out of the general rule which allows any person to complain of a criminal act. Reference in the case of Kalinauth Nag Chowdhry (9 Cal. W. R. Cr. R. 1), Chandi Pershad v. Evans (I. L. R., 22 Cal. 123), Iswar v. Sital (8 B. L. R. App. 62), and In re Ganesh Sathe (I. L. ACCUSED, with intent to commit theft, entered at night a dalan or entrance-hall, surrounded by a wall in which there were two door-ways, but without doors, which was used for the custody of property. Held that the dalan was a building within the meaning of ss. 380 and 442, and that a conviction under s. 457 was therefore maintainable.—DAD v. CROWN, Panj. A COURT-YARD consisting of a walled enclosure with four kotahs or chambers opening into it, and an outer door or gate leading into a side street, was held by a majority of the Court (Plowden, J., dissenting) to be a "building" within the meaning of s 442.—SHERA v. EMPRESS, Panj. Lurking house-trespass.

448. Whoever commits house-trespass, having taken precautions to conceal such house-trespass from some person who has a right to exclude or eject the trespasser from the building, tent, or vessel which is the subject of the trespass, is said to commit "lurking house-trespass."

Lurking house-trespass by night.

444. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass after sunset and before sunrise is said to commit "lurking house-trespass by night."

House-breaking.

445. A person is said to commit "house-breaking," who commits house-trespass, if he effects his entrance into the house or any part of it in any of the six ways hereinafter described; or if, being in the house or any part of it for the purpose of committing an offence, or, having committed an offence therein, he quits the house or any part of it in any of such six ways, that is to say:—

First.—If he enters or quits through a passage made by himself, or by any abettor of the house-trespass, in order to the committing of the house-trespass.

* In s. 445 the word "offence" denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law as defined in ss. 41 and 42 of this Code.—See s. 40 of this Code, supra.

Secondly.—If he enters or quits through any passage not intended by any person other than himself, or an abettor of the offence, for human entrance; or through any passage to which he has obtained access by scaling or climbing over any wall or building.

Thirdly.—If he enters or quits through any passage which he or any abettor of the house-trespass has opened, in order to the committing of the house-trespass, by any means by which that passage was not intended by the occupier of the house to be opened.

Fourthly.—If he enters or quits by opening any lock in order to the committing of the house-trespass, or in order to the quitting of the house after a house-trespass.

Fifthly.—If he effects his entrance or departure by using criminal force or committing an assault, or by threatening any person with assault.

Sixthly.—If he enters or quits by any passage which he knows to have been fastened against such entrance or departure, and to have been unfastened by himself or by an abettor of the house trespass.

Explanation.—Any out-house or building occupied with a house, and between which and such house there is an immediate internal communication, is part of the house within the meaning of this section.

WHEN a prisoner convicted of "house-breaking in order to commit theft" and of "theft," both offences being portions of one continuous criminal act, was sentenced, on the first head of charge, to one year's rigorous imprisonment under s. 457 of the Penal Code, and on the second head of charge to receive twenty stripes under s. 2 of the Whipping Act (VI. of 1864), the separate sentences, though not illegal, were disapproved of as contrary to the spirit and intention of the Whipping Act.—REG. v. GENU BIN AKU, 5 Bom. H. C. R. 83. [Couch, C.J., and Newton, J. Sep. 16, 1868.]

Punishment for criminal trespass.

THE entry by one man on another's property accompanied by the cutting down of trees in that property is criminal trespass — QUEEN v. JEENUT BEBEE, 1 W. R. 46. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Dec. 21, 1864.]

THE prisoner entered a house for the purpose of committing an assault, and in carrying out that intention caused grievous hurt. In convicting and punishing him for the substantive offence (grievous hurt), held that it was not necessary to pass a separate sentence for the offence of house-trespass. — QUEEN v. BASSOO RANNAH, 2 W. R 29. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Jan. 30, 1865.]

WHERE a constable and others enter a house and apprehend certain persons as gamblers, and afterwards release them on payment of a sum of money by the latter, the offence committed is not house-trespass and extortion, but taking a bribe as regards the constable, and abetment of that offence as regards the others.—GOVT. v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN, 5 W. R. 49. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. Mar 5, 1866.]

THE order of the Magistrate directing the prisoner, on the expiration of his sentence for the offence of criminal trespass, to execute a personal recognizance to keep the peace, was upheld as legal and necessary.—QUEEN v. GENDOO KHAN, 7 W. R. 14 [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Jan. 21, 1867.] Distinguished in Subal Chunder Dey v. Ram Kanai Sanyasi, I. L. R., 25 Cal. 628, infra.

HELD by Jackson, J. (setting aside the order of the Magistrate, Markby, J., dissenting), that a Magistrate ought not to decline to go into a case of criminal trespass under s. 441 of the Penal Code, because the complainant did not make out his title to the land: the offence may be committed in respect of property in a person's possession, even though such possession may not have originated in right. — QUEEN v. SURWAN SINGH, 11 W. R. 11. [Jackson and Markby, JJ. Feb. 17, 1869.]

WHERE the trespass (if any) was not committed with the intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy the person in possession, but in the bond-fide assertion of a claim of title, this does not amount to criminal trespass. QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF GOKUL CHUND v. SEITH ROSHUN LAL, 2 N.-W. P. 82. [Turner and Spankie, JJ. Feb. 11, 1870.]

THE defendant was convicted under s. 447 of the Penal Code for cultivating village waste land which he had been ordered by the Subordinate Collector to refrain from cultivating. The High Court upheld the conviction.—PRO., Feb. 15, 1870, 5 Mad. H. C. R. Ap 17.

THE accused were convicted of criminal trespass under s. 443 of the Penal Code for driving their carts across an open green in violation of an order issued by the Municipal Commissioners. Held that there was nothing to show that the Municipal Commissioners had authority to issue such an order, and that the breach of it was not criminally punishable.—PRO., Oct. 28, 1870, 5 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 38.

To bring a case under the definition of trespass in s 441 of the Penal Code, the entry must be made with the intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy. One member of a joint family commits no trespass by entering the house which forms the joint property, but he is guilty of that offence when he enters the room ordinarily occupied by another member of the family.—PRANKRISTO CHUNDER v. BISSONATH CHUNDER, 15 W. R. 6; 6 B. L. R. Ap. 80. [Norman, Offg. C.J., and Loch, J. Jan 21, 1871.]

DEFENDANT was convicted of criminal trespass for having enclosed and commenced to cultivate a portion of a burial-ground. Held that the conviction was right. The person (corporate) in possession of the burial-ground is the portion of the public entitled to use the burial-ground, and the act of ploughing up the burial-ground was evidence of intent to annoy such person, the defendant not being one of the portion of the public entitled to its use.—PRO., Mar. 28, 1871, 6 Mad. H C. R. Ap 25.

DEFENDANT was convicted of criminal trespass for including in his own land a portion of a public footpath. Held that, as the public generally were entitled to the use of the footpath, there was no illegal entry by the defendant on property in the possession of another with intent to annoy the person in possession, and consequently that the defendant was wrongly convicted.—PRO., May 25, 1871, 6 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 26.

IN the definition of criminal trespass, the entry and the intention with which a party enters are the essentials. Thus, where A and B all along asserted their prescriptive right to fish in a lake free of rent, and C had failed to establish the relationship of landlord and tenant in a suit brought by him under Act X. of 1859 to get rent from them, held that no conviction for criminal trespass could be had against A and B, and that C's remedy was by suit in the Civil Court, either to eject them if he treated them as trespassers, or to have them declared liable to pay him rent for the future.—SRISTEEDHUR PAROOE v. INDRO BHOOSUN CHUCKERBUTTY. 18 W. R. 25; 9 B. L. R. Ap. 19. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. July 2, 1872.]

ON a conviction for criminal trespass under s. 447, Penal Code, the Joint-Magistrate added to the sentence of imprisonment an order that the prisoners should give recognizances to keep the peace. The Sessions Judge recommended that the order as to recognizances should be quashed, as criminal trespass was not one of the offences detailed in s. 489 of Act X. of 1872, for which such recognizances could be taken. The High Court declined to act on this recommendation, holding that there was nothing illegal in the Joint-Magistrate's order, the conduct of the accused clearly pointing to an intention to commit a breach of the peace.—QUEEN v. JHAPOO, 20 W. R. 37. [Markby and Birch, JJ. June 16, 1873.] Distinguished in Subal Chunder Dey v. Ram Kanai Sanyasi, I. L. R., 25 Cal. 628, infra.

THE unlawful infringement of a right of exclusive fishery in a part of a public river is not an offence which can be brought within the definition of "criminal trespass" in the Penal Code.—EMPRESS v. CHARU NAVIAH, I. L. R, 2 Cal. 354. [Markby and Prinsep, JJ. May 4, 1877.]

ACCUSED for several years cultivated land under a lease from the Forest Department which was renewed annually. During the period of his occupation accused built a dwelling-house, and made other improvements. The Forest Department requiring the land for conservation, accused was served with notice of ejectment, and he was told to remove the materials of his house. Accused refused to relinquish the land until payment of compensation for his improvements, whereupon he was criminally prosecuted by the Forest Department, and convicted by the Tahsildar of Kharian of criminal trespass under s. 447. Held that the conviction was illegal. In order to sustain a conviction for criminal trespass, it must be shown that the property was in the possession of some person other than the alleged trespasser.—CROWN v. FOUJDAR, Panj. Rec., No. 28 of 1878.

WHERE the accused persons (execution-creditors), in company with an authorized bailiff, broke open complainant's door before sunrise, with intent to distrain his property, for which they were convicted on a charge of lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, held that, as they were not guilty of the offence of criminal trespass, there being no finding of any such intent as is required to constitute that offence, and that as criminal trespass is an essential ingredient of either of the offences with which they were charged, the conviction must be quashed.—IN THE MATTER OF JOTHARAM DAVEY, I. L. R, 2 Mad. 30. [Innes and Muttusami Ayyar, JJ. Sep. 27, 1878.]

IF a person enters on land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bonâ-fide claim of right, and without any intention to intimidate, insult, or annoy such other person, or to commit an offence, then, though he may have no right to the land, he cannot be convicted of criminal trespass. So also, if a person deals injuriously with property in the bonâ-fide belief that it is his own, he cannot be convicted of mischief. The mere assertion, however, in such cases of a claim of right is not in itself a sufficient answer to charges of criminal trespass and mischief. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender, and if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bonâ-fide claim of right, then it cannot refuse to convict the offender, assuming that the other facts are established which constitute the offence. Where a person committed a trespass with the intention of committing mischief, thereby committing criminal trespass, and at the same time committed mischief, held that such person could not, under cl. 3 of s. 454 of Act X. of 1872, receive a punishment more severe than might have been awarded for either of such offences. The provisions of that law do not in such a case prohibit the Court from passing sentence in respect of each offence established.—EMPRESS v. BUDH SINGH, I. L. R., 2 All. 101. [Turner, J. Jan. 24, 1879.]

A, WHO had been warned off the lands of B, subsequently, having shot a deer near the boundary of B's land, and the deer having run on to B's land, followed it on to such land for the purpose of killing it. Held that his doing so was not a criminal trespass.—In re CHUNDOO NARAIN v. FARQUHARSON (J. G.), I. L. R., 4 Cal. 837. [Birch and Mitter, JJ. Mar. 28, 1879.]

CERTAIN immoveable property was the joint undivided property of C, G, and a certain other person. R obtained a decree against G for the possession of such property, and such property was delivered to him in the execution of that decree in accordance with the provisions of s. 264 of Act X. of 1877. C in good faith, with the intention of asserting her right, and without any intention to intimidate, insult, or annoy R, or to commit an offence, and G, in like manner, with the intention of asserting the right of his co-owners, remained on such property. Held that, under such circumstances, they could not be convicted of criminal trespass. Re-entry into, or remaining upon, land from which a person has been ejected by civil process, or of which possession has been given to another for the purpose of asserting rights he may have solely or jointly with other persons, is not criminal trespass, unless the intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy, is conclusively proved.—In re GOVIND PRASAD, I. L. R., 2 All. 465. [Straight, J. Oct. 15, 1879.]

A, THE servant of B, was convicted of criminal trespass, in going upon the land of C, one of B's tenants, and preventing him from cutting his crops. B was convicted of abetment of criminal trespass A and B pleaded that they were acting in the exercise of the legal right of distraint. It appeared that no written demand under s. 72 of the Rent Act (Ben. Act VIII of 1869) for the amount of the arrears, together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which demand had been made, was served on C, and that no written authority under s. 76 had been given by B to A. Held that it lay upon A and B to show that they had conformed to the provisions of the law, or at least had acted with the bonâ fide intention of distraining the complainant's crops; and that the conviction was right. Held also that, as under s. 74, standing crops and ungathered products may, notwithstanding distraint, be reaped and gathered by the cultivator. A had no right, even if he was acting bonâ fide, to restrain C from cutting his crops.—JHUMUK NONIAH v. SHUDASHIB ROY, I. L. R., 7 Cal. 26. [Pontifex and Field, JJ. Mar. 31, 1881.]

A PLEA of right to possession is no answer to a charge of rioting by making a forcible entry on land cultivated by a trespasser, who is in possession, and opposes the entry.—APPAVU v. QUEEN, I. L. R., 6 Mad. 245. [Innes, ]. Dec. 19, 1882.]

FISH in a public river cannot be said to be property in the possession of the person who may have the fishery-right, and the infringement of that right is not theft under s. 378 of the Penal Code. The accused were charged with unlawfully taking fish, along with some eleven others, in a public river, the right of fishing in which had been let out by the Government to the complainant, and the lower Court, amongst other offences, convicted them of theft, criminal misappropriation, mischief, criminal trespass, and unlawful assembly. Held that the conviction was wrong, and that no offence had been committed.—BHAGIRAM DOME v. ABAR DOME, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 388. [Norris and Ghose, JJ. Jan. 24, 1888.]

ACCUSED were charged with having taken fish from a tank belonging to the complainant, and convicted of theft and criminal trespass under ss. 379 and 447 of the Penal Code. It was found that the tank in question was not enclosed on all sides, and was dependent on the overflow of a neighbouring channel which was connected with flowing streams for its supply of fish; that the fish were not reared and preserved in the tank; and that the occurrence complained of took place at a time when the floods were high, and the tank was connected with the streams, so that the fish could leave it at pleasure. Held that the fish were feræ naturæ and not "the possession of" the complainant, and consequently no offence had been committed. Held further that, had the fish been taken at a time when they were restrained of their natural liberty, and were liable to be taken at the pleasure of the owner of the tank the conviction would have been upheld. The Meherpore case of 1887 (I. L. R. 15 Cal. 390) distinguished.—MAYA RAM SURMA v. NICHALA KATANI, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 402. [Norris and Ghose, JJ. Jan. 24, 1888.]

DURING the pendency of a civil suit, certain persons, on behalf of the plaintiff, went on to the premises belonging to the defendant for the purpose of making a survey, and for getting materials for a hostile application against the defendant. They went (some of them armed) without the permission of the defendant, and in his absence, and when the defendant's servants objected to their action, they persisted in their trespass, and endeavoured to prevent opposition by making false statements as to the authority under which they were acting. Held that their actions amounted to criminal trespass.—GOLAP PANDEY v. BODDAM, I. L. R., 16 Cal. 715 [Trevelyan and Beverley, JJ. June 3, 1889.]

TO constitute criminal trespass, there must be an intent to cause annoyance or to insult. Mere knowledge that such entry is likely to annoy is not sufficient The mere presence may be annoying, but unless a person is present with intent to annoy he has not committed criminal trespass.—In re PUNJAB SINGH, I. L. R., 6 Cal. 579 (at pp. 580—1). [Mitter and Maclean, JJ. Jan. 5. 1881.]

C, a rate-payer in a municipality, who had filed a petition against an assessment which, in his absence, had been dismissed, entered a room where a Committee of the Municipal Commissioners were seated, hearing and deciding petitions in assessment matters, ostensibly with the object of presenting a petition for the revision of his assessment. The Chairman of the Committee ordered him to leave the room, and on his refusal to do so he was turned out. Outside the room in the verandah, he addressed the crowd, complaining that no justice was to be obtained from the Committee. C was prosecuted on these facts at the instance of the Chairman of the Committee, and convicted of house-trespass under s. 448 of the Penal Code. Held that the conviction was wrong, and that no offence had been committed The prosecution was bound to prove, in order to support a conviction of a charge under s. 441 or 442, that the property trespassed upon was at the time in the possession of a complainant who could compound the offence under s. 345 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the complainant had failed to prove that the room was in his possession, and had, in fact, shown that he was merely sitting in it with other persons at the invitation and with the consent of the person, whoever he might be, who had the immediate right to such possession. Held, further, that, even if the complainant could be held to be in possession of the room, there was no evidence of any intent to commit an offence, or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person, it appearing that the object of the accused in going into and remaining in the room was to endeavour to induce the complainant and his colleagues to reconsider their decision, the verbal insult on which the conviction was based having been uttered after C had left the room.—CHANDI PERSHAD v. EVANS, I L. R., 22 Cal. 123 [Petheram, C.J., and Beverley, J Aug 13, 1894.]

ALTHOUGH a trespasser knows that his act, if discovered, will be likely to cause annoyance, it does not follow that he does the act with that intent.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAYAPADAYACHI, I. L. R., 19 Mad. 240. [Shephard and Davies, JJ. Jan. 9, 1896.]

AN order under s. 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, binding down the accused to keep the peace, upon conviction for "house-trespass" under s. 448 of the Penal Code, cannot stand where the intention of the accused for committing the trespass was to have illicit intercourse with the complainant's wife. The Queen v. Gendoo Khan (7 W. R. Cr. 14) and The Queen v. Thapoo (20 W. R. Cr. 37) distinguished. It is necessary, before an order under s. 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code can be made, that the accused should have an opportunity of answering to an accusation for an offence of the kind, upon a conviction for which such an order can be made.—SUBAL CHUNDER DEY v. RAM KANAI SANYASI, I. L. R., 25 Cal. 628. [Banerjee and Hill, JJ. Dec. 14, 1897.]

THE accused No. 1, who held a decree against a certain judgment-debtor, went with his son, accused No. 2, and a Civil Court bailiff to execute a warrant. Finding the door of the judgment-debtor's house shut, they entered his compound by passing through the complainant's house without his consent and notwithstanding his protest. Held that the accused's act amounted to criminal trespass for when they trespassed on the complainant's house notwithstanding his protest, they must, as reasonable men, have known that they would annoy him. There is no presumption that a person intends what is merely a possible result of his action or a result which though reasonably certain is not known to him to be so; but it must be presumed that when a man voluntarily does not an act, knowing at the time that in the natural course of events a certain result will follow, he intends to bring about that result. Queen v. Hicklin (1868, 3 Q. HOUSE-BREAKING by night and theft form a single and entire offence, and cannot be punished separately.—QUEEN v. TONAOKOCH, 2 W. R. 63. Jackson and Glover, JJ April 19, 1865.

PRISONER was convicted of house breaking, his object being to have sexual intercourse with complainant's wife Held conviction valid —PRO. Feb 26, 1875 8 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 6

UNDER ss 35 and 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate may legally pass a separate sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment and fine under each of the ss. 379 or 380 and 454 of the Penal Code for house-breaking in order to the commission of theft and theft, the two offences forming part of the same transaction, and being tried together. In such a case, where the prisoner had been three times previously convicted, held that the better course would have been to commit him to the Court of Session under ss 454-57 of the Code. But a Sessions Judge trying such a case under s. 379 or 380 and s. 454 would, under no circumstances, be justified in passing a sentence of ten years' imprisonment under the latter part of s. 454, and of four years' imprisonment under s. 380. HOUSE-BREAKING by night and theft form a single and entire offence, and cannot be punished separately.—QUEEN v. TONAOKOCH, 2 W. R. 63; 4 R. J. P. J. 563. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. April 19, 1865.]

A PERSON convicted of house-breaking, followed immediately by theft, is punishable only under s. 457 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. CHYTUN BOWRA, 5 W. R. 49. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. Mar. 5, 1866.]

THE splitting up of one aggravated offence into separate minor offences (e.g., a conviction for lurking house-trespass and theft under ss. 456 and 380 of the Penal Code, instead of for lurking house-trespass in order to commit theft under s. 457) prohibited. Where a Magistrate convicted under ss. 456 and 380, it was held that the Judge, on appeal, instead of setting aside the conviction, and sending the case back to the Magistrate for re-trial under ss. 457 and 380, ought only to have set aside the conviction under s. 380, and allowed the conviction under s. 456 to stand. [Norman, J., dubitante]—QUEEN v. RAM CHURN KAIREE, 6 W. R. 39. [Peacock, C.J., and Norman, Kemp, Seton-Karr, and Campbell, JJ. July 9, 1866.]

A CONVICTION for lurking house-trespass by night under s. 456 of the Penal Code is not bad for want of the specification of the intention in the charge, but one under s 457 cannot be sustained without such specification. In a charge under the former section, though a guilty intention must be proved, it is not necessary to prove which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in s. 441, though it may not be certain which it was. An accused person, the landlord of a house in which he occupied the lower flat, was found in the middle of the night in the room of the complainant, one of his tenants, upstairs, in which the complainant and his wife were at the time sleeping. Upon being detected the accused was subjected to very severe treatment, but did not utter a word of protestation of innocence or make any show of remonstrance, and when questioned said, "I have committed a fault: pardon me." He was arrested upon a charge under s. 456 of the Penal Code, the criminal intention alleged being that of committing theft. The charge framed by the Magistrate did not specify any intention, and the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the trespass was not committed by the accused, who was a wealthy man, with that intention. He found, however, that the complainant had suppressed some important facts, and that he was not in his wife's room when the accused entered it, and relying on the decision in Koilash Chandra Chakrabarty v. The Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 16 Cal. 657), he convicted the accused. On appeal the Sessions Judge, though finding that the Magistrate's views were against the evidence, upheld the conviction without finding what specifically was the intention with which the entry was made In revision, it was contended that the conviction was bad—(1) because no guilty intention was set out in the charge; (2) because no such intention was proved by the evidence; and (3) because no such intention was specifically found by the Sessions Judge. Held that the first contention was unsupportable for the reasons above stated. Even if it had been necessary to specify the intention in the charge, it would have to be shown under the provisions of s. 587 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that the omission had occasioned a failure of justice; and having regard to the nature of the charge and the line of defence adopted, the accused had not in any way been prejudiced in his defence. Held, as regards the second contention, that, though it was not certain what the precise intention of the accused was in committing the trespass, it was clear that it must have been with one or other of the intentions specified in s. 441 of the Penal Code, as judging from the time, the place, and manner in which the trespass was committed, and the conduct of the accused when discovered it was impossible to suppose that the trespass could have been committed either unintentionally or with any innocent intention, and that it must have been committed with the intention of committing some offence, but that the accused was entitled to have it taken that it was with the least possible culpable intention, namely, that of committing an offence under s. 509 of the Penal Code. Held, as regards the third contention, that, in exercising its powers under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it is open to the High Court to alter any finding and confirm a conviction, and that, if the evidence on the record in a case be sufficient to warrant a conviction, the Court would not be justified in setting such conviction aside, merely because the view taken of the evidence by the lower Court is not sustainable, or some fact which ought to have been found by that Court is not found or found incorrectly.—BALMAKAND RAM v. GHANSAMRAM, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 391. [Banerjee and Sale, JJ. Oct. 27, 1894.]

THE accused in the middle of the night effected an entry into a room occupied by four women. On an alarm being given, and an attempt made to capture him, he escaped. He was charged with an offence under s. 456 of the Penal Code. The defence set up was disbelieved by both the lower Courts Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the room, but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there The lower Courts convicted the accused under s. 456. It was contended that, as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence, the conviction was illegal. Held that the facts proved were good evidence of an intent and of an intrusion on privacy within the meaning of s. 509 of the Penal Code, and that therefore the intent to commit an offence within the meaning of s. 441 was made out Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram (I. L. R., 22 Cal. 391) followed —PREMANUNDO SHAHA v BRINDABUN CHUNG, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 994. [Pigot and Banerjee, JJ. July 22, 1895.]

Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment.

EVERY person, whether within or without the Presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under s. 457 of the Penal Code, shall forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention.—CRIM. PRO. CODE (Act V. of 1898), s. 44.

IN drawing up a charge under s. 457, it is essential to mention the offence which the trespasser intended to commit.—2 W. R., Cr. L. 13, No. 1119 of 1864.

A PRISONER who, in the commission of lurking house-trespass by night, voluntarily attempts to cause grievous hurt to the owner of the house who tries to capture him, is punishable under s. 460, and not under ss. 457 and 324 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. LUKHUN DOSS, 2 W. HOUSE-BREAKING by night and theft form a single offence, and cannot be punished separately, but under s. 457.—QUEEN v. TONAOKOCH, 2 W. R. 63: 4 R. J. P. J. 563 [Jackson and Glover, JJ. April 19, 1865.]

S. 71 of the Penal Code applies to the case of a person charged with "house-breaking" under s. 457, and "theft" committed under s. 380.—IN THE MATTER OF RAM GOLAM SINGH, 6 W. R. 59. [Loch and Jackson, JJ. Aug. 27, 1866.]

IN the case of a conviction of attempting to commit house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, a sentence of whipping was annulled as being illegal.—REG. v. YELLAVALAD PARSHIA, 3 Bom. H. C. R. 37. [Couch, C. J., and Newton, J. Nov. 21, 1866.]

SEPARATE convictions and sentences under ss. 494 and 397, and under ss. 457 and 380 of the Penal Code, were set aside, and the convictions under s. 429 in the former case, and under s. 457 in the latter, allowed to stand.—QUEEN v. SAHRAE, 8 W. R. 31. [Jackson and Hobhouse, JJ. July 1, 1867.]

WHERE facts prove (1) a house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, and (2) theft in a building, it is not necessary to divide the charge into two counts. The actual commission of the theft is conclusive evidence of the intent, and it is therefore sufficient to convict for the major offence under s. 457.—Mad. H. C. R., Jan. 20, 1868; 2 Mad. Jur. 77, see too Queen v. Sahrae, 8 W. R. 31.

WHERE a First-class Subordinate Magistrate sentenced a prisoner to six months' rigorous imprisonment under s. 457 of the Penal Code, and, finding that the prisoner was liable to enhanced punishment under s. 75 of the Penal Code, sentenced the prisoner to six months further imprisonment under s. 46 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV. of 1861), the latter sentence was set aside by the High Court.—PRO., Nov. 2, 1869, 5 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 3.

HELD that, where, in the course of one and the same transaction, an accused person appears to have committed several acts, directed to one end and object, which together amount to a more serious offence than each of them taken individually by itself would constitute, although for purposes of trial it may be convenient to vary the form of charge, and to designate not only the principal but the subsidiary crimes alleged to have been committed, yet, in the interests of simplicity and convenience, it is best to concentrate the conviction and sentence on the gravest offence proved. Where, therefore, a person who broke into a house by night, and committed theft therein, was charged and tried for offences under ss. 380 and 457 of the Penal Code, and was convicted of both those offences, and punished for each with rigorous imprisonment for 18 months, the Court convicted him of the offence under s. 457, and sentenced him to rigorous imprisonment for three years, and acquitted him of the offence under s. 380.—EMPRESS v. AJUDHIA, I. L. R., 2 All. 644. [Straight, J. Jan. 19, 1880.]

THE accused was convicted at one trial by a Magistrate of the first class of the offences of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, punishable under s. 457, and of theft in a dwelling-house, punishable under s. 380 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), the two offences being part of the same transaction, the theft following the house-breaking. The prisoner was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 457, and to six months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 100, or, in default of payment, three months' further rigorous imprisonment under s. 380. The District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court, on the ground that the aggregate of punishment awarded on the two heads of charge exceeded the powers of the First-class Magistrate who tried the case. The Sessions Judge, to whom an appeal had been preferred, was of the same opinion, and reduced the sentence to two years' rigorous imprisonment. Held that, as the accused committed two distinct offences which did not "constitute, when combined, a different offence," punishable under any section of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), s 71 of the Code did not apply, and as the aggregate punishment did not exceed twice the amount of punishment which the trying Magistrate was competent to inflict, the sentences were legal under s. 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882). Per Jardine, J. The rules for assessment of punishment contained in s 454 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1872, having been omitted in s 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882, must now be sought for in s. 71 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), and in s. 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882).—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SAKHARAM BHAU, I. L. R., 10 Bom 493 [Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Feb. 1886.]

AN accused person was convicted under s. 457 of the Penal Code of house-breaking by night in order to commit an offence (mischief and assault), and also under ss. 426 and 352 for the offences of mischief and assault, and punished separately for each offence. These offences formed parts of one transaction. Held that the sentences were legal.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIRICHAN, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 36. [Kernan and Muttusami Ayyar, JJ. April 17, 1888.]

A COURT has no power under s. 395 of the Criminal Procedure Code to revise its sentence of whipping by inflicting a fine. In cases where the sentence of whipping cannot be carried out, all that the Court can do is either to remit the whipping altogether, or to sentence the offender, in lieu of such whipping, or of so much of the sentence of whipping as was not carried out, to imprisonment, &c. The word "imprisonment" in s. 395 of the Criminal Procedure Code means a substantive sentence of imprisonment, and not imprisonment for default in payment of a fine.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SHEODIN, I. L. R., 11 All. 308. Straight, J. Jan. 5, 1889.]

A CONVICTION for lurking house-trespass by night under s. 456 of the Penal Code is not bad for want of the specification of the intention in the charge, but one under s. 457 cannot be sustained without such specification. In a charge under the former section, though a guilty intention must be proved, it is not necessary to prove which of the several guilty intentions the accused had, it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in s 441, though it may not be certain which it was. An accused person, the landlord of a house in which he occupied the lower flat, was found in the middle of the night in the room of the complainant, one of his tenants, upstairs, in which the complainant and his wife were at the time sleeping. Upon being detected the accused was subjected to very severe treatment, but did not utter a word of protestation of innocence or make any show of remonstrance, and when questioned said, "I have committed a fault: pardon me." He was arrested upon a charge under s. 456 of the Penal Code, the criminal intention alleged being that of committing theft. The charge framed by the Magistrate did not specify any intention, and the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the trespass was not committed by the accused, who was a wealthy man, with that intention. He found, however, that the complainant had suppressed some important facts, and that he was not in his wife's room when the accused entered it, and relying on the decision in Koilash Chandra Chakrabarty v. The Queen-Empress (I. finding that the Magistrate's views were against the evidence, upheld the conviction without finding what specifically was the intention with which the entry was made. In revision, it was contended that the conviction was bad—(1) because no guilty intention was set out in the charge; (2) because no such intention was proved by the evidence; and (3) because no such intention was specifically found by the Sessions Judge. Held that the first contention was unsupportable for the reasons above stated Even if it had been necessary to specify the intention in the charge, it would have to be shown under the provisions of s. 587 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that the omission had occasioned a failure of justice; and having regard to the nature of the charge and the line of defence adopted, the accused had not in any way been prejudiced in his defence Held, as regards the second contention, that, though it was not certain what the precise intention of the accused was in committing the trespass, it was clear that it must have been with one or other of the intentions specified in s 441 of the Penal Code, as, judging from the time, the place, and manner in which the trespass was committed, and the conduct of the accused when discovered, it was impossible to suppose that the trespass could have been committed either unintentionally or with any innocent intention, and that it must have been committed with the intention of committing some offence, but that the accused was entitled to have it taken that it was with the least possible culpable intention, namely, that of committing an offence under s. 509 of the Penal Code. Held as regards the third contention, that, in exercising its powers under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it is open to the High Court to alter any finding and confirm a conviction, and that, if the evidence on the record in a case be sufficient to warrant a conviction, the Court would not be justified in setting such conviction aside, merely because the view taken of the evidence by the lower Court is not sustainable, or some fact which ought to have been found by that Court is not found or found incorrectly.—BALMAKAND RAM v. GHANSAMRAM, I. S 75 of Act XLV. of 1860 does not apply to the case of an attempt to commit the offence punishable under s. 457 of the Code, after previous convictions of offences falling within Ch. XII. or Ch. XVII., such offence being punishable under s. 511. Sheo Saran Tato v. The Empress (I. L. R., 9 Cal. 877), Empress of India v. Ram Dayal (I. L. R., 3 All. 773), Empress v Nana Rahim (I L. WHERE, on a charge under s. 457 of the Penal Code, it was proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the accused did enter the complainant's house in order to have sexual intercourse with a woman whom he knew was the wife of the complainant, and further that he did so without the husband's consent, and the accused was convicted, it was held that the conviction was proper. It was not necessary under the circumstances that the complainant should bring a specific charge of adultery Brijbasi v. The Queen-Empress (I. L. A DEPUTY MAGISTRATE has no power to convict of theft (s. 380), where the offence charged is lurking house-trespass by night with aggravating circumstances (ss. 458 and 459), but must commit on the latter charge. —PURAN TELER v. BHUTTOO DOME, 9 W. R. 5. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Jan. 13. 1869.]

WHEN the door of a shop was found broken open, held that the conviction should have been for house-breaking by night, and not simply lurking house-trespass by night.—QUEEN v. KENARAM BOUSEE, 4 W. R. 19. [Glover, J. Oct. 25, 1865.]

IN a case of conviction of house-breaking by night in order to commit theft under s. 457, and theft under s. 380 of the Penal Code, there may be either one sentence for both offences, or separate sentences for each offence, provided that the total punishment awarded does not exceed that which may be given for the graver offence.—REG. v. TUKAYA BIN TAMANA, I. L. R., 1 Bom. 214. [Westropp, C.J., and Kemball, West, and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Sep. 14, 1875.]

To support a charge under s. 459 (causing grievous hurt, &c., whilst committing house-breaking) or s. 460 (causing grievous hurt, &c., at the time of committing house-breaking), the grievous hurt must be caused or the attempt must be made during the time that the house-breaking is being committed, and not after that offence is completed, and the offender has left the premises.—IMAMUDDIN v. CROWN, Panj Rec., No. 17 of 1876.

Ss. 459 and 460 of the Penal Code provide for a compound offence, the governing incident of which is that either a "lurking house-trespass" or "house breaking" must have been completed, in order to make a person who accompanies that offence either by causing grievous hurt or attempt to cause death or grievous hurt responsible under those sections. The sections must be construed strictly, and they are not applicable where the principal act done by the accused person amounts to no more than a mere attempt to commit lurking house-trespass or house-breaking.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ISMAIL KHAN I. L. R. 8 All 649. [Straight, Offg. C.J. Aug. 9, 1886.]

All persons jointly concerned in lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night punishable where death or grievous hurt caused by one of them.

460. If, at the time of the committing of lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, any person guilty of such offence shall voluntarily cause or attempt to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, every person jointly concerned in committing such lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

EVERY person, whether within or without the Presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under s. 460 of the Penal Code, shall forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention.—CRIM. PRO. CODE (Act V. of 1898), s. 44.

A PERSON who, in the commission of lurking house-trespass by night, voluntarily attempts to cause grievous hurt to the owner of the house who tries to capture him, is punishable under s. 460, and not under ss. 457 and 324 of the Penal Code. —QUEEN v. LUKHUN DOSS, 2 W. R. 52. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. April 1, 1865.]

THE appellants and another person attempted to break into a house by night for the purpose of committing theft, and were interrupted by the inmates, one of whom was killed by one of the accused. There was no evidence to show which of the accused caused death. Held that the appellants could not be punished with transportation for life under s. 460, as the offence of house-breaking had been attempted only, and not committed.—SAIFUDIN v. CROWN, Panj. Rec. No. 16 of 1874.

To support a charge under s. 459 (causing grievous hurt, &c., whilst committing house-breaking), or s. 460 (causing grievous hurt, &c., at the time of committing house-breaking), the grievous hurt must be caused, or the attempt must be made during the time that the house-breaking is being committed and not after the offence is completed, and the offender has left the premises.—IMAMUDDIN v. CROWN, Panj. Rec. No. 17 of 1876.

CRIMINAL COURTS dealing with an approver's evidence in a case where several persons are charged should require corroboration of his statements in respect of the identity of each of the individuals accused. Queen-Empress v. Ram Saran (I. L. R., 8 All. 306), Queen-Empress v. Kure (2 Weekly Notes, 1886, p. 65), and Reg. v. Mullins (3 Cox C C. 526) referred to. A, B, M, R, and N, were tried together on a charge under s 460 of the Penal Code. The principal evidence against all of them was that of an approver. Against A, B, and M, there was the further evidence that they produced certain portions of the property stolen on the night of the crime from the house where the crime was committed. With regard to R, it was proved that he was present when B pointed out the place where some of the property was dug up, but he did not appear to have said anything or give any directions about it. Held with reference to A, B, and M, that it could not be said that their recent possession of part of the stolen property, so soon after it had been stolen, was not such corroboration of the approver's evidence of their participation in the crime as entitled the Court to act upon his story in regard to those particular persons. Held that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient material to warrant the inference of guilty knowledge on R's part, and, with regard to N, no property was found with him or produced through his instrumentality, both R and N ought to have been acquitted — QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BALDEO, I. L. R., 8 All. 509. [Straight, Offg. C J. June 28, 1886.]

461. Whoever dishonestly, or with intent to commit mischief, breaks open or unfastens any closed receptacle, which contains, or which he believes to contain, property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

ACCORDING to the definition given in s. 442, a large circular receptacle for grain made of straw, with an opening in the top, and situated in a backyard, is not "a place for the custody of property," and therefore the offence of house-breaking cannot be committed in respect of it; but the offence really committed was the dishonestly breaking open a closed receptacle containing property.—Mad. H. C. Rul. 1865, on s. 457.

462. Whoever, being entrusted with any closed receptacle which contains, or which he believes to contain, property without having authority to open the same, dishonestly, or with intent to commit mischief, breaks open or unfastens that receptacle, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO DOCUMENTS* AND TO TRADE OR PROPERTY-MARKS.*

463. Whoever makes any false document or part of a document with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person, or to support any claim or title, or to cause any person to part with property, or to enter into any express or implied contract, or with intent to commit fraud, or that fraud may be committed, commits forgery.

Forgery.

As to procedure in case of offences described in s. 463, 471, 474, 475, 476, or 477, see the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882), s. 643.

As to whipping for the offences defined in ss. 463, 466, 469, see the Whipping Act (VI. of 1864), ss. 4, 6.

THE forgery of a copy of a document comes within the definition of forgery as contained in s. 463 of the Penal Code.—ESHAN CHUNDER DUTT v. PRAN NATH CHOWDHRY, W. R. Gap, 1864, 71; Marsh, R. 270. [Peacock, C.J., and Bayley and Kemp, JJ. Feb. 9, 1863.]

THE making of a fraudulent document without any criminal intent has been held to be no offence under this Code.—3 W. R. Cr. L. 18, No. 689 of 1865.

THE fraudulent preparation of a deed intending to cause injury to certain parties is not forgery unless such deed is a false document.—5 W. R. Cr. L. 2, No 157 of 1866.

THE signing of a vakalatnama in the name of co-decree-holders without their authority to do so, and delivering it to a vakil, with instructions to file a petition, stating that the debt had been satisfied, and praying that the case may be struck off the file, is forgery within the meaning of s 463 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. GAYNEE RAM, 6 W. R. 78. [Markby, J. Sep. 27, 1866.]

WHERE a prisoner, who appealed to the Commissioner from an order of an assessor under Act XXI. of 1867, filed a stamp-paper for a copy of the assessor's decision after the period of appeal had elapsed, but on appeal averred that he filed the stamp-paper before the time for appealing had elapsed, and fraudulently obtained a certificate to that effect which was antedated, it was held that he was guilty of having abetted the commission of a forgery of a document within s. 463 and s. 464, cl. 1, of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. SOOKMOY GHOSE, 10 W. R. 23. [Loch and Glover, JJ. July 25, 1868.]

THE simple making of a false document constitutes the offence of forgery under s. 463 of the Penal Code, and it is not necessary that it should be issued or made known to the injury of a person's reputation either by being presented in Court, or shown to any person. A false document may be made in the name of a fictitious person. Where a draft-petition was prepared with the intention of being used as evidence of a matter, it was held that it fell within the terms of s. 29 of the Penal Code, and as it contained false statements calculated to injure the reputation of a person, the offence was held to fall within s. 469 of the Penal Code.—In re SHEEFAIT ALLY, 10 W. R. 61; 2 B. L. R. A. Cr. 12. [Loch and Glover, JJ. Dec 14, 1868.]

A SPECIALLY registered bond was presented before the Small Cause Court Judge for execution under s. 53, Act XX. of 1866, and a decree passed upon it in the usual form. Subsequently the Registrar sanctioned the prosecution of the decree-holder, on the ground that the bond was a forgery. The Small Cause Court Judge thereupon, on application made, without taking any evidence or making further inquiry, set aside the decree, and sanctioned the prosecution under s. 170 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV. of 1861). Held that he was justified in sanctioning the prosecution, but not in setting aside the decree.—QUEEN v. NAWAB SING, 3 B. L. R., A. Cr. 9. [Norman and Jackson, JJ. April 2, 1869.]

THE subsequent falsification of a roznamcha-bahi kept in the office of a Deputy Inspector of Schools by the mohurrir in charge thereof for the purpose of concealing frauds previously committed, merely with a view to avoid disgrace and punishment, held not to fall within the definition of forgery as given in the Penal Code. Appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge of Goruckpore.—QUEEN v. JOGESHUR PERSHAD, 6 N.-W. P. 56. [Pearson, J. Dec. 20, 1873.]

A SIGNED B's name to petitions presented by C to the Mamlatdar requesting his summary assistance, under Reg. XVII. of 1827, for the recovery of rents from B's tenants. Held that, even if A had no authority from B to sign his name, and if A wished to deceive the Mamlatdar into the belief that it was B himself who had signed the petitions, still, if there had been no intention to defraud anybody, or if no wrongful gain or wrongful loss could have been caused to A or B, A's act did not constitute forgery within the meaning of the Penal Code. Avoidance of litigation is no wrongful loss to Government. —REG. v. BHAVANISHANKAR, 11 Bom. H. C. R 3. [Melvill and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Feb. 19, 1874.]

FALSIFICATION of a record made in order to conceal a previous act of negligence not amounting to fraud does not amount to forgery within the meaning of ss. 463 and 464 of the Penal Code.—EMPRESS v. SHANKAR, I. L. R., 4 Bom. 657. [Kemball and Melvill, JJ. July 19, 1880.]

THAT which constitutes a false document within the meaning of ss. 463 and 464 of the Penal Code is not the writing of any number of words which in themselves are innocent, but the affixing the seal or signature of some other person to the document with a knowledge that the seal or signature is not his, and that he gave no authority to affix it. A person, therefore, who has given orders for the printing of certain receipt-forms similar to those formerly used by a certain company, and corrected the proofs of the same, it being his intention to use the receipt-forms in order to commit a fraud, cannot be convicted of forgery until one of the printed forms has been converted by him into a false document, nor of an attempt to commit forgery until he had done some act towards making one of the forms a false document. Until a form had been converted into a false document, all that was done consisted in mere preparation for the commission of an offence. An attempt to commit an offence must be to do that which, if successful, would amount to the offence. Per Garth, C.J.. The fact that the word "make" is used in s. 464 of the Penal Code in conjunction with the words "sign," "seal," or "execute," clearly denotes that the making of a document does not mean writing or printing it, but signing or otherwise executing it.—IN THE MATTER OF RIASAT ALI, alias BABU MIYA, alias BODIUZZUMA: EMPRESS v. RIASAT ALI, alias BABU MIYA, alias BODIUZZUMA, I. L. R., 7 Cal. 352; 8 C. L. R. 572. [Garth, C.J., and Prinsep, J. June 3, 1881.]

ON the 2nd August 1884, a Munsif, who was of opinion that, in the course of a suit which had been tried before him, certain persons had committed offences under ss 193, 463, and 471 of the Penal Code, and that the prosecution of these persons was desirable, made an order which he described as passed under s. 643 of the Civil Procedure Code, and in which he directed that the accused should be sent to the Magistrate, and that the Magistrate should inquire into the matter. In May 1885, upon an application by one of the accused to the District Court to "revoke the sanction for prosecution granted by the Munsif," it was contended that the "sanction" had expired on the 2nd February 1885, and had ceased to have effect. Held by the Full Bench that the Munsif's order, whether it was or was not a sanction, was a sufficient "complaint" within the meaning of s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that the limitation-period prescribed by that section was applicable to the case. Per Petheram, C.J., and Straight, J.: That considering that s. 643 of the Civil Procedure Code was closely similar to s. 470 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Munsif's order might be taken as having been passed under the latter section. Also per Petheram, C.J., and Straight, J.: The words in s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, "except with the previous sanction or on the complaint of the public servant concerned," must be read in connection with s. 476, which was enacted with the object of avoiding the inconvenience which might be caused if a Munsif, or a Subordinate Judge, or a Judge were obliged to appear before a Magistrate, and make a complaint on oath, like an ordinary complainant, in order to lay the foundation for a prosecution. The language of s. 476 indicates that, where a Court is acting under s. 195, a complaint in the strict sense of the Code is not required, and that the procedure therein laid down constitutes the "complaint" mentioned in s. 195.—ISHRI PROSAD v. SHAM LALL, I. L. R., 7 All. 871. [Petheram, C.J., and Straight, Brodhurst, and Tyrrell, JJ. July 4, 1885.]

A SUB-REGISTRAR under the Registration Act (III. of 1877) is not a Judge, and, therefore, not a "Court" within the meaning of s. 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882). His sanction is, therefore, not necessary for a prosecution for forgery in respect of a forged document presented for registration in his office. The word "forgery" is used as a general term in s. 463 of the Penal Code and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882) so as to embrace all species of forgery, and thus includes a case falling under s. 467 of the Penal Code. The definition of "Court" given in the Evidence Act (I of 1872) is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself, and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. Distinction between a judicial and an administrative inquiry pointed out.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TULJA, I. L. R., 12 Bom. 36 [West and Birdwood, JJ. July 14, 1887.]

PRISONER was requested to make an entry in a book of account belonging to the complainant to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of accounts; instead of making this entry as requested, prisoner entered in a language not known to complainant that this sum had been paid to complainant. He was convicted of forgery under s. 465 of the Penal Code Held that the offence was not forgery, but an attempt to cheat.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KUNJU NAYAR, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 114 [Muttusami Ayyar and Shephard, JJ. Sep 9, 20, 1888.]

A FALSELY represented himself to be B at a university examination, got a hall-ticket under B's name, and headed and signed answer-papers to questions with B's name. Held that A committed the offences of forgery and cheating by personation.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. APPASAMI, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 151. [Collins, C.J., and Parker, J. Jan. 18, 1889.] Approved in Queen-Empress v. Soshi Bhushan, I. L. R., 15 All. 210, infra.

THE term "claim" in s. 463 of the Penal Code is not limited in its application to a claim to property. The term "property" in the same section will cover a written certificate. It is not necessary to constitute a forgery under s. 463 of the Penal Code that the property with which it is intended that the false document shall cause a person to part should be in existence at the time when the false document was made. Queen-Empress v. Haradhan (I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380) dissented from. Queen-Empress v. Appasami (I. L. R., 12 Mad. 151) and Queen-Empress v. Ganesh Khanderao and Ganesh Daulat (I. L. R., 15 Bom. 506) approved. One S B presented to the Principal of Queen's College, Benares, a false certificate purporting to have been granted by the Principal of Canning College, Lucknow, to the effect that he had attended a certain proportion of a certain first-year course of law-lectures delivered at Canning College, S B, in fact, never having attended such lectures. Had that certificate been a true one, it would have entitled S B to attend a further course of law-lectures at any one of several associated institutions amongst which was Queen's College, Benares, without attending or paying the fees for the first course of lectures. On presentation of the above certificate S B obtained permission to attend, and attended, a course of second-year lectures at Queen's College, Benares, without attending or paying the fees required for the first-year course. After S B had attended the abovementioned second-year course of lectures at Queen's College, Benares, he again presented the said false certificate to the Principal of Queen's College with a view to his obtaining a consolidated certificate, which was necessary, as he alleged to enable him to become a candidate in the Judge's Court pleadership examination in Calcutta. Held that on both occasions, when he presented the false certificate to obtain admission to the second-year law-class at Queen's College, Benares, and again when he endeavoured by its use to obtain the consolidated certificate in order to gain admission to the pleadership examination in Calcutta, S B was guilty of the offence provided for by s. 471 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SOSHI BHUSHAN, I. L. R., 15 All. 210. [Edge, C.J., and Aikman, J. April 29, 1893.] See Lolit Mohan Sarkar v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 313, under s. 408.

THE accused applied to the Superintendent of Police at Poona for employment in the police-force. In support of this application he presented two certificates which he knew to be false. One of these certificates was a wholly fabricated document, whilst the other was altered by several additions made subsequently to the issue of the certificate. Held that the accused was guilty of offences under ss 463 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KHANDUSINGH, I. L. R., 22 Bom. 768. [Parsons and Ranade, JJ. Dec. 17 1896.]

DEPRIVATION of property, actual or intended, is not an essential element in the offence of fraudulently using as genuine a document which the accused knew or had reason to believe to be false. Queen-Empress v. Haradhan (I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380) overruled.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ABBAS ALI, I. L. R., 25 Cal. 512. [Maclean, C.J., and O'Kinealy, Macpherson, Prevelyan and Jenkins, JJ. Dec. 22, 23, 1896, and Jan 29, 1897.]

Making a false document.

464. A person is said to make a false document—

First—Who dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals, or executes a document or part of a document, or makes any mark denoting the executing of a document, with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document or part of a document was made, signed, sealed, or executed by, or by the authority of, a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed, or executed, or at a time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed, or executed ; or

Secondly—Who, without lawful authority, dishonestly or fraudulently, by cancellation or otherwise, alters a document in any material part thereof, after it has been made or executed either by himself or by any other person, whether such person be living or dead at the time of such alteration ; or

Thirdly—Who dishonestly or fraudulently causes any person to sign, seal, execute, or alter a document, knowing that such person, by reason of unsoundness of mind or intoxication, cannot, or that, by reason of deception practised upon him, he does not, know the contents of the document or the nature of the alteration.

Illustrations.

(a.) A has a letter of credit upon B for Rs. 10,000 written by Z. A, in order to defraud B, adds a cipher to the 10,000, and makes the sum 1,00,000, intending that it may be believed by B that Z so wrote the letter. A has committed forgery.

(b.) A, without Z's authority, affixes Z's seal to a document purporting to be a conveyance of an estate from Z to A, with the intention of selling the estate to B, and thereby of obtaining from B the purchase-money. A has committed forgery.

(c.) A picks up a cheque on a banker signed by B, payable to bearer, but without any sum having been inserted in the cheque. A fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of ten thousand rupees. A commits forgery.

(d.) A leaves with B, his agent, a cheque on a banker signed by A, without inserting the sum payable, and authorizes B to fill up the cheque by inserting a sum not exceeding ten thousand rupees for the purpose of making certain payments. B fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of twenty thousand rupees. B commits forgery.

(e.) A draws a bill of exchange on himself in the name of B without B's authority, intending to discount it as a genuine bill with a banker, and intending to take up the bill on its maturity. Here, as A draws the bill with intent to deceive the banker by leading him to suppose that he had the security of B, and thereby to discount the bill, A is guilty of forgery.

(f.) Z's will contains these words: "I direct that all my remaining property be equally divided between A, B, and C." A dishonestly scratches out B's name, intending that it may be believed that the whole was left to himself and C. A has committed forgery.

(g.) A endorses a Government promissory note, and makes it payable to Z or his order, by writing on the bill the words, "Pay to Z or his order," and signing the endorsement. B dishonestly erases the words, "Pay to Z or his order," and thereby converts the special endorsement into a blank endorsement. B commits forgery.

(h.) A sells and conveys an estate to Z. A afterwards, in order to defraud Z of his estate, executes a conveyance of the same estate to B, dated six months earlier than the date of the conveyance to Z, intending it to be believed that he had conveyed the estate to B before he conveyed it to Z. A has committed forgery.

(i.) Z dictates his will to A. A intentionally writes down a different legatee from the legatee named by Z, and, by representing to Z that he has prepared the will according to his instructions, induces Z to sign the will. A has committed forgery.

(j.) A writes a letter, and signs it with B's name without B's authority, certifying that A is a man of good character and in distressed circumstances from unforeseen misfortune, intending by means of such letter to obtain alms from Z and other persons. Here, as A made a false document in order to induce Z to part with property, A has committed forgery.

(k.) A, without B's authority, writes a letter, and signs it in B's name, certifying to A's character, intending thereby to obtain employment under Z. A has committed forgery, inasmuch as he intended to deceive Z by the forged certificate, and thereby to induce Z to enter into an express or implied contract for service.

Explanation 1.—A man's signature of his own name may amount to forgery.

Illustrations.

(a.) A signs his own name to a bill of exchange, intending that it may be believed that the bill was drawn by another person of the same name.

(b.) A writes the word "accepted" on a piece of paper, and signs it with Z's name, in order that B may afterwards write on the paper a bill of exchange drawn by B upon Z, and negotiate the bill as though it had been accepted by Z. A is guilty of forgery, and if B, knowing the fact, draws the bill upon the paper pursuant to A's intention, B is also guilty of forgery.

(c.) A picks up a bill of exchange payable to the order of a different person of the same name. A endorses the bill in his own name, intending to cause it to be believed that it was endorsed by the person to whose order it was payable. Here A has committed forgery.

(d.) A purchases an estate sold under execution of a decree against B. B, after the seizure of the estate, in collusion with Z, executes a lease of the estate to Z at a nominal rent and for a long period, and dates the lease six months prior to the seizure, with intent to defraud A, and to cause it to be believed that the lease was granted before the seizure. B, though he executes the lease in his own name, commits forgery by antedating it.

(e.) A, a trader, in anticipation of insolvency, lodges effects with B for A's benefit, and with intent to defraud his creditors, and, in order to give a colour to the transaction, writes a promissory-note binding himself to pay to B a sum for value received, and antedates the note, intending that it may be believed to have been made before A was on the point of insolvency. A has committed forgery under the first head of the definition.

Explanation 2.—The making of a false document in the name of a fictitious person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by a real person, or in the name of a deceased person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by the person in his lifetime, may amount to forgery.

Illustration.

A draws a bill of exchange upon a fictitious person, and fraudulently accepts the bill in the name of such fictitious person with intent to negotiate it. A commits forgery.

IT must be proved that the accused practised deception so as to prevent a person from knowing the nature of the document before the accused can be found guilty under s. 464 of the Penal Code of making a false document.—QUEEN v. NUJEEBI TOOLLAH, 9 W. R. 20. [Jackson, J. Feb. 20, 1868.]

WHERE a prisoner, who appealed to the Commissioner from an order of an assessor under Act XXI. of 1867, filed a stamp-paper for a copy of the assessor's decision after the period of appeal had elapsed, but on appeal averred that he filed the stamp-paper before the time for appealing had elapsed, and fraudulently obtained a certificate to that effect which was antedated, it was held that he was guilty of having abetted the commission of forgery of a document within s. 463 and s. 464, cl. 1, of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. SOOKMOY GHOSE, 10 W. WHERE prisoner, to screen his own negligence, altered an office-report, such conduct does not fall within the definition of forgery in the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. LALL GUMAL, 2 N.-W. P. 11. [Turner and Spankie, JJ. Jan. 18, 1870.]

WHERE the accused, a mohurrir in a registry-office, was charged with making false endorsements of registry on the back of certain deeds, which endorsements were signed by the registrar, it was held that, before he could be convicted of forgery under part III., s. 464, Penal Code, it must be shown that the registrar, in consequence of deception practised upon him by the accused, did not know the contents of the document he was signing. Money received by a mohurrir appointed under the Registration Act (IX. of 1862, B. C.) by way of fees for registering deeds is money entrusted to him as a public servant.—QUEEN v. DWARKA NATH GHOSE, 20 W. R. 49. [Glover and Birch, JJ. July 9, 1873.]

A MISREPRESENTATION by false description of one's position in life falls under the heading of cheating, and not under that of forgery. Where, therefore, a document purported to have been signed by "G L, patwari," and it was said that it was signed by G L, but at a time when G L was not a patwari, it was held that the document was not a forgery within s. 464 of the Penal Code.—JOY KURN SINGH v. MAN PATUCK, 21 W. R. 41. [Kemp and Ainslie, JJ. Feb. 17, 1874.]

FALSIFICATION of a record made in order to conceal a previous act of negligence not amounting to fraud does not amount to forgery within the meaning of ss. 463 and 464.—EMPRESS v. SHANKER, I. L. R., 4 Bom. 657. [Kemball and Melvill, JJ. July 19, 1880.]

WHERE the date of a document, which would otherwise not have been presented for registration within time, is altered for the purpose of getting it registered, the offence committed is not forgery, where there is nothing to show that it was done "dishonestly or fraudulently," within cl. 2, s. 464, of the

Penal Code, but fabricating false evidence within s. 192.—In re MIR EKRAR ALI. EMPRESS v. MIR EKRAR ALI, I. L. R., 6 Cal. 482. [Garth, C.J., and Field, J. Dec. 3, 1880.]

THAT which constitutes a false document within the meaning of ss. 463 and 464 of the Penal Code is not the writing of any number of words which in themselves are innocent, but the affixing the seal or signature of some other person to the document with a knowledge that the seal or signature is not his, and that he gave no authority to affix it. A person, therefore, who has given orders for the printing of certain receipt-forms similar to those formerly used by a certain company, and corrected the proofs of the same, it being his intention to use the receipt-forms in order to commit a fraud, cannot be convicted of forgery until one of the printed forms has been converted by him into a false document, nor of an attempt to commit forgery until he had done some act towards making one of the forms a false document. Until a form had been converted into a false document, all that was done consisted in mere preparation for the commission of an offence. An attempt to commit an offence must be to do that which, if successful, would amount to the offence charged. Per Garth, C.J. The fact that the word "make" is used in s. 464 of the Penal Code in conjunction with the words "sign," "seal," or "execute," clearly denotes that the making of a document does not mean writing or printing it, but signing or otherwise executing it.—In re RIASAT ALI, alias BABU MIYA, alias BODHUZZUMA, EMPRESS v. RIASAT ALI, alias BABU MIYA alias BODHUZZUMA, I. THE vendees of a plot of land altered the number by which the land was described in the deed of sale, doing so because such number was not the right number. Having made this alteration, they used the deed of sale as evidence in a suit. Held that the alteration of the deed did not amount to "forgery" within the meaning of s. 463 of the Penal Code, nor could the deed, after the alteration, be designated a "forged document" as contemplated by s. 470, the intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain, or to defraud, being wanting, nor could it be said that, in using the deed, the vendees were "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" using as genuine a "forged document," and therefore the use by the vendees of the deed did not constitute any offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code. Further, that their use of it did not render them liable to conviction under s. 196 of that Code.—EMPRESS v. FATEH, I. L. R., 5 All. 217. [Mahmood, J. Oct. 2, 1882.]

THE accused, in order to obtain a recognition from a Settlement-officer that they were entitled to the title of "Luskur," filed a sanad before that officer purporting to grant that title. This document was found not to be genuine. The Sessions Judge convicted the accused under ss. 471 and 464 of the Penal Code. Held on appeal that, even supposing the accused had used the document knowing it not to be genuine, they could not be found guilty, as the intention of the accused was not to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one; their intention being to produce a false belief in the mind of the Settlement-officer that they were entitled to the dignity of "Luskur," and that this could not be said to constitute an "intention to defraud." A sanad conferring a title of dignity on a person is not a valuable security within the meaning of the Penal Code.—JAN MAHOMED AND JABAR MAHOMED v. QUEEN-EMPRESS; WARI MEAH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 584. [Mitter and Norris, JJ. April 17, 1884.]

A TREASURY-ACCOUNTANT was convicted of offences under ss. 218 and 465 of the Penal Code under the following circumstances: A sum of Rs. 500, which was in the treasury, and was payable to a particular person through a Civil Court, was drawn out and paid away to other persons by means of forged cheques. After the withdrawal of the Rs. 500, but before such withdrawal had been discovered, the representative of the payee applied for payment. The prisoner then upon two occasions wrote reports to the effect that the Rs. 500 in question then stood at the payee's credit as a revenue-deposit, and that it was about to be transferred to the Civil Court. Upon the first of these reports, an order was signed by the treasury-officer for the transfer of the money to the Civil Court concerned, and to effect such transfer a cheque was prepared by the sale-mohurrir, which, as originally drawn up, related to the sum of Rs. 500 already mentioned. The signature of the cheque by the treasury-officer was delayed for some time, and meanwhile the cheque was altered by the prisoner, in such a manner as to make it relate to another deposit of Rs. 500, which had been made subsequently to the above, and to the credit of another person. The result of this was the transfer of the second payee's Rs. 500 to the Civil Court as if it had been the first Rs. 500, and to the credit of the first payee's representative. The prisoner was convicted under s. 465 of the Penal Code in respect of the cheque, and under s. 218 in respect of the two reports above referred to. Held, with respect to the charge under s. 465, that the prisoner's immediate and more probable intention—which alone, and not his remoter and less probable intention, should be attributed to him—was not to cause wrongful loss to the second payee by delaying payment of the Rs. 500 due to her, though the act might have caused her loss, but to conceal the previous fraudulent withdrawal of the first payee's Rs. 500; that, under these circumstances, he could not be said to have acted "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" within the meaning of s. 24 or s. 25 of the Penal Code, and that, therefore, his guilt under s. 465 had not been made out, and the conviction under that section must be set aside. Held also that prisoner's intention in making the false reports was to stave off the discovery of the previous fraud, and save himself or the actual perpetrator of that fraud from legal punishment, and that, having prepared the reports in a manner which he knew to be incorrect, he was rightly convicted under s. 218 of the Penal Code. Held further that, as the prisoner, who was a public servant made these reports, and assumed to make them in due course and as a part of his duty, and held them out as reports which were made by the proper officer, and as no question was put in the examination of the witnesses from the office which suggested that it was not his business to make such reports, it must be inferred that he made them because it was his business to do so, and as a public servant, within the meaning of s. 218 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GRIDHARI LAL, I L. R., 8 All 653. [Edge, C J. Aug 24, 1886.]

THE accused, who was a copyist in the Sub-divisional Office at B, applied for a clerkship then vacant in that office. An endorsement on his application, recommending him for the post, and purporting to have been made by the Sub-divisional Officer of B, was found to have been falsely made by the accused. The application was accompanied by a letter, also fabricated by the accused, purporting to be from the Collector to the Sub-divisional Officer at B, informing the latter officer that he, the Collector, had selected the accused for the vacant post. The Sub-divisional Officer, having some suspicion as to the genuineness of his letter, wrote a demi-official letter to the Collector to ascertain whether he had really written it; and this being posted in the local post-office, the accused fabricated a third document, purporting to be a letter from the Sub-divisional Officer to the post-master, asking him to stop the despatch of the demi-official letter. The accused was charged with, and convicted in the Sessions Court of, the offence of forgery under s. 464 of the Penal Code, in respect of the three documents. Held that the conviction was right with regard to the first two documents, but with regard to the third document it could not be said that he falsely made it either dishonestly or fraudulently within the meaning of that section.—AMIRUT HAMID v. EMPRESS, I. L. R., 13 Cal. 349. [Mitter and Grant, JJ. Sep. 7, 1886.]

THE prisoner made certain entries in his ledger, which consisted of rough loose sheets, showing that certain sums of money had been re-paid to the prosecutor, which in fact, had not been repaid. Held that the prisoner was guilty of forgery under s. 464. Simply the omission of a count in the charge is a defect in the charge, and the Appellate Court may confirm a conviction under a different section of the Penal Code from that upon which the prisoner was tried and convicted, provided the prisoner has not been prejudiced or injured by the substitution of one section for another.—ANONYMOUS, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S. 46.

PRISONER was requested to make an entry in a book of account belonging to the complainant to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of accounts; instead of making this entry as requested, prisoner entered in a language not known to complainant that this sum had been paid to complainant. He was convicted of forgery under s. 465 of the Penal Code. Held that the offence was not forgery, but an attempt to cheat.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KUNJU NAYAR, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 114. [Muttusami Ayyar and Shephard, JJ. Sep. 9, 20, 1888.] See Lalit Mohan Sarkar v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R., 23 Cal. 313, under s. 408.

Punishment for forgery.

No appeal lies from an order of a Civil Court directing a criminal prosecution for forgery committed before it.—GUNGA NARAIN SIRCAR v. AZEEZOONISSA BEBEE, 5 W. R. Mis 18. [Bayley and Shumbhoonath Pundit, JJ. Feb. 6, 1866.]

WHEN a Civil Court directs that criminal proceedings be taken against a party to a suit before it for perjury or forgery, the High Court has no power, on an appeal being preferred against the decision of that Court, to direct that such proceedings be stayed until the appeal shall have been heard and determined.—IN THE MATTER OF RAM PRASAD HAZRA, B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 420 (F. B.). [Peacock, C.J., and Bayley, Seton-Karr, Pundit, and Macpherson, JJ. Feb. 12, 1866.]

BY a person consenting to act under a mukhtarnama, and attaching his name in token of such consent, he does not become a maker of the mukhtarnama, or a forger, if the mukhtarnama turns out to be forged. It is the duty of the Judge to notice to the assessors discrepancies and contradictory statements made by the witnesses.—QUEEN v. BURJO BARICK, 5 W. R. 70. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. April 16, 1866.]

WHEN a Civil Court sends a prisoner before a Magistrate on a charge of forgery, it is competent to the Magistrate to commit the prisoner for trial on a charge, either of forgery or of using as genuine a false document, or of abetting forgery.—QUEEN v. MOHESH CHUNDER ACHARJEE, 6 W. R. 20. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. July 7, 1866.]

THE signing of a vakalatnama in the name of co-decree-holders without their authority to do so, and delivering it to a vakil, with instructions to file a petition, stating that the debt had been satisfied, and praying that the case may be struck off the file is forgery within the meaning of s. 463 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. GAYNEL RAM, 6 W. R. 78 [Markby, J. Sep. 27, 1866.]

A PRISONER was charged with having forged pattas A and B, bearing the same date, and adduced in evidence by him in the same suit. No mention of any charge as to patta B was made in the order of commitment; and the prisoner having been acquitted on an indictment for forging patta A, it was held by the majority of the Court (Markby, J., dissenting) that the plea of autrefois acquit was inadmissible on a subsequent trial of the prisoner for forging the patta B.—QUEEN v. DWARKANATH DUTT, 7 W. R. 15, 2 Ind. Jur. N. S. 67. [Peacock, C.J., and Kemp and Markby, JJ. Jan. 23, 1867.]

THE sanction for prosecution mentioned in the Criminal Procedure Code refers to those cases only where a forged document has been put in evidence in a Civil or Criminal Court; but in other cases a Magistrate is competent, proprio motu, to inquire into allegations of forgery, and no sanction is necessary.—QUEEN v. RAMDHARRY SINGH, 10 W. R. 5. [Loch and Glover, JJ. June 6, 1868.]

A CONVICTION for forgery under the Penal Code cannot be had unless it is proved that the accused himself made a document, or part of a document, with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document, or part of a document, was made by the authority of a person by whose authority he knew that it was not made.—QUEEN v. RAM GOPAL DHUR, 10 W. R. 7. [Phear and Hobhouse, JJ. June 23, 1868.]

THE offence of altering one part of a document executed in two parts for the mutual security of both the parties concerned deserves to be severely punished.—QUEEN v. KISSOREE MOHUN DUTT, 17 W. R. 58. [Bayley and Mitter, JJ. May 6, 1872.]

HELD that, where a person's object was to deceive his employer by falsifying account-books which were in his custody, such deception being likely to cause damage to his employer, he was rightly convicted under s. 460 of forgery with intent to cheat instead of under s. 465 of simple forgery.—QUEEN v. BANESSUR BISWAS, 18 W. R. 46. [Bayley and Mitter, JJ. Sep. 5, 1872.]

A CIVIL COURT has no power to order the commitment of persons for offences under ss. 471, 465, and 193 of the Penal Code without holding the preliminary inquiry required by s. 474 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872).—QUEEN v. RUNGATOONEE, 22 W. R. 52. [Markby and Mitter, JJ. Aug. 5, 1874.]

WHERE a clerk, who had committed criminal breach of trust, subsequently made false entries in an account-book, with the intention of concealing such offence, held that the making of such entries did not constitute the offence of forgery, and he had therefore been improperly convicted under s. 465 of the Penal Code. Queen v. Jageshur Pershad (6 N.-W. P. 50) and Queen v. Lal Gumul (2 N.-W. P. 11) followed.—EMPRESS v. JIWANAND, I. L. R., 5 All. 221. [Mahmood, J. Oct. 5, 1882.]

IN a suit on a bond, instituted in the Court of a Munsif, the question whether the defendant had executed the bond or not was referred to arbitration. The arbitrator decided that the defendant had not executed the bond, and that it was a forgery. The Munsif dismissed the suit in accordance with the award. The defendant then applied to the Munsif for sanction to prosecute the plaintiff without specifying in his application the offences in respect of which he desired to prosecute. The Munsif granted sanction, merely observing that there were sufficient grounds for sanctioning the prosecution, without giving any reasons or specifying the offence or offences in respect of which sanction was granted. Held that the terms in which the Munsif had given his sanction to a prosecution were not sufficiently explicit, and that he should have mentioned the section or sections of the Penal Code under which he authorized criminal proceedings to be taken, as also in a general way the offence or offences to be charged, the date of commission, and the place where committed. Further, that, as the Munsif himself had not determined the question of forgery in the suit, he should have made some enquiry to satisfy himself that there were materials to justify a prosecution —IN THE MATTER OF PARSOTAN LAL v. BIJAI, I. L. R., 6 All. 101. [Straight, J. Oct. 23, 1883.]

SANCTION was granted to prosecute a defendant for forgery and perjury alleged to have been committed by him in a civil suit which was decided against him on the 22nd August 1882. The defendant then preferred an appeal, which was dismissed on the 9th August 1883 The plaintiff commenced criminal proceedings against the defendant, under the sanction, on the 23rd July 1884, but, such proceedings having been commenced more than six months after the date of the sanction, the charge was dismissed The plaintiff then on the 20th August 1884 applied for a fresh sanction, which was granted on the 13th April 1885 Held that, assuming that the Munsif who granted the fresh sanction had power to do so, as to which the Court expressed no opinion, such fresh sanction should not have been granted unless some explanation was given for the omission to commence proceedings within six months, and as no such explanation was given, or any special grounds shown why a fresh sanction should be given, the Munsif did not exercise a sound discretion in granting such fresh sanction, and consequently his order was set aside.—JOYDEO SINGH v. HARIHAR PERSHAD SINGH, I. L. R., 11 Cal. 577. [Mitter and Norris, JJ. May 22, 1885.]

A MORTGAGOR was charged with making a fraudulent alteration in his mortgage-deed which was then registered by a Sub-Registrar. Held that the sanction of the Sub-Registrar was not necessary for a prosecution on a charge of forgery. In re Venkatachala (I. L. R., 10 Mad. 154), Queen Empress v. Subba (I. L. R, 11 Mad. 3) explained.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SOBHANADRI, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 201. [Muttusami Ayyar and Parker, JJ. Feb. 11, 1889.]

UNDER the general revisional powers conferred by s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a High Court has power to consider the propriety of an order which purports to be passed under s. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen-Empress v. Rachappa (I. L. R., 13 Bom 109) dissented from. Where a defendant in a suit in the Court of a Munsif applied to the District Judge for sanction under s 195 of the Code to prosecute a witness who had given evidence in the Munsif's Court in support of a deed, produced as evidence before that Court, which had been found by the Munsif to be a forgery, and the District Judge refused the application, but purporting to act under s. 476 of the Code, himself ordered the prosecution of such witness, held that the Judge's order was made without jurisdiction, the offence in respect of which the sanction was directed not having been committed before him, nor brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding.—IN THE MATTER OF MATHURA DAS, I. L. R., 16 All 80 Aikman, J. Nov. 29, 1892.

466. Whoever forges a document purporting to be a record or proceeding of or in a Court of Justice, or a register of birth, baptism, marriage, or burial, or a register kept by a public servant as such, or a certificate or document purporting to be made by a public servant in his official capacity, or an authority to institute or defend a suit, or to take any proceedings therein, or to confess judgment, or a power-of-attorney, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Forgery of record of Court or of public register, &c.

A CONVICTION may be had for using as genuine a forged document purporting to be made by a public servant in his official capacity, notwithstanding the illegibility of the seal and signature thereon —QUEEN v. PROSUNNO BOSE, 5 W. R. 96. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. May 28, 1866.]

THE subsequent falsification of a roznamcha-bahi kept in the office of a Deputy-Inspector of Schools by the mohurrir in charge thereof for the purpose of concealing frauds, previously committed, merely with a view to avoid disgrace and punishment, was held not to fall within the definition of forgery as given in the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. JAGESHUR PERSHAD, 6 N.-W. P. 56. [Pearson, J. Dec. 20, 1873.]

S. 35 of the Evidence Act, which provides "that any entry in an official public book, which is duly made by a public servant in the execution of his duty, is of itself a relevant fact," does not make the public book evidence to show that a particular entry has not been made in it. S. 466 of the Penal Code is not intended to apply to cases where a public officer, or a person acting for a public officer, whose duty it is to make entries in a public book, knowingly makes a false entry, but to cases where a certificate or other document is forged by some unauthorized person with a view to make it appear that it was duly issued by a public officer. The accused, in order to save an estate from forfeiture, made a false entry of rent received in a public book kept by him for the purpose of informing the Collector as to the rents which had been paid into the Collectorate and as to what estates the rents were in arrear, so that he might take steps to enforce payment, and was convicted by the Sessions Judge of an offence under s. 465 of the Penal Code. Held, on appeal, that the accused ought properly to have been convicted under s 192 of the Code, the provisions of that section not being confined to false evidence to be used in judicial proceedings —IN THE MATTER OF JUGGUN LALL, 7 C. L. R. 356 [Garth, C J., and Field, J. Nov. 17. 1880.]

WHERE a document is made for the purpose of being used to deceive a Court of Justice, it is made with the intention of being used for that purpose. A person, therefore, who, at the request of another sent to trap him, fabricates a document purporting to be a notice under the seal and signature of a Deputy Collector, he being informed that the notice was required by such other person for the purpose of being used in a pending suit (there being, however, in reality no such suit in existence), is guilty of forgery, it not being necessary that the intention of fraudulently using the document should exist in the mind of any other person than the person fabricating the document — HARADHAN MAITI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 14 Cal 513. [Petheram, C J., and Wilson, Tottenham, Norris, and Ghose, JJ. June 4, 1887.]

Held that a person who, being himself the forger thereof, has used as genuine a forged document, cannot be punished as well under s. 471 of the Indian Penal Code for the use as under s. 466 for the forgery.— QUEEN-EMPRESS v. UMRAO LAL, I. L. R., 23 All. 84. [Aikman, J. Nov. 1, 1900.

IF a Court of Session proceeds to take action under s. 477 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it must, in the first instance, frame a charge so as to enable the accused to know the exact nature of the offence he is alleged to have committed. A charge is a precise formulation of the specific accusation made against a person who is entitled to know its nature at the earliest stage. After the accusation has been formulated in the shape of a charge, the Sessions Court may then either commit the accused for trial before itself upon the charge so framed, or admit him to bail for the same purpose. R was examined as a witness by the Sessions Judge in a case. On the 15th of February the Sessions Judge delivered judgment in that case, and on the same day purporting to act under s. 477 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, had R arrested and committed to jail on charges under ss. 193, 466, and 471 of the Penal Code. The 25th of February was fixed for commencing the preliminary inquiry. No proceeding was drawn up or charges framed on the 15th. On the 16th of February an order was recorded by the Sessions Judge as follows: "In the course of the Sessions trial decided yesterday, I came to the opinion, for reasons stated in my judgment then delivered that R has committed offences under ss. 193, 465, and 471 of the Penal Code, and that it is my duty to hold an inquiry preliminary to committing him to the High Court to be tried for those offences. R was yesterday arrested and committed to jail. There was then no time owing to the lateness of the hour to draw up this formal proceeding. He will be produced before me, as directed in the warrant, on the 25th of February, when evidence will be taken.' Held that the proceeding of the 16th of February contained no particulars of the statements made and acts done by R upon which perjury and forgery were charged against him, and was not in any sense a charge or order of commitment, and was not warranted by law —REILY v. KING-EMPEROR, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 434. [Ameer Ali and Pratt, JJ. April 26, 1901.]

467. Whoever forges a document which purports to be a valuable security or a will, or an authority to adopt a son, or which purports to give authority to the person to make or transfer any valuable security, or to receive the principal, interest, or dividends thereon, or to receive or deliver any money, moveable property, or valuable security, or any document purporting to be an acquittance or receipt acknowledging the payment of money, or an acquittance or receipt for the delivery of any moveable property or valuable security, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

A FRAUDULENT alteration of a collectorate challan is the forgery of a document described in s. 467 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. HURISH CHUNDER BOSE, W. R., Gap., 1864, 22. [Loch and Jackson, JJ. April 12, 1864.]

THE forging of a document which purports, on the face of it, to be a copy only, and which, even if a genuine copy, would not authorize the delivery of moveable property, is not punishable under s. 467 of the Penal Code. The High Court will not alter a conviction by a Sessions Court aided by a jury on a charge only triable by a jury, to one of a nature not triable by such a tribunal, but will annul the proceedings, and leave the prosecution to take fresh proceedings against the prisoner on any other charge it may be advised.—REG. v. NARO GOPAL, 5 Bom. H. C. R. 56. [Warden and Gibbs, JJ. July 22, 1868.]

THE prisoner was charged, under s. 471 of the Penal Code, with fraudulently using as genuine a forged document, and having been tried before a Sessions Judge and jury was convicted of that offence. The Sessions Judge, considering the forged document to be of the nature of those specified in s. 467, sentenced the prisoner to ten years' transportation. On appeal the High Court held that the charge should have distinctly set forth the offence as that of using a forged document of the nature of those specified in s. 467, and that, that not having been done, the trial by jury was illegal. The conviction and sentence were therefore annulled, and it was directed that the prisoner should be re-tried.—REG. v. GANGARAM MALH, 6 Bom. H. C. R. 43. [Warden and Gibbs, JJ. June 24, 1869.]

WHERE prisoner, to screen his own negligence, altered an office-report, such conduct does not fall within the definition of forgery in the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. LALL GOMUT, 2 N.-W. P. 11. [Turner and Spankie, JJ. Jan. 10, 1870.]

A, INTENDING to procure a forged document purporting to be executed by one Chotak, applied to K to accompany A to Gorakpur, where A said Chotak would be found, and there to draw out a bond for execution by Chotak. In pursuance of this invitation K, believing that Chotak would execute the bond, accompanied A to Gorakpur. A took with him his ploughman, named Chetoo, and directed Chetoo to purchase a stamp-paper for the bond, and to give his name and description to the stamp-vendor as Chotak. Chetoo complied with this direction and the stamp-vendor wrote on the stamp-paper an endorsement to the effect that the purchaser was Chotak, with the description which would apply to that person, but, suspecting false personation, arrested Chetoo, and took him to the Magistrate. On the above facts, the Sessions Judge convicted A of attempt to forge a valuable security, and, under ss. 467 and 511, sentenced him to be rigorously imprisoned for five years. Held that, to constitute the offence of attempt under s. 511, Penal Code, there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence, and for the purpose of committing that offence, and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence. The provisions of s. 511, Penal Code, do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. Although such are doubtless done towards the commission of the offence, they are not done in the attempt to commit the offence, within the meaning of the word "attempt" as used in the section. —QUEEN v. RAMSARUN CHAWBEY, 4 N.-W. P. 46. Turner, J. Mar. 13, 1872.] Referred to in Queen-Empress v. Kalyan Singh, I. L. R., 16 All. 409, infra.

THE accused, in order to obtain a recognition from a Settlement-officer that they were entitled to the title of "Luskur," filed a sanad before that officer purporting to grant that title. This document was found not to be genuine. The Sessions Judge convicted the accused under ss. 471, 464, of the Penal Code. Held on appeal that, even supposing the accused had used the document knowing it not to be genuine, they could not be found guilty, as the intention of the accused was not to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one, their intention being to produce a false belief in the mind of the Settlement-officer that they were entitled to the dignity of "Luskar," and that this could not be said to constitute "an intention to defraud." A sanad conferring a title of dignity on a person is not a valuable security within the meaning of the Penal Code.—JAN MAHOMED AND JABAR MAHOMED v. QUEEN-EMPRESS; WARI MEAH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 584. [Mitter and Norris, JJ. April 17, 1884.]

A SUB-REGISTRAR under the Registration Act (III. of 1877) is not a Judge, and, therefore, not a "Court" within the meaning of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882). His sanction is therefore not necessary for a prosecution for forgery in respect of a forged document presented for registration in his office. The word "forgery" is used as a general term in s. 463 of the Penal Code, and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882) so as to embrace all species of forgery, and thus includes a case falling under s. 467 of the

Penal Code. The definition of "Court" given in the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself, and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. Distinction between a judicial and an administrative inquiry pointed out.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TULJA, I. L. R., 12 Bom. 36. [West and Birdwood, JJ. July 14, 1887.]

ONE Chaturi, calling himself Kehri, the son of Bhupal Kachhi, went to a stamp-vendor, accompanied by a man named Kalyan Singh, and purchased from him, in the name of Kehri, a stamp-paper of the value of four annas. The two men then went to a petition-writer, and Chaturi again giving his name as Kehri, they asked the petition-writer to write for them a bond for Rs. 50 payable by Kehri to Kalyan Singh. The petitioner-writer commenced to write the bond, but, his suspicions being aroused, did not finish it, but took Chaturi and Kalyan Singh to the nearest thana. Held that, under the above circumstances, Kalyan Singh was rightly convicted of an attempt to commit the offence defined in s. 467 of the Indian Penal Code, and Chaturi of abetment of the said attempt. The Queen v. Ram Saran Chowbey (N.-W. P. H. C. Rep., 1872, p. 46) referred to.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KALYAN SINGH, I. L. R. 16 All. 409. [Burkitt, J. May 25, 1894. See Lalit Mohan Sarkar v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 313, under s. 408.

THE accused was not only the writer but also took an active part in the preparation of a document, the alleged executant of which was dead before the date of the document, and the person who really had an interest under the document was convicted under s. 82 of the Registration Act (III. of 1877). But evidence was wanting to show that the accused took any part in the forgery of the name of the alleged executant. Held that the accused could not be convicted of the offence of forgery under s. 467 of the Penal Code. There being nothing on the record to show that the accused was a party to, or took any part in the actual forgery of the document, or that he was present on the occasion when it was forged, the proper section to convict him under would be section $\frac{467}{109}$, that is, of abetment of forgery, and not section $\frac{467}{114}$. An unregistered document, though it may not be a valuable security until registration is completed, still "purports" to be a valuable security within the meaning of s. 467 of the Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. Ramasami, (I. L. R. 12 Mad. 148) approved of. KASHI NATH NAG v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R. 25 Cal. 207. [Ghose and Wilkins, JJ. July 6, 1897.]

Forgery for the purpose of cheating.

HELD that, where a person's object was to deceive his employer by falsifying account-books which were in his custody, such deception being likely to cause damage to his employer, he was rightly convicted under s. 468 of forgery with intent to cheat, instead of under s. 465 of simple forgery.—QUEEN v. BANNESSUR BISWAS, 18 W. R. 46. [Bayley and Mitter, JJ. Sep. 5, 1872.]

THE accused was charged with cheating by falsely and incorrectly reading out to an octroi-darogha the contents of an invoice of a consignment of goods, and so making the value appear to be less than it actually was, and also with forgery under s. 468, having afterwards altered the invoice so as to make it correspond with what he had dictated to the darogha. Held that the alteration in the invoice having been made after the offence of cheating was complete, and being made by the accused for the purpose of saving himself or concealing the offence of cheating, a charge under s. 468 was not sustainable.—HURRUCKH RAI v. CROWN, Panj. Rec., No. 15 of 1870.

THE granting of a sanction to a private person under cl. (c) of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882) does not debar a Civil Court from proceeding under s. 478, nor can the dismissal by a Magistrate of a complaint made by a private person be held to be a bar, till set aside, to a proceeding under that section.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SHANKER, I. L. R., 13 Bom. 384. [Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Dec. 13, 1888.]

469. Whoever commits forgery, intending that the document forged shall harm the reputation of any party, or knowing that it is likely to be used for that purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Forgery for the purpose of harming reputation.

WHERE a draft-petition was prepared with the intention of being used as evidence of a matter, it was held to fall within s. 29 of the Penal Code; and as it contained false statements calculated to injure the reputation of a person, the offence was held to fall within s. 469 of the Penal Code.—SHEEFAIT ALLY, 10 W. THE vendees of a plot of land altered the number by which the land was described in the deed of sale, doing so because such number was not the right number. Having made this alteration, they used the deed of sale as evidence in a suit. Held that the alteration of the deed did not amount to "forgery" within the meaning of s. 463 of the Penal Code, nor could the deed, after the alteration, be designated a "forged document" as contemplated by s. 470, the intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain or to defraud being wanting; nor could it be said that, in using the deed, the vendees were "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" using as genuine a "forged document," and therefore the use by the vendees of the deed did not constitute an offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code. Further, that their use of it did not render them liable to conviction under s. 196 of that Code.—EMPRESS v. FATEH, I. L. R., 5 All. 217. [Mahmood, J. Oct. 2, 1882.]

Using as genuine a forged document.

471. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly uses as genuine any document which he knows or has reason to believe to be a forged document shall be punished* in the same manner as if he had forged such document.

WHERE a forged document is put in evidence before the Collector, the power of commitment rests with the Revenue Authorities, and does not, under any circumstances, extend to the Magistrate.—GOVT. v. HUNGSESSUR SEIN, 1 Ind. Jur. O. S. 11. [Steer, J. July 28, 1862.]

COUNTERFEIT seals and forged documents were found in the prisoner's possession, and, as he could give no satisfactory information as to how he became possessed of them, it was inferred that he kept them with the intention of using them fraudulently.—QUEEN v. KRISTO SOONDER DEB, 2 W. R. 5 [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Jan. 10, 1865.]

THE offence of uttering forged documents requires in this country to be punished with the severest punishment allowed by law. Contemporaneous sentences are not justified by the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. MOHESH CHUNDER SIRCAR, 3 W. R. 13. [Glover, J. May 15, 1865.]

A CONVICTION may be had for using as genuine a forged document purporting to have been made by a public servant in his official capacity, notwithstanding the illegibility of the seal and signature thereon.—QUEEN v. PROSSUNO BOSE, 5 W. R. 96. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. May 28, 1866.]

A PERSON may be convicted of using as genuine a document which he knew to be forged, though he in the first instance, produced only a copy of a copy of it.—QUEEN v. NUJUM ALI, 6 W. R. 41. [Jackson and Markby, JJ. July 9, 1866.]

WHERE a prisoner produced as evidence an account-book, one page of which had been fraudulently abstracted, and another substituted for it, held that he was not guilty of the offence of attempting to use as genuine fabricated evidence, unless he knew of the forgery, and intended to use the forged evidence for the purpose of affecting the decision on the point at issue when the book was tendered.—QUEEN v. MUDDOO SOODUN SHAW, 7 W. R. 23. [Kemp and Markby, JJ. Jan. 26, 1867.]

WHERE an intention to use a forged document, if necessary, inferred from the facts of the case and from the conduct of the prisoner.—QUEEN v. HATIM MOONSHEE alias MAHOMED HATIM, 8 W. R. 11. [Seton-Karr and Macpherson, JJ. June 8, 1867.]

THERE must be a fraudulent and dishonest using of a document as genuine before a conviction can be had under s. 471 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. JAHAN BUX, 8 W. R. 81. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Nov. 19, 1867.]

* When the forged document is a pro. note of the Govt. of India, Ct. of Ses., Cognizable, Warrant, Bailable, Not comp., Sanction if offence committed in Court.

IN a case in which the accused was charged with dishonestly using as genuine a patta which he knew to be forged, and in which there was a fraudulent insertion, it was held that it was not necessary to prove that he personally inserted the word, but it was sufficient if it was inserted with his knowledge.—QUEEN v. HEMORUDDI MUNDUL, 9 W. R. 22. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Mar. 2, 1868.]

A DEED of divorce is a "valuable security" within the meaning of s. 30 of the Penal Code. The presenting of a forged document of such a nature for registration, and obtaining registration, would be "using" within s. 471 of that Code.—QUEEN v. AZIMOODDEEN, 11 W. R. 15. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. Mar. 3, 1869.]

THE false alteration of a police-diary by a head-constable was held to fall under s. 471, Penal Code, as the forgery of a document made by a public servant in his official capacity.—QUEEN v. RUGHOO BARRICK, 11 W. R. 44. [Norman and Jackson, JJ. May 3, 1869.]

THE prisoner was charged, under s. 471 of the Penal Code, with fraudulently using as genuine a forged document, and, having been tried before a Sessions Judge and jury, was convicted of that offence. The Sessions Judge, considering the forged document to be of the nature of those specified in s. 467, sentenced the prisoner to 10 years' transportation. On appeal, the High Court held that the charge should have distinctly set forth the offence as that of using a forged document of the nature of those specified in s. 467, and that, that not having been done, the trial by jury was illegal. The conviction and sentence were therefore annulled, and it was directed that the prisoner should be re-tried. —REG. v. GANGARAM MALJI, 6 Bom. H. C. R. 43. [Warden and Gibbs, JJ. June 24, 1869.]

TO support a conviction of the offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code, there must be a using of a document by a person who knows, or has reason to believe, that it is forged.—QUEEN v. BHOLAY PRAMANICK, 17 W. R. 32. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Feb. 20, 1872.]

THE offence imputed against an accused, who, in a civil suit, is alleged to have used as genuine a document which he knew to be a forged document, is one cognizable under s. 471 of the Penal Code. Such accused should, therefore, be charged under that section, and not under s. 196 of the Code.—EMPRESS v. KHERODE CHUNDER MOZUMDAR, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 717; 6 C. L. R. 118. [Jackson and Tottenham, JJ. Mar. 2. 1880.]

WHERE the accused were charged under s. 471 of the Penal Code with having, in a suit brought against them by the vendee of their sister to recover possession of certain property acquired by her by right of inheritance from her father, fraudulently and dishonestly used a forged document as genuine, knowing or having reason to believe it to be a forged document, it appeared that the accused were in possession of the property, and that the document in question purported to be a deed of gift from their father. It was proved that the endorsement of registration which appeared in the document was a forgery. In his charge to the jury the Sessions Judge omitted to deal with the fact of the accused being in possession of the property. He also directed that, the registration endorsement having been proved to be a forgery, it was for the accused persons to establish the genuineness of the document. Held that it was not sufficient for the jury merely to decide on the evidence whether the document was a forgery, and whether the accused knew it was a forgery when they used it, but it was further necessary for the jury to decide whether the document had been used fraudulently and dishonestly. Held also that the Sessions Judge, in omitting to deal with the fact of the possession of the accused, and in throwing the onus of proving the genuineness of the document upon them, had misdirected the jury.—KHORSHED KAZI v. EMPRESS, 8 C. L. R. 542. [Mitter and Maclean, JJ. May 30, 1881.]

WHERE a person, in the course of an action brought against him to gain possession of a property, uses a forged document for the purpose of supporting his title, though there may be no necessity for the use of it, such a user is clearly fraudulent. A general intention to defraud, without the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another, would, if proved, be sufficient to support a conviction; and such an intention is a necessary inference which the jury should be directed to draw, if they are satisfied that the accused has uttered a forged document as a true one, meaning it to be taken as such, and knowing it to be forged.—IN THE MATTER OF DHUNAM KAZEE, I. L. R., 9 Cal. 53; 11 C. L. R. 69 [Maclean and Norris, JJ. July 13, 1882.]

THE vendees of a plot of land altered the number by which the land was described in the deed of sale, doing so because such number was not the right number. Having made this alteration, they used the deed of sale as evidence in a suit. Held that the alteration of the deed did not amount to "forgery" within the meaning of s. 463 of the Penal Code, nor could the deed, after the alteration, be designated a "forged document" as contemplated by s. 470, the intention to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain, or to defraud, being wanting; nor could it be said that, in using the deed, the vendees were "dishonestly" or "fraudulently" using as genuine a "forged document," and therefore the use by the vendees of the deed did not constitute an offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code. Further that their use of it did not render them liable to conviction under s. 196 of that Code. —EMPRESS v. FATEH, I. L. R., 5 All. 217 [Mahmood, J. Oct. 2, 1882.]

THE Court of an Assistant Collector is not subordinate to that of the Magistrate of the District within the meaning of s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Sanction to prosecution granted under s. 195 should specify the Court or other place in which, and the occasion on which, the offence was committed, and such sanction should not be granted without a preliminary inquiry, where such inquiry is "necessary" within the meaning of s. 476 of the Code. Where sanction to the prosecution of a person for the offence of using certain evidence known to be false was granted by a Court to which the Court in which such evidence was used was not subordinate, and such sanction did not specify the place in which, and the occasion on which, such offence was committed, and the Court granting the sanction did not make any preliminary inquiry, although such an inquiry was "necessary" in the sense of s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, held that, the indispensable preliminary conditions of s. 195 of the Code being wanting to the prosecution, the committing Magistrate was incompetent to entertain the case, and the commitment was illegal, and should be quashed. Held also that the fact that there was not any evidence to connect such person with the use of such false evidence was a defect in law sufficient to justify the quashing of the commitment.—EMPRESS v. NOROTAM DAS, I. L. R., 6 All. 98. [Tyrrell, J. Oct. 2, 1883.]

THE accused, in order to obtain a recognition from a Settlement-officer that they were entitled to the title of "Luskur," filed a sanad before the officer purporting to grant that title. This document was found not to be genuine. The Sessions Judge convicted the accused under ss. 471 and 464 of the Penal Code. Held on appeal that, even supposing the accused had used the document knowing it not to be genuine, they could not be found guilty, as the intention of the accused was not to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to any one; their intention being to produce a false belief in the mind of the Settlement-officer that they were entitled to the dignity of "Luskur," and that this could not be said to constitute an "intention to defraud." A sanad conferring a title of dignity on a person is not a valuable security within the meaning of the Penal Code. - JAN MAHOMED AND JABAR MAHOMED v. QUEEN-EMPRESS; WARI MEAH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 584. [Mitter and Norris, JJ., April 17, 1884.] Cited in Queen-Empress v. Haradhan alias Rakhal Dass Ghosh, I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380, infra

THE creditors of a police-constable applied to the District Superintendent of Police that Rs. 2 might be deducted monthly from the debtor's pay until the debt was satisfied. Upon an order being passed directing that the deduction asked for should be made, the debtor produced a receipt purporting to be a receipt for Rs. 18, the whole amount due. It subsequently appeared that the receipt was one for Rs. 8, which the debtor had altered by adding the figure "1," so as to make it appear that the receipt was for Rs. 18. Held that the real intent in the prisoner's mind being to induce his superior officer to refrain from the illegal act of stopping a portion of his salary, the Court in a criminal case ought not to speculate as to some other intent over and above this that might have presented itself to him, that it did not necessarily follow that he contemplated setting up the altered receipt to defeat his creditor's claim; and that, therefore, he ought not to have been convicted of an offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SYED HUSSAIN, I. L. R., 7 All. 403. [Petheram, C.J., and Straight, J. Feb. 27, 1885.]

IN a trial upon a charge, under s. 471 of the Penal Code, of fraudulently or dishonestly using as genuine documents known to be forged, it was found that four forged receipts for the payment of rent, used by the prisoner had been fabricated in lieu of genuine receipts which had been lost. Held that, with reference to the definitions of the terms "dishonestly" and "fraudulently" in ss. 24 and 25 of the Penal Code, the prisoner, upon the facts as found, had not committed the offence punishable under s. 471.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SHEO DAYAL, I. L. R., 7 All. 459. [Brodhurst, J. Mar. 6, 1885.]

ON the 2nd August 1884, a Munsif, who was of opinion that, in the course of a suit which had been tried before him, certain persons had committed offences under ss. 193, 463, and 471 of the Penal Code, and that the prosecution of these persons was desirable, made an order which he described as passed under s. 643 of the Civil Procedure Code, and in which he directed that the accused should be sent to the Magistrate, and that the Magistrate should inquire into the matter. In May 1885, upon an application by one of the accused to the District Court to "revoke the sanction for prosecution granted by the Munsif," it was contended that the "sanction" had expired on the 2nd February 1885, and had ceased to have effect. Held by the Full Bench that the Munsif's order, whether it was or was not a sanction, was a sufficient "complaint" within the meaning of s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that the limitation-period prescribed by that section was applicable to the case Per Petheram, C.J., and Straight, J.—That, considering that s. 643 of the Civil Procedure Code was closely similar to s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Munsif's order might be taken as having been passed under the latter section. Also per Petheram, C.J., and Straight, J.—The words in s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code, "except with the previous sanction or on the complaint of the public servant concerned," must be read in connection with s. 476, which was enacted with the object of avoiding the inconvenience which might be caused if a Munsif or a Subordinate Judge, or a Judge, were obliged to appear before a Magistrate, and make a complaint on oath, like an ordinary complainant, in order to lay the foundation for a prosecution. The language of s. 476 indicates that, where a Court is acting under s. 195, a complaint in the strict sense of the Code is not required, and that the procedure therein laid down constitutes the "complaint" mentioned in s. 195.—ISHRI PROSAD v. SHAM LALL, I. L. R., 7 All. 871. [Petheram, C.J., and Straight, Brodhurst, and Tyrrell, JJ. July 4, 1885.]

RULES of limitation are foreign to the administration of criminal justice, and it is only by express statutory provision that any rule of limitation could be made applicable to criminal cases, Art. 178, Sch. II., Limitation Act (XV. of 1877), must be construed with reference to the wording of the other articles, and can relate only to applications ejusdem generis. A suit was instituted for possession of certain land on which stood a factory. In proof of the claim, the plaintiffs filed in Court a sarkhat or lease, which was pronounced by the Munsif to be a forgery. Plaintiffs appealed up to the High Court, where, on the 24th June 1886, the Munsif's decree was affirmed. Defendants then applied to the Munsif for sanction to prosecute the plaintiffs for the offence of using a forged document, knowing the same to be forged. The Munsif refused to sanction the prosecution prayed for, but on application to the Sessions Judge, such sanction was granted. On application to revise the Sessions Judge's order granting sanction, it was contended that, after the lapse of nearly three years, sanction to prosecute should not have been granted. Held that there is no fixed period of limitation for making applications for sanction under s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—EMPRESS v. AJUDHIA SINGH, I. L. R., 10 All. 350 [Mahmood, J. Jan. 25, 1888.]

A POST-MASTER misappropriated a certain sum of money, and at the same time made a false document purporting to be a receipt signed by the person to whom the money was payable He was convicted of using a forged document under s. 471 of the Penal Code. It was contended that no forgery had been committed, because the receipt was made merely to cover the embezzlement. Empress of India v. Jiwanand (I. L. R., 5 All. 222.) Held that the conviction was right. A debtor who fabricates a release to screen himself from liability to pay the debt cannot be said not to be guilty of forgery, because he intended by the fabrication to cover a dishonest purpose.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SABAPATI, I. L. R., 11 Mad. 411. [Muttusami Ayyar and Wilkinson, JJ. July 5, 1888.]

THE granting of a sanction to a private person under cl. (c) of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882) does not debar a Civil Court from proceeding under s. 478, nor can the dismissal by a Magistrate of a complaint made by a private person be held to be a bar, till set aside, to a proceeding under that section.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SHANKAR, I. L. R. 13 Bom. 384. [Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Dec. 13, 1888.]

CERTAIN documents having been put into Court in a suit pending before a District Munsif, but not given in evidence, the District Munsif made an order for the prosecution of the parties who so put them in, on the ground that the documents were forgeries. Held (1) that the High Court had power to revise the proceedings of the District Munsif, (2) that the District Munsif was not competent to go beyond the record; (3) that the order was wrong, and should be set aside.—ABDUL KHADAR v. MEERA SAHEB, I. L. R., 15 Mad. 224. [Parker and Shephard, JJ. Jan. 5, 15, 1892.]

IN construing ss. 24 and 25 of the Penal Code, the primary and not the more remote intention of the accused must be looked at. Queen-Empress v. Girdhari Lal (I. L. R., 8 All. 653) cited. Under the rules of the Calcutta University a private student desiring to appear at the Entrance Examination is required to forward to the Registrar, with his application for permission to appear, a certificate to the effect, inter alia, that he is of good moral character, and has submitted himself to a test examination by, and furnished exercise to, the person signing the certificate sufficient in that person's opinion to show that his qualifications give a reasonable probability of his passing the examination. Such certificate has to be signed by one or other of the persons mentioned in the rules, amongst them being the head-master of a high school under public management. On such certificate being sent to the Registrar and the prescribed fee paid, that officer forwards a receipt to the candidate with his roll-number thereon, which is also an authority for him to appear at the examination, and enter the examination-hall. A private student forwarded to the Registrar, with his application for permission to appear, a certificate in the prescribed form, purporting to be signed by the head-master of a high school, such signature, however, being, as the applicant well knew, a forgery. The Registrar, knowing at the time that the signature of the head-master was not genuine, sent to the applicant the receipt for his fee and the necessary authority allowing him to appear at the examination, and in due course the applicant appeared, took his seat in the hall at the desk allotted to him, and commenced the examination. Upon charges being preferred against the applicant of using as genuine a forged document (s. 471), and attempting to cheat (ss. 415 and 511): held that, his primary object or intention was, by falsely inducing the Registrar to believe that the certificate was signed by the head-master of a Government school under public management, to be permitted to sit for the Entrance Examination, and that such intention could not be held to be "fraudulent" or "dishonest" within the meaning of ss. 25 and 24 of the Penal Code. Held, consequently, that the use of the forged document, though with the knowledge or belief that it was forged, was not fraudulent or dishonest, and that as these are essential elements to offences under ss. 471 and 415 of the Penal Code, the accused had not committed either of the offences charged. Held further that the accused had not committed any offence under the Penal Code. Jan Mahomed v. Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 10 Cal. 584) cited. In a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court, under s. 432 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as to whether, on the facts stated, any offence has been committed by an accused person, it lies on the prosecution to make out that an offence has been committed, and under the circumstances the prosecution must begin.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. HARADHAN alias RAKHAL DASS GHOSH, I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380. [Norris and Beverley, JJ. April 20, 1892.] Dissented from in Queen-Empress v. Soshi Bhushan, I. L. R., 15 All 210, infra; and overruled by Queen-Empress v. Abbas Ali, I. L. R., 25 Cal. 512, infra.

THE term "claim" in s. 463 of the Penal Code is not limited in its application to a claim to property. The term "property" in the same section will cover a written certificate. It is not necessary to constitute a forgery under s. 463 of the Penal Code that the property with which it is intended that the false document shall cause a person to part should be in existence at the time when the false document was made. Queen-Empress v. Haradhan (I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380) dissented from. Queen-Empress v. Appasami (I. L. R., 12 Mad. 151), and Queen-Empress v. Ganesh Khanderao and Ganesh Daulat (I. L. R., 15 Bom. 506) approved. One S B presented to the Principal of Queen's College, Benares, a false certificate purporting to have been granted by the Principal of Canning College, Lucknow, to the effect that he had attended a certain proportion of a certain first-year course of law-lectures delivered at Canning College, S B, in fact, never having attended such lectures. Had that certificate been a true one, it would have entitled S B to attend a further course of law-lectures at any one of several associated institutions amongst which was Queen's College, Benares, without attending or paying the fees for the first course of lectures. On presentation of the above certificate, S B obtained permission to attend, and attended, a course of second-year lectures at Queen's College, Benares, without attending or paying the fees required for the first-year course. After S B had attended the above-mentioned second-year course of lectures at Queen's College, Benares, he again presented the said false certificate to the Principal of Queen's College with a view to his obtaining a consolidated certificate, which was necessary, as he alleged, to enable him to become a candidate in the Judge's Court pleadership examination in Calcutta. Held that on both occasions, when he presented the false certificate to obtain admission to the second-year law-class at Queen's College, Benares, and again when he endeavoured by its use to obtain the consolidated certificate in order to gain admission to the pleadership examination in Calcutta, S B was guilty of the offence provided for by s. 471 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SOSHI BHUSHAN, I. L. R., 15 All. 210. [Edge, C.J., and Aikman, J. April 29, 1893.] See Lolit Mohan Sarkar v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 313, under s. 408.

SANCTION was given for the prosecution of a pleader who, in the conduct of a case, had presented to the Court for his clients a document of suspicious appearance, and which his clients were charged with having forged. The sanction was granted by the Sessions Judge on the ground that the document bore on its face such marks of concoction that the pleader's suspicions must have been aroused at the first sight of it, and that, had he examined it, as he ought to have done, he would either have rejected it, or have advised his client to produce it in Court at his own risk. On appeal to the High Court, held that the sanction should be revoked. A pleader is under no higher obligation than any other agent would be, and to justify his prosecution, it should be shown that he had been a party (principal or accessory) to the concoction of the document, or that he had the knowledge that it was concocted. The mere fact that his suspicions ought to have been aroused by the sight of the document was not primâ-facie evidence that he knew, or had reason to believe the document to be forged.—In re RANCHHODDAS, I. L. R., 22 Bom. 317. [Parsons and Ranade, JJ. July 22, 1896.]

THE accused applied to the Superintendent of Police at Poona for employment in the police-force. In support of his application he presented two certificates which he knew to be false. One of these certificates was a wholly fabricated document, whilst the other was altered by several additions made subsequently to the issue of the certificate. Held that the accused was guilty of offences under ss. 463 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KHANDUSINGH, I. L. R., 22 Bom 768. [Parsons and Ranade, JJ. Dec. 17, 1896.]

DEPRIVATION of property, actual or intended, is not an essential element in the offence of fraudulently using as genuine a document which the accused knew or had reason to believe to be false. Queen-Empress v. Haradhan (I. L. R., 19 Cal. 380) overruled.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ABBAS ALI, I. L. R., 25 Cal. 512. [Maclean, C.J., and O'Kinealy, Macpherson, Trevelyan and Jenkins, JJ Dec. 22, 29, 1896, and Jan. 29, 1897.]

A VAKIL of the High Court was convicted, under section 471 of the Indian Penal Code, of fraudulently using as genuine a document which he knew to be forged. This was affirmed on appeal, when the punishment to which he had been sentenced was reduced to two years. The High Court, while not allowing the propriety of the conviction and sentence to be questioned, had considered whether his culpability was such as to disqualify him for his profession, and had decided in the affirmative, removing him from the roll, under para. 8 of the Letters Patent, 1866. Held that, in the present case, the conviction, followed by the sentence, was sufficient without further inquiry, to justify the High Court in making that order. The appellant could not be allowed to have an indirect appeal against the judgment of the Sessions Judge confirmed by the High Court. The judgment of Lord Mansfield in Ex-parte Brounsall (1778, 2 Cowper's Rep., 829) referred to as well explaining the disqualification of a member of the legal profession that attends such a conviction and sentence. In re Wear (1893, L. R., 2 Q. B., 439) where the Court of Appeal looked to see what was the nature of the offence, and would not, as a matter of course, strike a solicitor off the roll because he had been convicted, distinguished from the present case. In re Durga Charan (I L. R., 7 All 290) dealt with under section 12 of Act XVIII. of 1879, referred to as a case where the nature of the offence admitted of further inquiry and also distinguished. In regard to the finality of the judgment of the High Court in deciding the appeal from the conviction and sentence, In re the Petition of Macrea (I. L. R., 13 All. 310; L. R., 20 I. A. 90) was referred to.—IN THE MATTER OF RAJENDRO NATH MUKERJI I. L. R., 22 All. 49. [Hobhouse, Macnaghten, and Couch, JJ. April 27, and June 21, 1899.]

Held that a person who, being himself the forger thereof, has used as genuine a forged document, cannot be punished as well under s. 471 of the Indian Penal Code for the use as under s 466 for the forgery.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. UMRAO LAL, I. L. R., 23 All. 84. [Aikman, J. Nov. 1, 1900.]

IF a Court of Session proceeds to take action under s. 477 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it must, in the first instance, frame a charge so as to enable the accused to know the exact nature of the offence he is alleged to have committed. A charge is a precise formulation of the specific accusation made against a person who is entitled to know its nature at the earliest stage. After the accusation has been formulated in the shape of a charge, the Sessions Court may then either commit the accused for trial before itself upon the charge so framed, or admit him to bail for the same purpose. R was examined as a witness by the Sessions Judge in a case. On the 15th of February the Sessions Judge delivered judgment in that case, and on the same day purporting to act under s. 477 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, had R arrested and committed to jail on charges under ss. 193, 466, and 471 of the Penal Code. The 25th of February was fixed for commencing the preliminary inquiry. No proceeding was drawn up or charges framed on the 15th. On the 16th of February an order was recorded by the Sessions Judge as follows: "In the course of the Sessions trial decided yesterday, I came to the opinion, for reasons stated in my judgment then delivered, that R has committed offences under ss. 193, 465, and 471 of the Penal Code and, that it is my duty to hold an inquiry preliminary to committing him to the High Court to be tried for those offences. R was yesterday arrested and committed to jail. There was then no time owing to the lateness of the hour to draw up this formal proceeding. He will be produced before me, as directed in the warrant, on the 25th of February, when evidence will be taken." Held that the proceeding of the 16th of February contained no particulars of the statements made and acts done by R upon which perjury and forgery were charged against him, and was not in any sense a charge or order of commitment, and was not warranted by law.—REILY v. KING-EMPEROR, I. L. R., 28 Cal. 434. Ameer Ali and Pratt, JJ. April 26, 1901.]

Ct. of Ses. Uncog. Warrant. Bailable. Not comp.

472. Whoever makes or counterfeits any seal, plate, or other instrument for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery which would be punishable under section 467 of this Code, or with such intent has in his possession any such seal, plate, or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing counterfeit seal, &c., with intent to commit a forgery punishable under section 467.

Ditto.

473. Whoever makes or counterfeits any seal, plate, or other instrument for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery which would be punishable under any section of this chapter other than section 467, or with such intent has in his possession any such seal, plate, or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing counterfeit seal, &c., with intent to commit forgery punishable otherwise.

COUNTERFEIT seals and forged documents were found in the prisoner's possession, and as he could give no satisfactory information as to how he became possessed of them it was inferred that he kept them with the intention of using them fraudulently.—QUEEN v. KRISTO SOONDER DEB, 2 W. R. 5. Kemp and Glover, JJ. Jan. 10, 1865.

A PERSON who uses in Court false documents as true, besides swearing to their authenticity, may be convicted under s. 196 of the Penal Code only and not under s. 471 also.—QUEEN v. OODEY LALL, 3 W. R. 17. [Glover, J. May 23, 1865.]

WHERE several seals of different descriptions were found in the possession of the accused with intent to commit forgery, it was held that, under s. 473 of the Penal Code, there was a complete and separate offence committed in respect of every seal found, and that the prisoners could be legally convicted of a separate offence in regard to each seal, unless it appeared that several such seals were in their possession for the purpose of committing one particular forgery.—QUEEN v. GOLUCK CHUNDER, 13 W. R. 16. Jackson and Markby, JJ. Jan. 18, 1870.

474. Whoever has in his possession any document knowing the same to be forged, and intending that the same shall fraudulently or dishonestly be used as genuine, shall, if the document is one of the description mentioned in section 466 of this Code, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the document is one of the description mentioned in section 467, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Having possession of document described in section 466 or 467, knowing it to be forged, and intending to use it as genuine.

It is not sufficient for a conviction, under s. 474 of the Penal Code, to say that the prisoner might possibly have used an altered document. The guilty intent must be proved, not inferred.—QUEEN v. LOKENATH SAHA, W. R. Gap., 1864, 12. [Steer and Seton-Karr, JJ. Feb. 22, 1864.]

To support a charge under s. 474 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the documents in respect of which the charge is brought are forged; (2) that the accused knew them to be forged; (3) that he was in possession of them; (4) that he intended that they should be fraudulently or dishonestly used as genuine; and (5) that each of the documents is of the description mentioned in s. 466 or s. 467 of the Penal Code. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge, (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them; (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents, an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up, the Sessions Judge, after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused, and whether the nature of one, at all events, of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused, being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house, and he alone, and that if they found this issue in the affirmative, they must return a verdict of guilty. Held that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading, and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882).—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ABAJI RAMCHANDRA, I. L. R., 16 Bom. 165. [Birdwood and Parsons, JJ. Feb. 18, 1891.]

475. Whoever counterfeits upon or in the substance of any material any device or mark used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in section 467 of this Code, intending that such device or mark shall be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to any document then forged or thereafter to be forged on such material, or who, with such intent, has in his possession any material upon or in the substance of which any such device or mark has been counterfeited, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Counterfeiting a device or mark used for authenticating documents described in section 467, or possessing counterfeit-marked material.

IN order to a conviction under s. 475 of the Penal Code, the document which the accused has in his possession must have some counterfeit device or mark upon it; and it must be proved that the accused has the document in his possession with intent to use such device or mark for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to the document. The document must be of the nature mentioned in s. 467 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. RUGHOONUNDUN PATTRONUVEES, 15 W. R. 19. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Feb. 18, 1871.]

DURING the course of a police-investigation into a complaint of theft, the house of the accused was searched, and a bundle of papers, about 58 in number, were found, which were alleged to be forgeries, or preparations for forgeries. The accused was thereupon committed to the Court of Session on a charge under s. 475 of the Penal Code. A few days before the trial of the accused, the police searched the house of one Shivlingapa, who was a witness for the defence, and there discovered a batch of suspicious papers, which were produced at the trial, and put in as evidence against the accused. The accused was convicted of the offence under s. 475 of the Penal Code, and sentenced to transportation for life. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that the suspicious papers found in Shivlingapa's house were not admissible in evidence against the accused. Held, further, that the Judge's direction to the jury regarding those papers—that they established a connection between the accused and many of the witnesses belonging to the same faction, and that they showed the extent to which the practice of forgery had gone in the village, and that in this way they were relevant to the question of guilty knowledge and intention—was a misdirection which prejudiced the accused. In the trial of an accused person on a charge under s. 475 of the Penal Code, the charge should be so framed as to specify distinctly that part of the section which is applicable to the case, and should distinctly specify the particular papers bearing a counterfeit mark or device which the accused was alleged to have had in his possession with the intent mentioned in the section.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ABAJI RAMCHANDRA, I. L. R. 15 Bom. 189. [Birdwood and Parsons, JJ. Sep. 3, 1890.]

To support a charge under s. 474 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the documents in respect of which the charge is brought are forged, (2) that the accused knew them to be forged, (3) that he was in possession of them; (4) that he intended that they should be fraudulently or dishonestly used as genuine; and (5) that each of the documents is of the description mentioned in s. 466 or s. 467 of the Penal Code. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge, (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them: (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents, an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up, the Sessions Judge, after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused, and whether the nature of one, at all events, of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused, being the kind of documents he would be likely to have in his house, and he alone, and that if they found this issue in the affirmative, they must return a verdict of guilty. Held that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading, and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882.)—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. Fraudulent cancellation, destruction, &c., of will, authority to adopt, or valuable security.

477. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly, or with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person, cancels, destroys, or defaces, or attempts to cancel, destroy, or deface, or secretes or attempts to secrete, any document which is, or purports to be, a will, or an authority to adopt a son, or any valuable security, or commits mischief in respect to such document, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

THE tearing-up of a patta is the destruction of a valuable security within the meaning of s. 477, Penal Code.—QUEEN v. NITAR MUNDLE, 3 W. R. 38. [Steer, J. July 4, 1865.]

THE fact that a document has not been stamped, and is not, therefore, receivable in evidence, does not prevent its being a "valuable security" within the meaning of s. 477 of the Penal Code.—PRO., Aug. 5, 1873, 7 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 26.

P M was convicted by a Magistrate under s. 426 of the Penal Code on a charge of mischief by tearing up a promissory note for Rs.

20. Held that the offence charged fell under s. 477 of the Penal Code, and was therefore triable by a Sessions Court only.—In re MADURAI, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 54. [Wilkinson and Shephard, JJ. Sep. 11, 1888.]

A, HAVING had certain transactions with B, wrote out a rough account, showing his indebtedness to B, and signed the total. The paper was not stamped. B afterwards presented it to A, and demanded payment of the total amount. A paid part only, and after an altercation tore up the paper. Held that the act of tearing up the paper constituted the offence of destroying a valuable security, and the harm caused was such that a person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of it.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAMASAMI, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 148. [Collins, C.J., and Wilkinson, J. Nov. 15, 20, 1888.]

CERTAIN persons were charged before a Magistrate of the first class under s. 379 of the Indian Penal Code with the theft of a promissory note. The prosecution applied for a further charge to be framed under s. 477 of the Indian Penal Code, but this the Magistrate declined to do, as, in his opinion, there was no direct evidence that the accused had destroyed or secreted the note. After hearing the evidence for the defence the Magistrate acquitted the accused under s. 258 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Application was then made to the Sessions Court to call for the records, and direct the committal of the accused for trial for an offence under s. 477 of the Indian Penal Code. The Sessions Court ordered that a further enquiry be made, and that the accused be committed for trial. On its being contended, on revision, that the order of the Sessions Court was illegal on the ground that the accused had been acquitted and not discharged. Held that the order of the Magistrate was, in substance, an order discharging the accused in respect of an alleged offence under s. 477, Indian Penal Code, and that the Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to make the order sought to be revised. Queen-Empress v Hanumantha Reddi (I. L. R., 23 Mad. 225), considered.—KRISHNA REDDI v SUBBAMMA, I. L. R., 24 Mad. 136. [White, C.J., and Subramania Ayyar and Davies, JJ. Mar. 16, and Sep. 27, 1900.]

Explanation.—It shall be sufficient in any charge under this section to allege a general intent to defraud without naming any particular person intended to be defrauded, or specifying any particular sum of money intended to be the subject of the fraud, or any particular day on which the offence was committed.

THE alteration in the law by s. 222 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898) does not apply to a charge under s. 477A of the Penal Code; it applies only to criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MATI LAL LAHIRI, I. ### *Of Trade, Property, and Other Marks.

478. A mark used for denoting that goods are the manufacture or merchandise of a particular person is called a trade-mark, and, for the purposes of this Code, the expression "trade-mark" includes any trade-mark which is registered in the register of trade-marks kept under the Patents, Designs, and Trade-marks Act, 1883,† and any trade-mark which, either with or without registration, is protected by law in any British possession or foreign State to which the provisions of the one hundred and third section of the Patents, Designs, and Trade-marks Act, 1883,† are, under order in Council, for the time being applicable.

THE complainant, as a descendant of one Shri Chandu, had for many years prepared calendars bearing the name of "Shri Chandu Panchang" at Jodhpur, and had sent each year a copy of such calendar to publishers in different parts of India, and from the copy so furnished, these publishers issued and published calendars bearing the name "Shri Chandu Panchang," thus denoting them as calendars prepared in Jodhpur by the descendants of Chandu. The defendant, a publisher in Bombay, prepared a calendar and put the name "Shri Chandu Panchang" on the outside, although the calendar was not prepared by the decendants of Shri Chandu. The complainant thereupon filed an information against the defendant under s. 482 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860) and s. 6 of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV. of 1889). Held (1) that the defendant had committed no offence under s. 482 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), for the title "Shri Chandu Panchang" did not come within the definition of "trade-mark" given in s 478 of the Code; (2) that the defendant's act did not fall under s 6 of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV. of 1889), as it was not alleged that the defendant's calendars differed as to text from the complainant's or were compiled on different principles; the allegation was simply that they were unauthorized.—RADHA KRISHNA JOSHI v. KISSONLAL SHRIDHAR, I. The right to proceed further was reserved, but no action was then taken. In 1898, upon its being ascertained that the same trade-mark was being used, a prosecution was commenced. Held that, inasmuch as the complainant had not shown that he believed the use of the alleged counterfeit trade-mark had been discontinued after his first discovery, and complaint in 1893, the prosecution was time-barred under s. 15 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act 1889; and that the complainant must enforce his remedy by civil process.—RUPPELL v. PONNUSAMI TEVAN, I. THE accused had been prosecuted and convicted under s. 61 of the Bengal Excise Act (Ben. On an application to quash the proceedings on the ground that the accused had been at the first trial put in peril of a conviction for the latter offences, and therefore the first trial operated as a bar to the institution of the present proceedings: Held that the provisions of s. 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code did not operate as a bar to the institution of the present proceedings. Under the second part of that section the fact of the accused having been charged at the first trial with one offence only did not prevent the institution of a separate proceeding in respect of some other offence which was disclosed during the course of the first trial.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. CROFT, I. A MAGISTRATE has jurisdiction to try an offence under s. 486 of the Penal Code if the accused be shown to be in possession of goods with a counterfeit trade-mark for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, though the sale or the trade or the manufacture for the purpose of which the accused has the goods in his possession be not intended to take place within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the complaint is lodged.—YUSUF MAMOMED ABARUTH v. BANSIDHUR SIRAOGI, I. BOOKS are the subject of trade, and are goods within the meaning of s. 2, cl. (4), of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV. of 1889). Therefore, when a person sells books with a counterfeit property-mark, he commits an offence under s. 486 of the Penal Code. The judgment of the High Court (O'Kinealy and Banerjee, JJ.) was as follows: "This is a rule calling upon the District Magistrate of Dacca to show cause why the convictions and sentences in this case should not be set aside on the ground that the facts do not amount to the offences of which the petitioners have been convicted, or why the sentences passed should not be reduced or otherwise altered. It appears that there is a well-known Bengali Primer by one Ram Sunder Basack, and it has been found that this book has a property-mark. The applicants are found to have sold large numbers of this book with a perfect knowledge that the book they sold was not the real book, but a book purporting to be the real one; and they were convicted of offences under ss. 482 and 486 of the Penal Code, and also of abetment of those offences under s. 109. It has been argued in this Court that books are not goods under Act IV. of 1889. 'Goods' is defined in that Act to be anything which is the subject of trade or manufacture, and although it was not argued that, in ordinary language, books are not the subject of trade, yet it was said that they were not the subject of trade within the meaning of that Act. 'Trade' is not defined, and we must, therefore, take the ordinary dictionary meaning of that word. That being so, there can hardly be any doubt that books are the subject of trade, and of a very large trade in Bengal, therefore books are covered by the word 'goods.' The convictions entered up against the accused are of three kinds: one for using a counterfeit trade-mark; the second for selling the book with a counterfeit property-mark, and the third for abetment of those offences. But we think that the conviction in this case ought simply to be a conviction under s 486, and we accordingly set aside the convictions under ss. 482 and 109. The result, therefore, is, that the applicants will remain convicted under s. 486, and will suffer rigorous imprisonment for three months, and they will have to be taken into custody, and serve out the remainder of the sentence."—KANAI DAS BAIRAGI v. RADHA SHYAM BASACK, I. Act VII. of 1878), and the proceedings were instituted against him under ss. 486 and 487 of the Penal Code, and ss. 6 and 7 of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV. of 1889). On an application to quash the proceedings on the ground that the accused had been at the first trial put in peril of a conviction for the latter offences, and therefore the first trial operated as a bar to the institution of the present proceedings: Held that the provisions of s. 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code did not operate as a bar to the institution of the present proceedings. Under the second part of that section the fact of the accused having been charged at the first trial with one offence only did not prevent the institution of a separate proceeding in respect of some other offence which was disclosed during the course of the first trial —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. CROFT, I. Tampering with property-mark with intent to cause injury.

489. Whoever removes, destroys, defaces, or adds to, any property-mark, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury to any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

'489A. Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

'Explanation.—For the purposes of this section and of sections 489B, 489C, and 489D, the expression "bank-note" means a promissory note or engagement for the payment of money to bearer on demand issued by any person carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, or issued by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign Power, and intended to be used as equivalent to, or as a substitute for, money.

Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes, or bank-notes.

'489C. Whoever has in his possession any forged or counterfeit currency-note or bank-note, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit, and intending to use the same as genuine, or that it may be used as genuine, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

DURING the trial of a case the accused obtained a process for the attendance of a witness. Before the witness appeared the accused asked the Court to countermand the order for his attendance, but the Court refused to do so. When the witness attended the accused declined to examine him He was thereupon examined by the Court, and upon the accused claiming the right to cross-examine the witness, the Court refused to allow him to do so. Held, that under the circumstances the witness could not be regarded as a witness for the defence, and that the accused should have been given an opportunity to cross-examine him. Held, also, that offences under ss. 411 and 489 (c) of the Penal Code are distinct offences, and should be tried separately. — MOHENDRO NATH DAS GUPTA v. EMPEROR, I. ## CHAPTER XIX.*

OF THE CRIMINAL BREACH OF CONTRACTS OF SERVICE.

Proc. Mag. or Mag. of 1st or 2nd class. Uncog. Summons. Bailable. Comp.

490. Whoever, being bound by a lawful contract to render his personal service in conveying or conducting any person or any property from one place to another place, or to act as servant to any person during a voyage or journey, or to guard any person or property during a voyage or journey, voluntarily omits so to do, except in the case of illness or ill-treatment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees, or with both.

Breach of contract of service during a voyage or journey.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, a palanquin-bearer, being bound by legal contract to carry Z from one place to another, runs away in the middle of the stage. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b.) A, a cooly, being bound by lawful contract to carry Z's baggage from one place to another, runs away in the middle of the stage. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(c.) A, a proprietor of bullocks, being bound by legal contract to convey goods on his bullocks from one place to another, illegally omits to do so. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(d.) A, by unlawful means, compels B, a cooly, to carry his baggage. B, in the course of the journey, puts down the baggage and runs away. Here, as B was not lawfully bound to carry the baggage, he has not committed any offence.

Explanation.—It is not necessary to this offence that the contract should be made with the person for whom the service is to be performed. It is sufficient if the contract is legally made with any person, either expressly or impliedly, by the person who is to perform the service.

Illustration.

A contracts with a dâk company to drive his carriage for a month. B employs the dâk company to convey him on a journey, and during the month the company supplies B with a carriage which is driven by A. A, in the course of the journey, voluntarily leaves the carriage. Here, although A did not contract with B, A is guilty of an offence under this section.

* Cognizance may be taken of an offence under Ch. XIX. only on complaint by an aggrieved party.—See the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), s. 198.

Offences punishable under Ch. XIX. are compoundable.—See the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), s. 345. As to stage of proceedings at which no composition is allowable without the leave of the Court, see ibid, sub-s. (5).

S. 490 does not apply to servants hired by the month, and under a continuing implied contract to serve until the engagement is terminated by a month's notice.—RULINGS OF THE MAD. H. C., 1864, ON S. 490.

AN agreement for personal service in conveying indigo from the field to the vats is not a contract, the breach of which is punishable by s. 490 of the Penal Code.—IN THE MATTER OF NOWA TEWAREE, 6 W. R. 80. [Kemp and Pundit, JJ. Oct. 3, 1866.]

Quære.—Whether the words, "during a voyage or journey," in s. 490 of the Penal Code, do not limit the offence made under that section to offences against travellers. That section, however, does not apply to a contract to place the defendant's carts at the complainant's disposal for a specified time to convey a thing from where he pleases to where he pleases.—SAGE v. NIRUNJUN CHATTERJEE, 9 W. R. 12. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Feb. 3, 1868.]

IN Unwin v. Clarke (1 L. R., Q. B., 417) the contract was held not to be terminated by conviction and punishment; but the Calcutta High Court has ruled the contrary.—2 Rev., Jud., and Pol. Jour. 24.

491. Whoever, being bound by a lawful contract to attend on or to supply the wants of any person who, by reason of youth or of unsoundness of mind, or a disease or bodily weakness, is helpless or incapable of providing for his own safety, or of supplying his own wants, voluntarily omits so to do, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Breach of contract to attend on and supply wants of helpless person.

THE Indian Law Commissioners give the following reasons for framing the above section: "Persons who contract to take care of infants, of the sick and helpless, lay themselves under an obligation of a peculiar kind, and may, with propriety, be punished if they omit to discharge their duty. They generally come from the lower ranks of life, and would be unable to pay anything. They therefore proposed to add to this class of contracts the sanction of the penal law."

Ditto.

492. Whoever, being bound by lawful contract in writing to work for another person as an artificer, workman, or labourer, for a period not more than three years, at any place within British India, to which, by virtue of the contract, he has been, or is to be, conveyed at the expense of such other, voluntarily deserts the service of that other during the continuance of his contract, or without reasonable cause refuses to perform the service which he has contracted to perform, such service being reasonable and proper service, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding one month, or with fine not exceeding double the amount of such expense, or with both, unless the employer has ill-treated him, or neglected to perform the contract on his part.

Breach of contract to serve at distant place to which servant is conveyed at master's expense.

S. 492, which makes it an offence for "an artificer, workman, or labourer" to break his contract of service under the circumstances specified in the section, does not apply to domestic servants.—CROWN v. KALLU, Panj. Rec., No. 20 of 1876.

WHERE a labourer has once been punished under s 492, it has been held that his refusal to fulfil the terms of the contract on his release from imprisonment does not render him liable to a second punishment.—2 Rev., Jud. and Pol. Jour. 24.

CHAPTER XX.*

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO MARRIAGE.

Ct. of Ses. Uncog. Warrant. Not bailable. Not comp.

493. Every man who by deceit causes any woman who is not lawfully married to him, to believe that she is lawfully married to him, and to cohabit or have sexual intercourse with him in that belief, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage.

A HINDU Christian convert relapsing into Hinduism, and marrying a Hindu woman, cannot be convicted of bigamy, on the ground that he has another wife living whom he married while a professing Christian.—PRO., Nov. 8, 1866, 3 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 7. [Holloway and Innes, JJ. Nov. 8, 1866.]

MARRIAGE must be presumed from the fact of a man and woman living together and from their own evidence (altogether unrebutted) that she is his legally married wife.—QUEEN v. WUZEERAH, 17 W. R. 5; 8 B. L. R. Ap. 63. [Loch and Ainslie, JJ. Jan. 6, 1872.] Overruled by Empress v. Pitambur Singh, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 566; 5 C. L. R. 597, infra.

THE provisions of s. 50 of the Evidence Act show that, where marriage is an ingredient in an offence, as in bigamy, adultery, and the enticing of married women, the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved.—EMPRESS v. PITAMBUR SINGH, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 566; 5 C. L. R. 597. [Garth, C.J., and Jackson, Pontifex, Morris, and McDonell, JJ. Dec. 8, 1879.] Follows Queen v. Smith, 4 W. R. 31. Overrules Queen v. Wuseerah, 17 W. R. 5; 8 B. L. R. Ap. 63. Discussed in Queen-Empress v. Subbarayan, I. L. R., 9 Mad. 9. Followed in Empress of India v. Kallu, I. L. R., 5 All. 233; Empress v. Arshed Ali, 13 C. L. R. 125.

S. 50 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) runs as follows:—

WHEN the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact, provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act, or in prosecutions under s. 494, 495, 497, or 498 of the Indian Penal Code.

(a) The question is, whether A and B were married.

The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife is relevant.

(b.) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B. The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family is relevant.

Ct. of Ses. Uncog. Warrant. Bailable. Not comp.

494. Whoever, having a husband or wife living, marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Marrying again during lifetime of husband or wife.

Exception.—This section does not extend to any person whose marriage with such husband or wife has been declared void by a Court of competent

* Cognizance may be taken of an 'offence' under s. 493, 494, 495, or 496, only on complaint by an aggrieved party, and of an offence under s. 497 or 498 only on complaint by the husband or guardian of the woman.—See the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), ss. 198, 199.

Offences punishable under ss. 497 and 498 are compoundable.—See ibid, s. 345. As to stage of proceedings under ss. 497 and 498 at which no composition is allowable without the leave of the Court, see ibid, sub-s. (5).

jurisdiction, nor to any person who contracts a marriage during the life of a former husband or wife, if such husband or wife, at the time of the subsequent marriage, shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years, and shall not have been heard of by such person as being alive within that time, provided the person contracting such subsequent marriage shall, before such marriage takes place, inform the person with whom such marriage is contracted of the real state of facts, so far as the same are within his or her knowledge.

A MAHOMEDAN, having four lawful wives alive and undivorced, commits bigamy when he marries a fifth.—Mac. M. Law, p. 255.

HELD that a custom of the Talapoda Koli caste, that a woman should be permitted to leave the husband to whom she has been first married, and to contract a second marriage (natra) with another man during the lifetime of her first husband and without his consent, was invalid, as being entirely opposed to the spirit of the Hindu law, and that such marriage was "void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband," and, therefore, punishable as regards the woman under s. 494 of the Penal Code, and that the man with whom the woman so married, having had sexual intercourse with her, and it being found that he did not honestly believe that she had become his wife, was guilty of adultery under s. 497.—REG. v. KARSAN GOJA, REG. v. BAI RUPA, 2 Bom. H. C. R. 117. [Forbes and Couch, JJ. April 22, 1864.]

A HINDU Christian convert relapsing into Hinduism, and marrying a Hindu woman, cannot be convicted of bigamy, on the ground that he has another wife living whom he married while a professing Christian.—PRO., Nov. 8, 1866, 3 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 7. [Holloway and Innes, JJ. Nov. 8, 1866.]

ON a trial for bigamy, the defence was that the marriage of the woman (the accused) with the prosecutor was null and void, as the woman was a minor at the time, and married without the consent of her relations. She was a widow when she married the prosecutor. Held that her marriage with the prosecutor was legal.—MADHA v. MUSSAMMAT JEEWEE, Panj. Rec., No. 2 of 1869.

HELD on a trial for bigamy, that the apostacy of a Hindu wife does not dissolve the marriage union.—CROWN v. MUSSAMMAT GHOLAM FATIMA, Panj. Rec., No. 32 of 1870.

A NIKA-MARRIAGE falls within the purview of ss. 494 and 495; it is a well-known and well-established form of marriage amongst Mahomedans.—QUEEN v. JUDDO MUSSULMANEE, 6 W. R. 60. [Seton-Karr, J. Aug. 27, 1868.] And the issue of a nika-marriage would be legitimate under the Mahomedan law.—SHEIKH MONEEROODDEEN v. RAMDHUN BAJEEKUR, 18 W. R. 28. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. July 17, 1872.]

COURTS of law will not recognize the authority of a caste to declare a marriage void, or to give permission to a woman to re-marry. Bond-fide belief that the consent of the caste made the second marriage valid does not constitute a defence to a charge, under s. 494 of the Penal Code, of marrying again during the lifetime of the first husband, or to a charge of abetment of that offence under that section combined with s. 109.—REG. v. SAMBHU RAGHU, I. L. R., 1 Bom. 347. Melvill and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Sep. 7, 1876.

IF the first marriage is valid, it is bigamy to marry again (i.e., to go through a form of marriage known to the law as capable of producing a valid marriage), though the second marriage be void on another ground besides that of its being bigamous.—GURBAKSH SINGH v. SHAMA SINGH, Panj. Rec., No. 19 of 1876.

A MAHOMEDAN guardian of a married female infant who, while her husband is living, causes a marriage ceremony to be gone through by her name with another man, but without her taking any part in the transaction, does not commit the offence of abetment under ss. 109 and 494 of the Penal Code. The practice of instituting criminal proceedings with a view to determining disputes arising in cases of this class condemned.—IN THE MATTER OF THE EMPRESS v. ABDOOL KURREEM, I. L. R., 4 Cal. 10. [White and Prinsep, JJ. July 9, 1878.]

A CRIMINAL Court is bound to decide the question of marriage when it is essential to the decision of the question whether an offence has been committed or not. The doctrine of a certain school of Mahomedan divines in regard to the competency of a woman to marry again after the absence of her husband for four years does not entitle a woman so re-marrying to the benefit of the exception to s. 494.—ALAM SHAH v. JEWAN, Panj. Rec., No. 57 of 1878.

THE accused were charged before a Magistrate of the first-class with enticing away a married woman (s. 498). The inquiry having shown that an offence under s. 494 had apparently been committed, the proceedings were forwarded under s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code, for disposal to the Magistrate of the District, who tried the case de novo, and convicted the accused under ss. 109 and 494. Held that the preferring a complaint was an essential condition of the Magistrate's jurisdiction to inquire into and try an offence falling under ch. 20 of the Penal Code, and the extent of the jurisdiction so founded was limited to offences covered by the facts complained of; that there had been no complaint of an offence under s. 494, and that the conviction was therefore illegal. Held also that the Magistrate, before whom the complaint was made of an offence under s. 498, had jurisdiction to try it, and therefore that it was not competent for him to proceed under s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code. —FAIZ AHMED v. EMPRESS, Panj. Rec., No 5 of 1879.

THE conversion of a Hindu wife to Mahomedanism does not, ipso facto, dissolve her marriage with her husband, she cannot, therefore, during his lifetime, enter into any other valid marriage contract Her going through the ceremony of nika with a Mahomedan is consequently an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code.—GOVT. OF BOMBAY v. GANGA, I. L. R., 4 Bom. 330. [Pinhey and Melvill, JJ. Jan. 26, 1880.]

A CONVICTION under s. 494 of the Penal Code for marrying again during the lifetime of a husband or wife cannot be upheld where there is evidence to show that such marriages are not unusual among persons of the same caste as the accused, and it is not proved that such marriages are void.—IN THE MATTER OF MUSSAMUT CHAMIA, 7 C. L. R. 354. [Garth, C J., and Field, J. Nov. 23, 1880. Followed in Jukni v. Queen-Empress, I. L R., 19 Cal. 627, infra.

A MEMBER of the caste of Ajanya Rajput Guzars, residing in Khandesh, executed a deed of divorce to his wife. The Court held on the evidence that the deed was proved, and that in this caste a husband was, for a sufficient reason, such as incontinence, allowed to divorce his wife; that the deed in the present case had not been executed for a sufficient reason; and that, consequently, the parties entering into a second marriage were guilty of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code, and that the priest who officiated at that marriage was an abettor under ss. 494 and 109. Mere consent of persons to be present at an illegal marriage, or their presence in pursuance of such consent, or the grant of accommodation in a house for the marriage, does not necessarily constitute abetment of such marriage.—EMPRESS v. UMI, I. L. R., 6 Bom. 126. [Melvill and Kemball, JJ. Jan. 11, 1882.]

WHERE the wife of a lunatic was prosecuted for bigamy on the complaint of the lunatic's brother, held that the complainant, merely as brother of the lunatic, was not a "person aggrieved by such offence" within the meaning of s. 198 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882), and that the complaint could not be entertained —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BAI RUKSHMONI, I. L. R., 10 Bom. 340. [Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Jan. 21, 1886.] Referred to in The Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Sarna Kahmi, I. L. R., 26 Cal. 336, infra.

A WAS baptized in infancy into the Roman Catholic Church but subsequently relapsed, with the rest of the family into Hinduism, and was married to a Hindu Her Hindu husband since discarded her, and alleged that he would not have married her if he had known that she had been baptized A was subsequently re-admitted into the Roman Catholic Church, and married by B, a priest, to a Roman Catholic during the lifetime of her Hindu husband. Held that A's marriage with the Hindu was subsisting and valid at the time of her Christian marriage, that she was guilty of the offence of bigamy and that B was guilty of abetting that offence. Lopes v. Lopes (I L. R, 12 Cal. 706) discussed.—In re MILLARD, I L. R. 10 Mad. 218. [Collins, C.J., and Parker J. April 1, 1887.]

THE petitioner originally a Hindu woman, and the illegitimate offspring of Chattri parents was duly married according to Hindu rites to D, who was also by caste a Chattri. Subsequent to the marriage the petitioner became a convert to Mahomedanism, and then married a Mahomedan. She was charged with, and convicted of, an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code. It was contended on her behalf that—(1) the marriage between her and D was invalid under Hindu law by reason of her illegitimacy and the consequent difference of caste between the contracting parties; (2) the marriage between her and D became dissolved under the Hindu law on her conversion to Mahomedanism; and (3) the second marriage was not void under the Mahomedan law by reason of its taking place in the lifetime of D, and that the conviction was therefore erroneous. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to D previous to the second marriage calling on him to become a Mahomedan. Held that illegitimacy under Hindu law is no absolute disqualification for marriage, and that, when one or both contracting parties to a marriage are illegitimate, the marriage must be regarded as valid, if they are recognized by their caste people as belonging to the same caste. Held also that there is no authority in Hindu law for the proposition that an apostate is absolved from all civil obligations, and that, so far as the matrimonial bond is concerned, such a view would be contrary to the spirit of that law, which regards it as indissoluble, and that accordingly the marriage between the petitioner and D was not, under the Hindu law, dissolved by her conversion to Mahomedanism. Rahmed Beebee v. Rokeya Beebee (1 Norton's Leading Cases on Hindu Law, p. 12) dissented from. Held further that, as the validity of the second marriage depended on the Mahomedan law, and as that law does not allow a plurality of husbands, it would be void or valid according as the first marriage was or was not subsisting at the time it took place. That no notice having been given to D as required by Mahomedan law previous to the second marriage, and no recourse having been had to the Courts for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the former marriage was dissolved, and as British India cannot be held to be a foreign country for the purpose of rendering such notice unnecessary, the previous marriage was not dissolved under Mahomedan law, and the subsequent marriage was therefore void. Held accordingly that the conviction was right.—In re RAM KUMARI, I. L. R., 18 Cal. 264. [Macpherson and Banerjee, JJ. Feb. 18, 1891.]

B, a Mahomedan girl, whose father was dead, was alleged to have been given in marriage by her mother to J some years before she attained puberty. Prior to her attaining puberty, J was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for theft. While he was in jail, B, after she had attained puberty, contracted a marriage with P. The marriage with J was never consummated. On J being released from jail, he proceeded to prosecute B and P for bigamy and abetment of bigamy, and also charged P with adultery. It appeared that before taking proceedings, J requested B to return to him, but she refused to do so. The marriage between B and J was sought to be proved by the evidence of J, B's mother, and two witnesses who were said to have been present. B and P were both convicted. Held, on appeal, that the evidence of the marriage between B and J was insufficient to justify a conviction in the absence of proof that a Mollah was present at the ceremony, or that the sigha required to be recited at the marriage of minors was recited, or the akd performed. Held, further, that, assuming B to have been given in marriage to J when a mere child by her mother, she had the option of either ratifying or repudiating such marriage on attaining puberty. Under the Shia law, such a marriage is of no effect until it has been ratified by the minor, and under the Sunni law it is effective till cancelled by the minor. Under both schools of law, the minor has the absolute power, on attaining puberty, to ratify or cancel unauthorized marriage, though under the Sunni law ratification is presumed if the girl remains silent after attaining puberty, and allows the marriage to be consummated. Held, on the facts of the case, that the circumstances afforded sufficient indication, even assuming the girl to be governed by the Sunni law, that she never ratified the marriage. Held, also, that a judicial order was not necessary to effect the cancellation of the marriage.—BADAL AURAT v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 19 Cal. 79. [Beverley and Ameer Ali, JJ. Sep. 21, 1891.]

A CONVICTION under s 494 of the Penal Code cannot be supported where there is evidence to show that, by the custom of the caste, sagai or nikka marriage was admissible, and that the husband had relinquished his wife. In re Mussamut Chamia (7 C. A WOMAN, who does not use all reasonable means in her power to inform herself of the fact of her first husband's alleged demise, and contracts a second marriage within 16 months after cohabitation with her first husband without disclosing the fact of the former marriage to her second husband, is liable to enhanced punishment under s. 495, Penal Code.

—QUEEN v. ENAI BEEBEE, 4 W. R. 25. [Loch, Kemp, and Glover, JJ. Nov. 20, 1865.]

A NIKA MARRIAGE falls within the purview of ss. 494 and 495 of the Penal Code. It is a well-known and well-established form of marriage amongst Mahomedans.—QUEEN v. JUDOO MUSSULMANEE, 6 W. R. 60. [Seton-Karr, J. Aug. 27, 1866.]

THE nika form of marriage is well-known and established among Mahomedans. The issue of a nika-marriage would be legitimate under the Mahomedan law—SHEIK MONEEROODEEN v. RAMDHUN BAJEEKUR, 18 W. R. 28. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. July 18, 1872.]

THE act of causing the publication of banns of marriage is an act done in the preparation to marry, but does not amount to an attempt to marry. Where, therefore, a man, having a wife living, caused the banns of marriage between himself and a woman to be published, he could not be punished for an attempt to marry again during the lifetime of his wife.—REG. v. PETERSON, I. L. R., 1 All. 316. [Pearson, J. Dec. 6, 1876.]

THE elder paternal uncle of a Mahomedan girl, a minor, disposed of her in marriage, after he knew she had previously been given in lawful marriage by his younger brother. Held that the act did not, per se, constitute a criminal offence, even though the second-marriage were valid, it appearing that the accused was the only person concerned in the second marriage who knew of the first, and that the girl was not present. A and B were indicted under ss. 109 and 495 of the Penal Code.—A for giving his niece (a minor) in marriage, she being then married, and B for aiding therein. The girl was not present at the marriage, and there was no evidence to show A had conspired with any person but B, whom the jury acquitted. Held that the acquittal of B involved the acquittal of A.—ABDOOL KURREEM v. EMPRESS, 3 C. L. R. 81. [White and Prinsep, JJ. July 19, 1878.]

496. Whoever dishonestly or with a fraudulent intention goes through the ceremony of being married, knowing that he is not thereby lawfully married, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Ct. of Ses. Uncog. Warrant. Not bailable. Not comp.

Marriage-ceremony fraudulently gone through without lawful marriage.

PROOF of dishonest or fraudulent intent is necessary for a conviction under s. 496 of the Penal Code of falsely going through the ceremony of marriage. The mere act of allowing the marriage to take place at one's house does not amount to the abetment of an illegal marriage—QUEEN v. KUDUM, W. R. Gap., 1864, 13. [Steer and Morgan, JJ. Feb. 24, 1864.]

497. Whoever has sexual intercourse with a person who is, and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be, the wife of another man, without the consent or connivance of that man, such sexual intercourse not amounting to the offence of rape, is guilty of the offence of adultery, and shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both. In such case the wife* shall not be punishable as an abettor.

Adultery.

HELD that a custom of the Talapoda Koli caste, that a woman should be permitted to leave the husband to whom she has been first married, and to contract a second marriage (natra) with another man during the lifetime of her first husband, and without his consent, was invalid, as being entirely opposed to the spirit of the Hindu law, and that such marriage was "void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband," and therefore punishable, as regards the woman, under s. 494 of the Penal Code; and that the man with whom the woman so married, having had sexual intercourse with her, and it being found that he did not honestly believe that she had become his wife, was guilty of adultery under s. 497.—REG. v. KARSAN GOJA; REG. v. BAI RUPA, 2 Bom. H. C. R. 117. [Forbes and Couch, JJ. April 22, 1864.]

A PERSON convicted of adultery under s. 497 of the Penal Code need not be convicted also under s. 498; far less where there is no taking or enticing away of the woman.—QUEEN v. POCHUN CHUNG, 2 W. R. 35. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Feb. 14, 1865.]

THE offence of adultery may be compounded. In proceedings founded on a charge of adultery, strict proof is necessary of the marriage of the woman with whom adultery is alleged, and the charge should be instituted by the husband of the woman. The Appellate Court will not uphold a conviction for adultery when the husband has shown that he has condoned the offence.—QUEEN v. SMITH (G R.), 4 W. R. 31; 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 8. [Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ. Dec. 5, 1865.]

WHERE the husband of a woman, with whom the accused was alleged to have committed adultery, professed himself unwilling to proceed with the prosecution, and the Assistant Sessions Judge thereupon ordered the accused to be discharged, the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, declined to interfere.—REG. v. RAMLO JERIO, 5 Bom. H. C R. 27. [Couch, C.J., and Newton J. Jan 14, 1868.]

WHERE a person accused of adultery sets up in defence a natra, contracted with the woman with whom he is alleged to have committed adultery, in accordance with the custom of his caste, the question the Court has to determine is, whether or not the accused honestly believed at the time of contracting the natra, that the woman was the wife of another man.—REG. v. MANOHAR RAIJI, 5 Bom. H. C R. 17. [Couch, C.J., and Newton, J. Feb. 22, 1868.]

THE death of the husband does not necessarily put an end to a prosecution for adultery under s. 497 of the Penal Code. The law only requires that the prosecution should be instituted by the husband.—PRO., July 13, 1869, 4 Mad. H C. R. Ap 55.

THE accused committed house-trespass with intent to commit adultery. The husband refused to make a charge of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery, but made a charge of house-trespass with intent to commit theft, which was disproved. It was held that the Magistrate had acted rightly in refusing to convict on the charge laid by the husband, though the accused admitted that he had trespassed to carry on an intrigue.—PRO., Nov. 15, 1869, 5 Mad. H. C. R. Ap 5.

A ENTERED the house of B without the latter's permission, and committed adultery with B's wife. Held that A could be separately convicted of and punished for both the adultery and house-trespass, as they were distinct offences, but that, under the circumstances, B's wife was by law incapable of committing abetment of the house-trespass.—CROWN v. SHEIKH MUNGLI, Panj Rec No. 5 of 1871.

WHERE the husband brought a specific complaint for adultery under s. 497, and the Magistrate framed a charge and convicted under s. 498, the Chief Court quashed the conviction.—SHER SING v. CROWN, Panj. Rec. No. 18 of 1873.

PROOF of adultery required by a Criminal Court must not be less than that required in a divorce suit. There must be, where the wife and the alleged adulterer are not caught in the act, evidence of criminal intention and opportunity. And there must be no consent or connivance on the part of the husband.—SHER ALI v. CROWN, Panj. Rec. No. 1 of 1874.

THE fact that a charge under the Penal Code, s. 497, was triable with assessors, and not by a jury, would not affect the legality of a conviction of adultery before a jury. Quære.—Is the formal assent of a husband to a charge of adultery, added at the end of his deposition, a proper compliance with Act X. of 1872, s. 478 (corresponding with Act V. of 1898, s. 199)—QUEEN v. LUCKHY NARAIN NAGORY, 24 W. R. 18. [Glover and Mitter, JJ. June 28, 1875.]

THE complainant, a Mahomedan, alleged that he had been married six times; that all the women were living, but that he kept two of the first four partially divorced (i.e., by pronouncing the words of divorce only once or twice, and not thrice) in order to legalize his marriage with the fifth and sixth, and so keep within the law, which permitted him to have four wives. Accused was charged with abducting or committing adultery with complainant's sixth wife. Held that the woman in question was not the wife of the complainant. Conviction quashed.—RAHNAWAZ KHAN v. CROWN, Panj. Rec., No. 1 of 1875.

SAGAI wives, i.e., widows married in accordance with the custom of Sagai prevailing amongst the Koirees and other low castes of Behar, are so far the legal wives of either husbands as to justify the punishment of persons committing adultery with them.—BISSURAM KOIREE v. EMPRESS, 3 C. L. R. 410. [Ainslie and Maclean, JJ. Aug. 16, 1878.]

K was accused by D and P, alleged to be D's wife, of raping P, and was committed for trial, charged in the alternative with rape or adultery. The evidence of marriage between D and P consisted of their statements that they were married to each other, and of a statement by K that P was D's wife. K was convicted on the charge of adultery. Held that such evidence, having regard, not only to s. 50 of the Evidence Act, 1872, but to the principle that strict proof should be required in all criminal cases, was not sufficient to establish the vital incident to the charge of adultery, namely, the marital relation of D and P. Empress v. Pitambur Singh (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 566) concurred in. Also that, as no complaint had ever been actually instituted by D against K for the offence of adultery, as contemplated by s. 478 of Act X. of 1872, the circumstance of D's appearing as a witness for the prosecution for the offence of rape not amounting to the institution of a complaint within the meaning of that section), K's conviction for adultery must be quashed.—EMPRESS v KALLU, I. L. R., 5 All. 233. [Straight, J. Dec. 8, 1882.] Followed in Chemon Garo v. Emperor, I. L. R., 29 Cal. 415, infra

A MAN may be convicted of house-trespass with intent to commit adultery, even though the charge is made by a person other than the husband, provided there is no consent or connivance on the part of the husband.—3 Mad Jur 285.

A WIFE petitioned for maintenance for herself and child against her husband under s. 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The husband did not refuse to maintain his wife but the petitioner refused to live with him, as he kept a concubine. Held that the word 'adultery' in s. 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code must, by virtue of s 4 of the Code be construed with reference to the definition of the term in s. 497 of the Penal Code. Consequently, a husband's immorality, which does not amount to 'adultery,' or involve the degradation of a married woman being brought into the society of a concubine, is not sufficient ground for a wife's refusal to live with her husband. An offer to maintain a wife must be an offer to maintain with the consideration due to her position as a wife. Vazal-kal v. Kandappa (I. L. R., 6 Mad. 371) cited. Per Best, J.—It is very doubtful if the framers of s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure intended the word 'adultery,' as used therein, to have the limited meaning given to it in the Penal Code. The wrong done to the wife is in no way affected by the circumstance of her husband's concubine being married or unmarried, or, in case of her being married, whether it is with or without her husband's consent or collusion that she is living in such concubinage. In fact, however, of s. 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code, no other interpretation of the term 'adultery' is possible than the limited interpretation contained in the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v MANNATHA ACHARI, I. L. R., 17 Mad 260. [Muttusami Ayyar and Best, JJ. Oct 27, 1893.]

BEFORE a criminal charge of adultery can be preferred a formal complaint of that offence must be instituted in the manner provided by s 199 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Therefore, where an accused person was committed to the Sessions to stand his trial on a charge preferred by a husband of rape under s. 376 of the Penal Code, and the Sessions Judge at the trial added a charge of adultery under s. 497, and acquitted the accused under s. 376, but convicted him of rape under s. 497. Held that the Sessions Judge had acted without jurisdiction. The fact that the husband appeared as a witness in the prosecution of the offence of rape cannot be regarded as amounting to the institution of a complaint for adultery. Empress v Kallu (I. L. R., 5 All. 233) followed.—CHEMON GARO v EMPEROR, I. L. R., 29 Cal. 415. [Prinsep and Stephen, JJ. Feb. 5, 1902.]

498. Whoever takes or entices away any woman who is, and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be, the wife of any other man, from that man, or from any person having the care of her on behalf of that man, with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person, or conceals or detains with that intent any such woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both

Enticing or taking away or detaining with a criminal intent a married woman.

THE prisoners having been sentenced for abetment of abduction of a woman under ss. 109 and 498 of the Penal Code, and for wrongful confinement of her under s 343, held that both sentences could not stand, and that, as the essence of the case was abduction, the prisoners, as abettors therein, should be punished for it alone.—QUEEN v. ISHWAR CHUNDER JOGI, W R Gap., 1864, 21. [Loch and Seton-Karr, JJ. April 12, 1864.]

WHERE a procuress was convicted for inducing a married woman of 20 to leave her husband's house, and the fact showed that the wife had made her deliberate choice (she being of mature age), and was determined of her own free will to leave her husband, and become a prostitute in Calcutta, the High Court altered the conviction from abduction to enticement, remarking that, whatever the wife's secret inclinations were, she would have had no opportunity of carrying them out had not the prisoner interposed.—QUEEN v. SRIMOTEE PODDEE, 1 W. R. 45. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Dec 16, 1864.] But according to the case of Empress v Kallu (I. L. R., 5 All. 233), and s 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, neither the High Court nor any other Criminal Court has any jurisdiction to alter a charge of abduction to one of enticement. There must be a formal complaint of enticement by the party aggrieved. —ED.

WHERE the man and the woman are perfectly agreed, the act of the third party, who merely accompanies the woman from her husband's house, amounts to abetment only. —RULINGS OF MAD. H. C., 1864, ON S. 498.

A PERSON convicted of adultery under s 497 of the Penal Code need not be convicted also under s. 498, far less where there is no taking or enticing away of the woman.—QUEEN v. POCHUN CHUNG, 2 W. R. 35. [Kemp and Glover, JJ Feb. 14, 1865.]

UPON an indictment under s 498 of the Penal Code, charging that the prisoner took away one A, who was then, and whom he then knew to be, the wife of one M, with the intent that he might have illicit intercourse with the said A. held that there was a taking within the meaning of the section, although the advances and solicitations had proceeded from the woman, and the prisoner had for some time refused to yield to her request — REG. v. KUMARASAMI, 2 Mad. H. C. R. 331. [Scotland, C.J., and Bittleston, J. Feb. 24, 1865.]

THE following remarks were made by the High Court, in upholding a conviction in a case in which an accused had eloped with a woman from a house in Calcutta, hired for her by her husband, who was absent in Assam "We cannot say (as the Sessions Judge said) that 'a wife is always the property of her husband, whether he is absent or present,' but we think it clear that a wife living in her husband's house or in a house hired by him for her occupation, and at his expense, is, during his temporary absence, living under his protection, so as to bring the case within the meaning of s 498, provided, of course, that the defendant knew, or had reason to believe, that she was the wife of the man from whose protection he took her, or on whose behalf the person from whom he took her had charge of her, and also provided he took her with the intent specified in the Act. To hold otherwise would be to declare the worst cases of seduction not punishable under the Penal Code."—MUTTY KHAN v. MUNGLOO KHANSAMA. 1 Wyman's Rev., Civ., and Crim. Rep. 45; 5 W R. 50. [Jackson and Glover, JJ Mar. 6, 1866.]

IN a charge under s. 498 of the Penal Code, the words of the section, "conceals or detains," must be taken to extend to the enticing or inducing a wife to withold or conceal herself from her husband, and assisting her to do so, as well as to physical restraint or prevention of her will or action. Depriving the husband of proper control over his wife for the purpose of illicit intercourse is the gist of the offence, and a detention occasioning such deprivation may be brought about simply by the influence of allurements and blandishments.—In re SUNDARA DASS TEVAN, 4 Mad. IN a charge under s. 498 of the Penal Code (of taking away a married woman), marriage must be presumed from the fact of a man and woman living together and from their own evidence (altogether unrebutted) that she is his legally married wife.—QUEEN v. WUZEERAH, 17 W. R. 5; 8 B. L. R. Ap. 63. [Loch and Ainslie, JJ. Jan. 6, 1872.] Overruled by Empress v. Pitambur Singh, I. L. R., 5 Cal 566; 5 C. L. R 597.

WHERE the husband brought a specific complaint for adultery under s. 497, and the Magistrate framed a charge and convicted under s. 498, the Chief Court quashed the conviction.—SHER SINGH v. CROWN, Panj. Rec., No 18 of 1873

A FINDING exactly in the words of s. 498 of the Penal Code, that the prisoner took or enticed away a married woman from her husband or some person having the care of her on his behalf with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person, or concealed or detained such woman with a like intent—though not actually illegal, when it is doubtful which of the several offences has been committed, is a finding which ought not to be resorted to if it can be avoided, and it can be determined under which part of the section the prisoner is guilty—QUEEN v. MUTHOORA NATH ROY, 22 W. R. 72. [Markby and Mitter, JJ Aug 24, 1874.]

THE accused were charged before a Magistrate of the first class with enticing away a married woman (s 498). The enquiry having shown that an offence under s. 494 had apparently been committed, the proceedings were forwarded, under s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code, for disposal to the Magistrate of the District, who tried the case de novo, and convicted the accused under ss 109 and 494. Held that the preferring a complaint was an essential condition of the Magistrate's jurisdiction to inquire into and try an offence falling under Ch. XX. of the Penal Code, and the extent of the jurisdiction so founded was limited to offences covered by the facts complained of; that there had been no complaint of an offence under s. 494; and that the conviction was therefore illegal. Held also that the Magistrate before whom the complaint was made of an offence under s. 498 had jurisdiction to try it, and, therefore, that it was not competent for him to proceed under s. 45, Criminal Procedure Code.—FAIZ AHMED v. EMPRESS, Panj. Rec., No. 5 of 1879.

THE accused were convicted by the Magistrate of the District of Lahore, exercising enhanced powers under s. 36, Criminal Procedure Code of kidnapping a married woman (being a minor) from lawful guardianship for the purpose of prostitution, and sentenced under ss 363 and 372, Penal Code, to terms of imprisonment exceeding three years The proceedings were forwarded to the Sessions Judge, Lahore Division, for confirmation of the sentences. The Sessions Judge, holding that ss. 363 and 372, Penal Code, were inapplicable to married female minors, annulled the conviction, and directed the re-trial of the accused on a charge under s. 498, Penal Code Held that the order of the Sessions Judge was illegal. 1st, because ss. 363 and 372 were applicable to married as well as to unmarried female minors; 2nd, because the Sessions Judge was not competent under s 36, Criminal Procedure Code, to direct a new trial upon a new charge; and 3rd, because no complaint had been preferred of an offence falling under s. 498, Penal Code —CROWN v. KAMMU, Panj. Rec., No. 12 of 1879.

AN order of acquittal of an offence under s. 498 was upheld, where it was found that the complainant had divorced his wife previous to making his complaint.—HUKAM DIN v. ALLACHI, Panj Rec., No 27 of 1879

A PERSON was prosecuted before a Criminal Court in the Panjab for enticing away a married woman with a criminal intent an offence punishable under s. 498 of the Penal Code. Such prosecution was legally instituted in such Court, and such offence was properly triable by it. Such Court discharged such person under the provisions of s 215 of Act X. of 1872. Subsequently it appeared that such person was detaining such woman at a place in the North-Western Provinces, and he was prosecuted before a Criminal Court of the district in which such place was situated for the same offence as he had been prosecuted for before the Criminal Court in the Panjab, viz., enticing away such married woman, and was convicted of that offence. Held that, although his previous discharge did not bar the revival of a prosecution for the same offence, such prosecution could only be revived in the Panjab Court, and he could not be convicted under the latter part of s. 498 of the Penal Code for detaining an enticed woman until the enticing had been proved, and such conviction had been properly set aside by the Court of Session.—EMPRESS v. TIKA SINGH, I. L. R., 3 All. 251. [Pearson and Oldfield, JJ. Sep. 1, 1880.]

IN the absence of very clear evidence of custom, which, if well founded, must be a matter of general notoriety, the cohabitation of a man and a woman under the Alyasantana system cannot be considered marriage so as to render punishable, under s. 498 of the Penal Code, a person who entices away the woman with the intents specified in that section.—KORAGA v. QUEEN, I. L. R., 6 Mad. 374. [Turner, C.J., and Muttusami Ayyar, J. Feb. 14, 1883.]

S AND G having been convicted of enticing away the wife of the complainant, the conviction was quashed on appeal, on the ground that, strict proof of marriage being necessary for a conviction under s. 498 of the Penal Code, the evidence adduced (viz., of the complainant, the woman, and her mother, who swore to the fact of the marriage) was not sufficient to enable the Court to form an opinion whether the marriage took place as a fact, and if it did take place, whether it was according to law. The accused did not cross-examine the witnesses as to the fact or validity of the marriage, or otherwise impugn it. Held that the marriage was sufficiently proved. Empress v. Pitambar Singh (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 566, 5 C. L. R. 597) discussed —QUEEN EMPRESS v. SUBBARAYAN, I. L. R., 9 Mad. 9 [Muttusami Ayyar and Hutchins, JJ. Aug. 25, 1885.]

THE words "such woman" in s. 498 of the Indian Penal Code do not mean such a woman as has been so enticed as mentioned in that section, but mean such woman whom the accused knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of any other man; the detention of such a woman with the particular intent defined in the section is one of the offences made punishable under that section.—EMPRESS v. NIADAR, I. L. R., 10 All. 580. [Straight, J. July 7, 1888.]

THE complainant charged the accused with an offence under s 366 of the Penal Code in respect of his wife. The Deputy Magistrate convicted the accused of an offence under s. 498 of the Penal Code, and sentenced him to one month's rigorous imprisonment. The Sessions Judge, being of opinion that the Deputy Magistrate had no jurisdiction to convict the accused under s. 498, there being no complaint by the husband under s. 199 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that the offence did not fall under s. 238 of the Criminal Procedure Code, referred the case to the High Court. Held that such a case is within the intention of s. 238. The intention of the law is to prevent Magistrates inquiring of their own motion into cases connected with marriage, unless the husband or other person authorized moves them to do so But when the husband is complainant, and brings his complaint under s 366, a conviction under s. 498 may properly be had if the evidence be such as to justify a conviction for the minor offence, and yet insufficient for a conviction for the graver one.—JATRA SHEKH v. REAZAT SHEKH, I. L. R., 20 Cal. 483. [Pigot and Hill, JJ. Sep. 19, 1892.] But see, contra, Empress v. Kallu, I. L. R., 5 All. 233.

WHERE a charge is made under s. 498 of the Penal Code of enticing away a married woman, the Court should require some better evidence of the marriage than the mere statement of the complainant and the woman.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DAL SINGH, I. L. R., 20 All. 166. [Blair, J. Jan. 18, 1897.]

OF DEFAMATION.

INDIAN LAW COMMISSIONERS REPORT ON DEFAMATION.

THE essence of the offence of defamation consists in its tendency to cause that description of pain which is felt by a person who knows himself to be the object of the unfavourable sentiments of his fellow creatures, and those inconviences to which a person who is the object of such unfavourable sentiments is exposed.

According to the theory of the criminal law of England, the essence of the crime of private libel consists in its tendency to provoke breach of the peace; and though this doctrine has not, in practice, been followed out to all the startling consequences to which it would legitimately lead, it has not failed to produce considerable inconvenience.

It appears to us evident that, between the offence of defaming and the offence of provoking a breach of the peace, there is a distinction as broad as that which separates theft and murder. Defamatory imputations of the worst kind may have no tendency to cause acts of violence. Words which convey no discreditable imputation whatever may have that tendency in the highest degree. Even in cases where defamation has a tendency to cause acts of violence the heinousness of the defamation, considered as defamation, is by no means proportioned to its tendency to cause such acts nay, circumstances which are great aggravations of the offence, considered as defamation, may be great mitigations of the same offence, considered as a provocation to a breach of the peace. A scurrilous satire against a friendless woman, published by a person who carefully conceals his name, would be defamation in one of its most odious forms. But it would be only by a legal fiction that the satirist could be said to provoke a breach of the peace. On the other hand, an imputation on the courage of an officer, contained in a private letter, meant to be seen only by that officer and two or three other persons, might, considered as defamation, be a very venial offence. But such an imputation would have an obvious tendency to cause a serious breach of the peace.

On these grounds, we have determined to propose that defamation shall be made an offence, without any reference to its tendency to cause acts of illegal violence.

WE considered whether it would be advisable to make a distinction between the different modes in which defamatory imputations may be conveyed, and we came to the conclusion that it would not be advisable to make any such distinction.

By the English law, defamation is a crime only when it is committed by writing, printing, engraving, or some similar process. Spoken words reflecting on private character, however atrocious may be the imputations which those words convey, however numerous may be the assembly before which such words are uttered, furnish ground only for a civil action. Herein the English law is scarcely consistent with itself. For, if defamation be punished on account of its tendency to cause a breach of the peace, spoken defamation ought to be punished even more severely than written defamation, as having that tendency in a higher degree. A person who reads in a pamphlet a calumnious reflection on himself, or on some one for whom he is interested, is less likely to take a violent revenge than a person who hears the same calumnious reflection uttered. Public men, who have, by long habit, become callous to slander and abuse in a printed form, often show acute sensibility to imputations thrown on them to their faces. Indeed, defamatory words spoken in the presence of the person, who is the object of them, necessarily have more of the character of a personal affront, and are, therefore, more likely to cause a breach of the peace than any printed libel.

* Cognizance may be taken of an offence under Ch. XXI. only on complaint by an aggrieved party.—See the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), s 198.

Offences punishable under s. 500, 501, or 502, are compoundable.—See ibid, s. 345. As to stage of proceedings at which no composition is allowable without the leave of the Court, see ibid, sub-s. (5).

The distinction which the English criminal law makes between written and spoken defamation is generally defended on the ground that written defamation is likely to be more widely spread and to be more permanent than spoken defamation. These considerations do not appear to us to be entitled to much weight. In the first place, it is by no means necessarily the fact that written defamation is more extensively circulated than spoken defamation. Written defamation may be contained in a letter intended for a single eye. Spoken defamation may be heard by an assembly of many thousands. It seems to us most unreasonable that it should be penal to say in a private letter that a man is dissipated, and not penal to stand up at the town hall, and there, before the whole society of Calcutta, falsely to accuse him of poisoning his father.

In the second place, it is not necessarily the fact that the harm caused by defamation is proportioned to the extent to which the defamation is circulated. Some slanders—and those slanders of a most malignant kind—can produce harm only while confined to a very small circle, and would be at once refuted if they were published. A malignant whisper addressed to a single hearer, and meant to go no further, may indicate greater depravity, may cause more intense misery, and may deserve more severe punishment than a satire which has run through twenty editions. A person, for example, who, in private conversation, should infuse into the mind of a husband suspicions of the fidelity of a virtuous wife, might be a defamer of a far worse description than one who should insert the lady's name in a printed lampoon.

It must be allowed that, in general, a printed story is likely to live longer than a story which is only circulated in conversation. But, on the other hand, it is far easier for a calumniated person to clear his character either by argument, or by legal proceedings, from a charge fixed in a printed form, than from a shifting rumour which nobody repeats exactly as he heard it. In general, we believe, a man would rather see in a newspaper a story discreditable to him which he had the means of refuting than know that such a story, though not published, was current in society.

On the whole, we are so far from being able to discover any reason for exempting any mode of defamation from all punishment, that we have not even thought it right to provide different degrees of punishment for different modes of defamation. We do not conceive that on this subject any general rule can, with propriety, be laid down. We have, therefore, thought it best to leave to the Courts the business of apportioning punishment with due regard to the circumstances of every case.

We have thought it necessary, under the peculiar circumstances of this country, to lay down for the guidance of the Courts a rule which, if we were legislating for a population, among whom there was a uniform standard of morality and honour, might appear superfluous. India is inhabited by races which differ widely from each other in manners, tastes, and religious opinions. Practices which are regarded as innocent by one large portion of society excite the horror of another large portion. A Hindu would be driven to despair if he knew that he was believed by persons of his own race to have done something which a Christian or a Mussulman would consider as indifferent or as laudable. Where such diversities of opinion exist, that part of the law which is intended to prevent pain arising from opinion ought to be sufficiently flexible to suit those diversities. We have, therefore, directed the Judge not to decide the question whether an imputation be or be not defamatory, by reference to any particular standard, however correct, of honour, of morality, or of taste; but to extend an impartial protection to opinions which he regards as erroneous, and to feelings with which he has no sympathy.

There are nine excepted cases in which we propose to tolerate imputations prejudicial to character.

The exception which stands first in order will probably be thought by many persons objectionable. It is opposed to the rules of the English criminal law. It goes, we fear, beyond what even the boldest reformers of English law have proposed. It is at variance with the provisions of the French Code, and with the sentiments of the most distinguished French jurists. It is at variance also with the provisions of the Code of Louisiana. It is, therefore, with some diffidence that we venture to lay before the Governor-General in Council the results of a long and anxious consideration of this question.

The question is whether the truth of an imputation prejudicial to character should, in all cases, exempt the author of that imputation from punishment as a defamer. We conceive that it ought to exempt him.

It will hardly be disputed, even by those who dissent from us on this point, that there is a marked distinction between true and false imputations as respects both the degree of malignity which they indicate, and the degree of mischief which they produce. The accusing a man of what he has not done implies, in a vast majority of cases, greater depravity than the accusing him of what he has done. The pain which a false imputation gives to the person who is the object of it, is clear, uncompensated evil. There is no set off whatever. The pain which a true imputation gives to the person who is the object of it is in itself an evil, and, therefore, ought not to be wantonly inflicted. But there is often some counterbalancing good. A true imputation may produce a wholesome effect on the person who has, by his misconduct, exposed himself to it. It may deter others from imitating his example. It may set them on their guard against his bad designs.

Not only do true imputations generally produce some good to counterbalance the evil caused by them, but in many cases this counterbalancing good appears to us greatly to preponderate. However, skilfully penal laws may be framed, however vigorously they may be carried into execution, many bad practices will always be out of reach of the tribunals. The state of society would be deplorable, if public opinion did not repress much that legislators are compelled to tolerate. The wisest legislators have felt this, and have assigned it as a reason for not visiting certain acts with legal punishment that those acts will be sufficiently punished by general disapprobation. It seems inconsistent and unwise to rely on public opinion in certain cases as a valuable auxiliary to the law, and, at the same time, to treat the expression of that opinion in those very cases as a crime.

It is easy to put cases about which there could scarcely be any difference of opinion. A person who has been guilty of gross acts of swindling at the Cape comes to Calcutta, and proposes to set up a house of agency. A person who has been forced to fly from England on account of his infamous vices repairs to India, opens a school, and exerts himself to obtain pupils. A captain of a ship induces natives to emigrate by promising to convey them to a country where they will have large wages and little work. He takes them to a foreign colony where they are treated like slaves, and returns to India to hold out similar temptations to others. A man introduces a common prostitute, as his wife, into the society of all the most respectable ladies of the Presidency. A person in a high station is in the habit or encouraging ruinous play among young servants of the Company. In all these cases, and in many others which might be named, we conceive that a writer who publishes the truth renders a great service to the public, and cannot, without a violation of every sound principle, be treated as a criminal.

There are undoubtedly many cases in which the spreading of true reports prejudicial to the character of an individual would hurt the feelings of that individual without producing compensating advantage in any other quarter. The proclaiming to the world that a man keeps a mistress, that he is too much addicted to wine, that he is penurious in his housekeeping, that he is slovenly in his person, the raking up of ridiculous and degrading stories about the youthful indiscretions of a man who has long lived irreproachably as a husband and a father, and who has attained some post which requires gravity and even sanctity of character, can seldom or never produce any good to the public sufficient to compensate for the pain given to the person attacked, and to those who are connected with him. Yet we greatly doubt whether, where the imputations are true, it will be advisable to inflict on the propagators of such miserable scandal any legal punishment in addition to that general aversion and contempt with which their calling and their persons are everywhere regarded. Even in such cases, the question whether the imputation be true or false is not an unimportant question. Those who would not allow truth to be in such cases, a justification would admit that it ought generally to be a mitigating circumstance. Indeed, we find it impossible to imagine any case in which we should punish a man who told no more than the truth respecting another, as severely as if what he told had been a lie invented to blast the reputation of that other.

These two propositions, then, we consider as established—first, that, in some cases of prosecution for defamation, the truth of the imputation alleged to be defamatory ought to be a justification; secondly, that in the vast majority of such cases, if not in all, truth, if it be not a justification, ought to be a mitigation.

From these two propositions, a third proposition necessarily follows: that in all cases of prosecution for defamation, if the defendant avers that the imputations complained of as defamatory are true, the Court ought to go into the question of the truth of those imputations.

This ought to be done, not only in justice to the public and to the defendant, but in justice to the innocent complainant. It must not be forgotten that one of the most important ends which a person proposes to himself in prosecuting a slanderer is the refuting of the slander. He generally considers the punishment of the offender as a secondary object, and, when there is no circumstance of peculiar aggravation in the case, is often willing to stay proceedings after obtaining a retractation and apology. To clear his fame is his first object. It is, we conceive, an object for the attaining of which, he is entitled to the assistance of the law. But it is an object which cannot be attained unless the Courts go into the question of truth.

The effect of a rule excluding evidence of the truth is to put on a par descriptions of persons between whom it is desirable to make the widest distinction. The public spirited man who warns the mercantile community against a notorious cheat, or advises families not to admit into their intimacy a practised seducer of innocence, is placed on the same footing with the slanderer, who invents the most infamous falsehoods against persons of the purest character. On the other hand, a man who has, without the slightest reason, been held up to the world as a seducer or a swindler, is placed in exactly the same situation with one who well deserves those disgraceful names. So defective is the investigation that it leaves a suspicion lying on the most innocent, and no more than a suspicion lying on the most guilty.

We therefore think that, in all cases of prosecution for defamation, the Courts ought to allow the question of truth to be gone into. But if, in all cases, the Courts allow the question of truth to be gone into, we are satisfied that no respectable person will venture to institute a prosecution for defamation in a case in which he knows that the truth of the defamatory matter is likely to be proved. He will feel that by prosecuting he should injure his own character far more deeply than any libeller can do. However disagreeable it may be to his feeling that a discreditable story concerning him should be repeated in society, and should furnish paragraphs for the news-papers, it must be much more disagreeable that such a story should be proved in open Court by legal evidence. By prosecuting, he turns what was at most a strong suspicion into an absolute certainty. While he forbears to prosecute, many people will probably disbelieve the scandalous report; many will doubt about its truth. The mere circumstance that he abstains from prosecuting is no proof of guilt. It is notorious that slanders are often passed by with silent contempt by those who are the objects of them. Indeed, in a country where the press is free, a man whose station exposes him to remark would have nothing to do but to prosecute, if he should institute legal proceedings every time that he might be calumniated.

It seems to us, therefore, certain that a man on whose character imputations have been thrown which can be proved to be true will, if he possess ordinary prudence and ordinary sensibility, abstain from having recourse to a Court of law, which will fully investigate the truth of those imputations. By having recourse to a Court of law, he would show that he belonged to a class of persons who are the last that a legislator would wish to favour, to that class of persons in whom the sense of shame is weak, and the malicious passion strong, and who are content to incur dishonour for the chance of obtaining revenge.

Being therefore of opinion that, in all cases of prosecution for defamation, evidence of the truth of the imputations alleged to be defamatory ought to be received, and being of opinion that practically there is no difference between receiving evidence of truth and allowing truth to be a justification, we have thought it advisable to provide expressly that truth shall always be a justification. By framing the law thus, we have not, in the smallest degree, diminished the real security of private character, or the real risk of detraction. We have merely made the language of the Code correspond with its virtual operation.

As we are satisfied that no practical mischief will be produced by the rule which we have proposed, we think that its perfect simplicity and certainty are strong reasons for adopting it.

If it be not adopted, it will be necessary to take one of two courses—either to provide that truth shall in no case be a justification, or to provide that truth shall be a justification in some cases, and not in others. To the former course we feel, for reasons which we have already assigned, insurmountable objections. The effect of such a state of the law would be that eminent public services would often be treated as crimes. If the latter course be taken, we are convinced that it would be found impossible to draw any line approaching to accuracy. We are convinced that it would be necessary to leave to the Judges an almost boundless discretion—a discretion which no two Judges would exercise in the same manner.

It has been suggested to us, from quarters entitled to great respect, that it would be a preferable course to admit in every case the truth of matter alleged to be defamatory to be given in evidence, for the purpose of proving that the accused person had not acted maliciously, but not to allow the proof of the truth to be a justification, if it should appear that reputation had been maliciously assailed.

If a provision of this kind were adopted it would, for the reasons which we have already given, be in practice nugatory. For no respectable person would prosecute the author of an imputation which could be proved to be true. And we take it for granted that the law of procedure will not be framed in so cruel and unreasonable a manner as to permit a prosecution for defamation to be instituted in opposition to the wishes of the person defamed. Such a power of prosecution would scarcely ever be used by a friend of the person defamed; it would never be used by a judicious friend, and it would be a most formidable weapon in the hands of a malignant enemy.

But if the provision which we are considering were not certain to be in practice nugatory, we should think it a highly objectionable provision. When an act is of such a description that it would be better that it should not be done, it is quite proper to look at the motives and intentions of the doer for the purpose of deciding whether he shall be punished or not. But when an act which is really useful to society—an act of a sort which it is desirable to encourage—has been done, it is absurd to inquire into the motives of the doer for the purpose of punishing him if it shall appear that his motives were bad.

If A kills Z, it is proper to inquire whether the killing was malicious; for killing is primâ facie a bad act. But if A saves Z's life, no tribunal inquires whether A did so from good feeling or from malice to some person who was bound to pay Z an annuity. For it is better that human life should be saved from malice than not at all. If A sets on fire a quantity of cotton belonging to Z, it is proper to inquire whether A acted maliciously. For the destruction of valuable property by fire is primâ facie a bad act. But if Z's cotton is burning, and A puts it out, no tribunal inquires whether A did so from good feeling, or from malice to some other dealer in cotton, who, if Z's stock had been destroyed, would have been a great gainer. For the saving of valuable property from destruction is an act which it is desirable to encourage; and it is better that such property should be saved from bad motives than that it should be suffered to perish. Since then no act ought to be made punishable on account of malicious intention, unless it be in itself an act of a kind which it is desirable to prevent, it follows that malice is not a test which can with propriety be used for the purpose of determining what true imputations on character ought to be punished, and what true imputations on character ought not to be punished. For the throwing of true imputations on character is not primâ facie a pernicious act. It may, indeed, be a very pernicious act. But we are not prepared to say that in the majority of instances it is so. We are sure that it is often a great public service; and we are sure that it may be very pernicious when it is not done from malice, and that it may be a great public service when it is done from malice. It is perfectly conceivable that a person might from no malicious feeling, but from an honest though austere and injudicious zeal for what he might consider as the interests of religion and morality, drag before the public frailties which it would be far better to leave in obscurity. It is also perfectly conceivable that a person who has been concerned in some odious league of villainy, and has quarrelled with his accomplices, may, from vindictive feelings, publish the history of their proceedings, and may, by doing so, render a great service to society. Suppose that a knot of sharpers live by seducing young men to the gaming table, and pillaging them to their last rupee. Suppose that one of these knaves thinking himself ill-used in the division of the plunder, should revenge himself by printing an account of the transactions in which he has been concerned. He is prosecuted by the rest of the gang for defamation. He proves that every word in his account is true. But it is admitted that his only motives for publishing it were rancorous hatred and disappointed rapacity. It would surely be most unreasonable in the Court to say: "You have told the public a truth which it greatly concerned the public to know. You have been the saving of many promising youths. You have been the means of ridding society of a dreadful pest. You have done, in short, what it was most desirable that you should do. But as you have done this, not from public spirit but from dislike of your old associates, we pronounce you guilty of an offence, and condemn you to fine and imprisonment."

It is evident that society cannot spare any portion of the services which it receives. Far from scrutinizing the motives which lead people to render such services, and punishing such services when they proceed from bad motives, all societies are in the habit of offering motives addressed to the selfish passions of bad men for the purpose of inducing those men to do what is beneficial to the mass. We offer pardons and pecuniary rewards to the worst members of the community for the purpose of inducing them to betray their accomplices in guilt. That the quarrels of rogues are the security of honest men is an important truth which has passed into a proverb; and of that security we should, to a certain extent, deprive honest men if we were to make it an offence in one rogue to speak the truth about another rogue under the influence of passions excited in the course of a quarrel.

We have hitherto argued this point on the supposition that by malice is meant real malice, and not a fictitious, a constructive malice. We have the strongest objections to introducing into the Code such a kind of malice—a malice of which a person may be acquitted when it is clear that he has acted from the most deadly personal rancour, and found guilty when those who find him guilty are satisfied that he has acted only from the best feelings—a malice which may be only the technical name for benevolence.

On these grounds, we recommend to the Governor-General in Council that the first exception, as we have drawn it, be suffered to stand part of the Code.

The remaining exceptions will not require so long a defence. By cl 471, we allow the public conduct of public functionaries to be discussed, provided that such discussion be conducted in good faith. That the advantages arising from such discussion far more than compensate for the pain which it occasionally gives, will hardly be disputed by any English statesman.

But there are public men who are not public functionaries. Persons who hold no office may yet, in this country, take a very active part in urging or opposing the adoption of measures in which the community is deeply interested. It appears clear to us that every person ought to be allowed to comment, in good faith, on the proceedings of these volunteer servants of the public, with the same freedom with which we allow him to comment on the proceedings of the official servants of the public. We have provided for this by cl. 472.

By cl. 473, we have allowed all persons freely to discuss in good faith the proceedings of Courts of law, and the characters of parties, agents, and witnesses, as connected with those proceedings. It is almost universally acknowledged that the Courts of law ought to be thrown open to the public. But the advantage of throwing them open to the public will be small indeed, if the few, who are able to press their way into a Court, are forbidden to report what has passed there to the vast numbers who were absent, or if those who are allowed to know what has passed are not allowed to comment on what has passed. The only reason that the whole community is not admitted to hear every trial that takes place is that it is physically impossible that they should find room; and by cl 473, we do our best to counteract the effect of this physical impossibility.

Whether public writers ought to be allowed to publish comments on trials while those trials are still pending, is a question which, in the present state of India it is hardly worth while to discuss. We have not thought it necessary to insert any provision on that subject in the chapter of offences against public justice; and such a provision, even if it were necessary, would evidently not belong to the head of defamation, for the harm done by such comments, as respects public justice, is exactly the same when the comments are laudatory as when they are abusive.

By cl. 474, we allow every person to criticise, in good faith, published books, works of art which are publicly exhibited, and other similar performances.

By cl 475, we allow a person under whose authority others have been placed, either by their own consent, or by the law, to censure, in good faith, those who are so placed under his authority, as far as regards matter to which that authority relates.

By cl 476 we allow a person to prefer an accusation against another, in good faith, to any person who has lawful authority to restrain or punish the accused.

By cl 477, we have excepted from the definition of defamation private communications which a person makes in good faith, for the protection of his own interests; and by cl. 478, we have excepted private communications which a person makes in good faith for the benefit of others.

It will be observed that in the eight last exceptions we do not require that an imputation should be true. We require only that it should be made in good faith. For to require in these cases that the imputation should be true, would be to render these exceptions mere nullities. Whether a public functionary is or is not fit for his situation; whether a person who has bestirred himself to get up a petition in favour of a public measure ought to be considered as an enlightened and public-spirited citizen, or as a foolish meddler; whether a person who has been tried for an offence was or was not guilty; which of two witnesses who contradicted each other on a trial ought to be believed; whether a portrait is like; whether a song has been well sung; whether a book is well written: these are questions about which honest and discerning men may hold opinions diametrically opposite: and to require a man to prove to the satisfaction of a Court of law that the opinion which he has expressed on such a question is a right opinion, is to prohibit all discussion on such questions. The same may be said of those private communications which we propose to allow. It is plainly desirable that a merchant should disclose to his partners his unfavourable opinion of the honesty of a person with whom the firm has dealings. It is desirable that a father should caution his son against marrying a woman of bad character. But if the merchant is permitted to say to his partners, if the father is permitted to say to his son, only what can be legally proved before a Court, it is evident that the permission is worth nothing.

Whether an imputation be or be not made in good faith is a question for the Courts of law. The burden of the proof will lie sometimes on the person who has made the imputation, and sometimes on the person on whom the imputation has been thrown. No general rule can be laid down. Yet scarcely any case could arise respecting which a sensible and impartial Judge would feel any doubt. If, for example, a public functionary were to prosecute for defamation a writer who had described him in general terms as incapable, the Court would probably require the prosecutor to give some proof of bad faith.

If the prosecutor had no such proof to offer, the defendant would be acquitted. If the prosecutor were to prove that the defendant had applied to him for money, had promised to write in his praise if the money were advanced, and had threatened to abuse him if the money were withheld, the Court would probably be of opinion that the defendant had not written in good faith, and would convict him.

On the other hand, if the imputation were an imputation of some particular fact, or an imputation which, though general in form, yet implied the truth of some particular fact, which, if true, might be proved, the Court would probably hold that the burden of proving good faith lay on the defendant. Thus, if a person were to publish that a Collector was in the habit of receiving bribes from the zemindars of his district, and were unable to specify a single case, or to give any authority for his assertion, the Courts would probably be of opinion that the imputation had not been made in good faith.

Again, if a critic described a writer as a plagiarist, the Courts would not consider this as defamation without very strong proof of bad faith. But if it were proved that the critic had, like Lauder, interpolated passages in old books in order to bear out the charge of plagiarism, the Court would doubtless be of opinion that he had not criticised in good faith, and would convict him of defamation.

It will be necessary to provide in the Code of Procedure rules for pleading in cases of defamation, which may give to an innocent man who has been calumniated the means of clearing his character. It will be proper to provide that a defendant who is accused of defamation, and who rests his defence on the truth of the imputation alleged to be defamatory, shall be held strictly to the proof of the substance of the imputation if the imputation be particular and shall be compelled to descend to particulars in his plea, if the imputation be general. It will not be expected that we should here go into any details respecting the law of criminal pleading. It is sufficient here to say that the importance of framing that part of the law in such a manner as to give full protection to persons whose character has been unjustly aspersed has not escaped our attention.

We may here observe that an imputation which is not defamatory may, under certain circumstances, be punishable on other grounds. Such an imputation may be intended to excite disaffection. If so, though not punishable as defamation, it will be punishable as sedition. An attack made, in good faith, on the public administration of the Governor of a Presidency, will in no case be a defamation. But if the author of it designed to inflame the people against the INDIAN LAW COMMISSIONERS' REPORT ON DEFAMATION—concld.

Government, he will be liable to punishment under cl. 113.

Again, an imputation which is not defamatory may be intended to excite a mob to violence against an individual. If so, the author of the imputation is punishable under cl. 94.

Again, an imputation which is not defamatory may be uttered in the hearing of the person who is the object of it for the purpose of wantonly and maliciously annoying that person. If so, it is punishable under cl. 485. There are many cases in which it is fit that unpleasant truth should be told respecting an individual. But there is no case in which it is desirable that such truth should be told in such a way that the telling of it is a gross personal outrage A person who has detected, or thinks that he has detected, a dishonest misrepresentation in a book, has a right to expose it publicly. But he cannot be allowed to intrude into the presence of the author of the book, and to tell him to his face that he is a liar. A person who knows the mistress of a female school to be a woman of infamous character deserves well of society if he states what he knows. But he cannot be allowed to follow her through the streets, calling her by opprobrious names, though he may be able to prove that all those names were merited. A person who brings to notice the malversation of a public functionary deserves applause But a person who hangs a public functionary in effigy at that functionary's door, with an opprobrious label, does what cannot be permitted, even though every word on the label, and every imputation which the exhibition was meant to convey, may be perfectly true.

We do not apprehend that the clauses relating to the printers and publishers of defamatory matter require any explanation or defence.

499. Whoever, by words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations, makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person, intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm, the reputation of such person, is said, except in the cases hereinafter excepted, to defame that person.

Defamation.

Explanation 1.—It may amount to defamation to impute anything to a deceased person, if the imputation would harm the reputation of that person if living, and is intended to be hurtful to the feelings of his family or other near relatives.

Explanation 2.—It may amount to defamation to make an imputation concerning a company or an association or collection of persons as such.

Explanation 3.—An imputation in the form of an alternative, or expressed ironically, may amount to defamation.

Explanation 4.—No imputation is said to harm a person's reputation unless that imputation, directly or indirectly, in the estimation of others, lowers the moral or intellectual character of that person, or lowers the character of that person in respect of his caste or of his calling, or lowers the credit of that person, or causes it to be believed that the body of that person is in a loathsome state, or in a state generally considered as disgraceful.

(a.) A says, "Z is an honest man; he never stole B's watch;" intending to cause it to be believed that Z did steal B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the exceptions.

(b.) A is asked, who stole B's watch? A points to Z, intending to cause it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the exceptions.

(c.) A draws a picture of Z running away with B's watch, intending it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it fall within one of the exceptions.

First Exception.—It is not defamation to impute anything which is true concerning any person, if it be for the public good that the imputation should be made or published. Whether or not it is for the public good, is a question of fact.

Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made or published.

Second Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of a public servant in the discharge of his public functions, or respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no farther.

Public conduct of public servants.

Third Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of any person touching any public question, and respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no farther.

Conduct of any person touching any public question.

Illustrations.

It is not defamation in A to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting Z's conduct in petitioning Government on a public question, in signing a requisition for a meeting on a public question, in presiding or attending at such a meeting, in forming or joining any society which invites the public support, in voting or canvassing for a particular candidate for any situation in the efficient discharge of the duties of which the public is interested.

Fourth Exception.—It is not defamation to publish a substantially true report of the proceedings of a Court of Justice, or of the result of any such proceedings.

Publication of reports of proceedings of Courts.

Explanation.—A Justice of the Peace or other officer holding an inquiry in open Court preliminary to a trial in a Court of Justice is a Court within the meaning of the above section.

Fifth Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the merits of any case, civil or criminal, which has been decided by a Court of Justice, or respecting the conduct of any person as a party, witness, or agent, in any such case, or respecting the character of such person, as far as his character appears in that conduct, and no farther.

Merits of case decided in Court; or conduct of witnesses and others concerned.

Illustrations.

(a.) A says, 'I think Z's evidence on that trial is so contradictory that he must be stupid or dishonest.'' A is within this exception if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses respects Z's character as it appears in Z's conduct as a witness, and no farther.

(b.) But, if A says, "I do not believe what Z asserted at that trial, because I know him to be a man without veracity," A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not founded on Z's conduct as a witness.

Sixth Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion respecting the merits of any performance which its author has submitted to the judgment of the public, or respecting the character of the author, as far as his character appears in such performance, and no farther.

Merits of public performance.

Explanation.—A performance may be submitted to the judgment of the public expressly or by acts on the part of the author which imply such submission to the judgment of the public.

Illustrations.

(a.) A person who publishes a book submits that book to the judgment of the public.

(b) A person who makes a speech in public submits that speech to the judgment of the public.

(c.) An actor or singer who appears on a public stage submits his acting or singing to the judgment of the public.

(d.) A says of a book published by Z, "Z's book is foolish, Z must be a weak man; Z's book is indecent, Z must be a man of impure mind." A is within this exception if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z respects Z's character only so far as it appears in Z's book, and no farther.

(e.) But, if A says, "I am not surprised that Z's book is foolish and indecent, for he is a weak man, and a libertine." A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not founded on Z's book.

Seventh Exception.—It is not defamation in a person having over another any authority, either conferred by law or arising out of a lawful contract made with that other, to pass in good faith any censure on the conduct of that other in matters to which such lawful authority relates.

Censure passed in good faith by person having lawful authority over another.

A Judge censuring in good faith the conduct of a witness or of an officer of the Court; a head of a department censuring in good faith those who are under his orders; a parent censuring in good faith a child in the presence of other children; a schoolmaster, whose authority is derived from a parent, censuring in good faith a pupil in the presence of other pupils; a master censuring a servant in good faith for remissness in service; a banker censuring in good faith the cashier of his bank for the conduct of such cashier as such cashier—are within this exception.

Eighth Exception.—It is not defamation to prefer in good faith an accusation against any person to any of those who have lawful authority over that person with respect to the subject-matter of accusation.

Accusation preferred in good faith to authorized person.

Illustration.

If A in good faith accuses Z before a Magistrate; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a servant, to Z's master; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a child, to Z's father—A is within this exception.

Ninth Exception.—It is not defamation to make an imputation on the character of another, provided that the imputation be made in good faith for the protection of the interests of the person making it, or of any other person, or for the public good.

Imputation made in good faith by person for protection of his or other's interests.

(a.) A, a shop-keeper, says to B, who manages his business, "Sell nothing to Z unless he pays you ready money, for I have no opinion of his honesty." A is within the exception, if he has made this imputation on Z in good faith for the protection of his own interests.

(b.) A, a Magistrate, in making a report to his superior officer, casts an imputation on the character of Z. Here, if the imputation is made in good faith and for the public good, A is within the exception.

Tenth Exception.—It is not defamation to convey a caution, in good faith, to one person against another, provided that such caution be intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed, or of some person in whom that person is interested, or for the public good.

Caution intended for good of person to whom conveyed or for public good.

CASE of defamation in which the complainant admitted all the more serious charges on which he based his complaint. Conviction and sentence quashed, as the gist of the offence (viz., that the charge was not made in good faith) was entirely lost sight of. Compensation is not awardable in such cases. —ASSURUDDEE KHAN v. BALOO KHAN, 1 W. R. 6. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Aug. 17, 1864.]

A SIMPLE assertion (nowhere disproved) regarding the way in which a sarishtadar had issued parwanas in an arbitration-suit does not amount to defamation.—QUEEN v. HEM CHUNDER MOOKERJEE, 1 W. R. 24. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Nov. 18, 1864.]

A WROTE to B, informing him that he (B), was no gentleman. A question arose as to the remedy which B had against A. A charge of defamation would not lie under this section, because, under the fourth explanation, no imputation is said to harm a person's reputation, unless that imputation, directly or indirectly, lowers the character or credit of that person, and it could not be held that the mere writing of a letter to a person lowers his character or credit in the estimation of others. B's only remedy then was under s. 504, and whether A, by informing B that he was no gentleman, intended or knew it to be likely that the provocation would cause him to break the public peace, was a question of fact to be determined by the Magistrate who tried the case.—Book Circular VIII., Criminal Side, Feb. 3, 1865, Jud. Com., Oudh, Currie's Penal Code, p. 406.

A FALSE accusation not made in good faith renders the party making it liable to be charged with defamation. A PERSON using defamatory expressions for the protection of his son's interests is not privileged unless the imputation is made in good faith, i. e., with due care and attention. —QUEEN v. PURSURAM DOSS, 3 W. ACT XVIII. of 1862 refers only to the High Court in its Original Criminal Jurisdiction, and is not applicable to Mofussil Courts. S. 27 of that Act requires proof of the existence of the circumstances relied on as a defence before good faith can be presumed in a case of defamation. The onus of proving good faith is on the person making the imputation. Before such person can claim the benefit of excep. 9, s. 499 of the Penal Code, he must show that he has exercised due care and caution.—SEALY v. RAMNARAIN BOSE, 4 W. R. 22. [Glover, J. Nov. 8, 1865.]

IN a case of defamation, proof of despatch by post, to a certain district, of the paper containing a defamatory matter, is tantamount to proof of publication thereof in the district.—QUEEN v. KALLI DOSS MITTER, 5 W. R. 44. [Campbell and Glover, JJ. March 3, 1866.]

THE accused, an inspector of police, was sent to inquire if it was true that one Brojonath was a leader of dacoits. He reported that it was false, and that the baniyas of the village were trying to get him punished from an ill-feeling. He added, "I learnt from private inquiries that there is scarcely a woman in the houses of the baniyas who has not passed a night or two with the defendant Brojonath." Commitment of the accused for trial for defamation under s. 499 supported under the circumstances of the case. Held that, as the report was made by the police-officer in the execution of his duty, and contained imputations which did not appear to be made recklessly or unjustifiably, the report did not amount to defamation, but was covered by the 9th exception to s. 499 of the Penal Code.—In re RAJNARAIN SEN, 14 W. R. 22; 6 B. L. R. Ap., 42. [Phear and Mitter, JJ. July 23, 1870.]

THE act of filing in Court a petition, containing imputations, concerning a person calculated to harm his reputation, with the intention that it should be read by other persons, amounts to making or publishing the imputations within the meaning of s. 499 of the Penal Code. The criminal law of this country with regard to defamation depends on the construction of s. 499 of the Penal Code, and not on what may be the English law on the same subject.—GREEN (DR. J. A.) v. DELANNEY (J. P.), 14 W. R. 27. [Phear and Jackson, JJ. Aug. 3, 1870.] Referred to in Isuri Prasad Singh v. Umrao Singh, I. L. R., 22 All. 234, infra.

A PLEADER or mukhtar, relying upon the statements of his client, and in good faith introducing into a pleading a defamatory averment, will be protected from liability for defamation by the 9th exception to s. 499 of the Penal Code; but the case is otherwise if the pleading be prepared by a person who has no such employment, and does not act in good faith.—QUEEN v. CHRESTIEN, 2 N.-W. P. 473. [Turner, J. Dec. 16, 1870.]

WHERE a person, while a defendant in a criminal case, used certain defamatory expressions, without due care and attention, against the prosecutor, it was held that such person was liable to a charge of defamation. —5 Rev., Jud., and Pol. Jour. 42.

A LETTER written by a Brahman to the Brahman community of the neighbourhood, with a view to obtain their decision on a matter affecting his own religious interests and that of the Brahman community, if written in good faith, falls within exceps. 8 and 10 of s. 499 of the Penal Code.—REG. v. KASHINATH BACHAJI BAGUL, 8 Bom. H. C. R. 168. [Melvill and Kemball, JJ. Aug. 31, 1871.]

THE gumashta of a guru or priest was convicted of defamation for having published an order of his master excommunicating the complainant from his caste. The letter publishing the excommunication was a statement that complainant disobeyed some one, and treated him with disrespect. Held that the letter contained no expressions defamatory per se. If the person so treated was in a position entitling him to demand submission, and to make non-submission an offence, then that position would render the communication privileged, and, if not, then the mere statement that the complainant did not obey one whom he was not bound to obey was not a defamatory imputation.—PRO, Dec. 20, 1871, 6 Mad. H. C. R. Ap. 46.

IN framing a charge of defamation it is not necessary to negative the exceptions contained in s. 499 of the Penal Code. It is not an error in law for a Judge to require a person accused of defamation to prove the several distinct imputations contained in a libellous article published by him, with the same strictness with which he would be required to prove them if he were the defendant in a civil action. The High Court, as a Court of Revision, cannot interfere with the findings of the Lower Appellate Court on questions as to the truth of the allegations contained in a libel or the bona fides of the accused, but upon such questions are bound by the findings of the lower Court.—REG. v. KIHABHAI PARBHUDAS, 9 Bom. H. C. R. 451. [Lloyd and Kemball, JJ. Dec. 5, 1872.]

To sustain a charge of defamation it is not necessary to prove that the complainant actually suffered, directly or indirectly, from the scandalous imputation alleged; it is sufficient to show that the accused intended or knew or had reason to believe that the imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant.—QUEEN v. THAKUR DOSS, 6 N.-W. P. 86. [Turner, J. Feb. 2, 1874.]

ACCUSED, a petition-writer, wrote for presentation to the Commissioner's Court a memorandum of appeal in which he alleged that the order appealed from was based on "conjectural grounds," and that a certain statement made in the order was "utterly false." The Commissioner directed the Deputy Commissioner to pass a proper order in the matter, whereupon the Deputy Commissioner treated the case as one under s. 500, and after inquiry convicted accused. Held that the conviction was illegal, no complaint having been made to the Deputy Commissioner within the meaning of s. 142 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—NABI SHAH v. CROWN, Panj. Rec., No. 15 of 1878.

THE accused person, an editor of a newspaper, published an article in which the following passage, admittedly referring to the complainant, occurred: "Has his (the complainant's) character been inquired into? Does no one remember that this very man was sent by the Subordinate Judge of Sholapur to be prosecuted? Are not the proceedings instituted by the Subordinate Judge to be found on the record?" The Magistrate found that it was literally true that the complainant had been sent to be prosecuted, but that it was also true that the prosecution had, to the accused's knowledge, been ordered to be withdrawn by the District Judge. Held that, although the statement contained only the truth, it was incomplete and misleading; and that, as the accused was well aware that the prosecution referred to had been withdrawn, and did not injuriously affect the complainant's character, he could not plead that the imputation made by him on the complainant's character was made in good faith or for the public good.—IMPERATRIX v. KAKDE (B), I. L. R., 4 Bom 298. [Melvill and Pinhey, JJ. Feb. 12, 1880.]

M, A MEDICAL man, and editor of a medical journal published monthly, said in such journal of an advertisement published by H, another medical man, in which H solicited the public to subscribe to a hospital of which he was the surgeon in charge, stating the number of successful operations which had been performed. "The advertiser is certainly entitled to be congratulated on this marvellous success, but it is hardly consistent with the feelings and usages of the medical profession to herald them forth in this fashion. We are not surprised to find that the line he has elected to adopt has not met with the approval of his brother-officer serving in the same province, and we have no hesitation in pronouncing his proceedings in this matter unprofessional." Held that, inasmuch as such advertisement had the effect of making such hospital a "public question," and of submitting it to the "judgment of the public," and M had expressed himself in good faith, M was within the third and sixth exceptions, respectively, to s 499 of the Penal Code. Held also that M came within the ninth exception to that section The sending of a newspaper containing defamatory matter by post from Calcutta, where it is published, addressed to a subsciber at Allahabad, is a publication of such defamatory matter at Allahabad. The publisher of a newspaper is responsible for defamatory matter published in such paper, whether he knows the contents of such paper or not —EMPRESS v. McLEOD, I. L. R., 3 All 342. Stuart, C. J. Dec 7, 1880

WHERE the Magistrate convicted accused a police officer, on a charge of defamation, on account of a statement made by him in a report to his superior officer, which statement he had elicited from a third party in the course of a police-inquiry the Chief Court, on the revision side, set aside the conviction and sentence as unsustainable, holding that the accused was merely acting in the discharge of his duty, and that the report was clearly privileged.—EMPRESS v. SHER SINGH, Pan. Rec., No. 23 of 1880.

C was put out of caste by a panchayat of his caste-fellows, on the ground that there was an improper intimacy between him and a woman of his caste. Certain persons, members of such panchayat, circulated a letter to the members of their caste generally, in which stating that C and such woman had been put out of caste, and the reason for the same, and requesting the members of the caste not to receive them into their houses, or to eat with them, they made certain statements applying equally to C or such woman. Such statements were defamatory within the meaning of s 499 of the Penal Code. Held that, if such persons were careless enough to use language which was applicable to C, they did so at their peril, and they could not escape the responsibility of having defamed C by saying that they intended such language to apply to such woman. Held also, on the question whether such persons had acted in good faith, that, looking to the character of such letter, the circumstances under which it was written, and to the fact that C had been put out of caste for the reason alleged, had such persons contented themselves with announcing the determination of the panchayat, and the grounds upon which such determination was based, they would have been protected, but, inasmuch as they did not so content themselves, but went further and made false and uncalled-for statements regarding C, they had rightly been held not to have acted in good faith.—EMPRESS v. RAMANAND, I. L. R., 3 All 664. [Straight, J. Mar. 28, 1881.]

THE law of defamation which should be applied in suits in India for defamation is that laid down in the Indian Penal Code, and not the English law of libel and slander Held, therefore, that defamatory statements are not privileged merely because they are used in a petition preferred in a judicial proceeding. It is not essential that before a person can be held entitled to the privilege of having made a statement in good faith for the protection of his interests, he should establish that every word he has spoken or written is literally true. If, having regard to facts and circumstances within his knowledge, he might, as an ordinarily reasonable and prudent man, have drawn the conclusions which he has expressed in defamatory language for the protection of his own interests, he may fairly be held to have made out his good faith —ABDUL HAKIM v. TEJ CHANDAR MUKARJI, I. L. R., 3 All. 815. [Straight and Tyrrell, JJ. May 20, 1881] Referred to in Empress v. Dhum Singh, I. L. N HAVING attended a Hindu widow marriage (legalized by Act XV. of 1856), S, his guru or spiritual superior, published a notice declaring N to be an outcaste, and forbidding the disciples of S and the public of the town in which N lived to associate with N, until he submitted to the prescribed penance and obtained a certificate of purification from S. S also sent by post a registered postcard of similar purport to N In consequence of the interdict of S, N was prevented from performing vows in the temple, lost the society of his relatives, and was otherwise damnified. N charged S with criminal intimidation, intimidation by attempt to induce a belief that by an act of the offender the person intimidated will become an object of divine displeasure and defamation. Held that the first two charges were unfounded, but that S, by communicating the sentence of excommunication by a registered post-card to N, was guilty of defamation.—QUEEN v. SANKARA, I. L. R., 6 Mad. 381. [Turner, C.J., and Muttasami Ayyar, J. April 20, 1883.]

WHERE a person, called upon by a panchayat, convened by the complainant's relatives, to explain why he had made a defamatory remark concerning the complainant, made a statement by way of explanation, held that such statement being privileged, a conviction for defamation for making such statement was illegal.—In re GOVINDAPPA, I. L. R., 7 Mad. 36. [Turner, C.J. May 7, 1883.]

HELD, on the evidence in this case, in which the question was whether a person accused of defamation was protected by the eighth exception to s 499 of the Penal Code, that the accused had failed to establish that he acted in good faith. Abdul Hakim v Tej Chandar Mukarji (I. L. R., 3 All. 815) referred to. Where the accused in a case of defamation intends to bring evidence to prove the truth of the defamatory matter, his advocate should cross-examine the complainant upon every matter upon which evidence is intended to be brought. If he does not do so, it is a subject of serious consideration whether he should subsequently be allowed to tender proof of the material incident of which he has not cross-examined upon.—EMPRESS v. DHUM SINGH, I. HELD by the Full Bench (Duthoit, J., dissenting) that the action of a person who sent to a public officer by post, in a closed cover, a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, containing imputations on the character of the recipient, but which was not communicated by the accused to any third person, was not such a making or publishing of the matter complained of as to constitute an offence within the terms of s. 499 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TAKI HUSAIN, I. L. R., 7 All. 205. [Petheram, C.J., and Oldfield, Brodhurst, Mahmood, and Duthoit, JJ. Dec. 6, 1884.]

IN a prosecution for defamation under s 500 of the Penal Code, the alleged libel accused the complainant, who was a judicial officer, of (i) having, upon a particular occasion, used abusive language to certain respectable native litigants appearing before him in Court, and (ii) having, upon other occasions not specified, treated other respectable natives (not named) "in a similar manner." This latter accusation was contained in a postscript. The complaint filed by the complainant in the Court of the committing Magistrate, and the charge-sheet in which the Magistrate committed the defendant for trial, covered the whole of the document complained of, except the postscript. At the trial of the case the defendant pleaded not guilty, and also relied on the first, eighth, and ninth exceptions to s. 499 of the Penal Code. The prosecution gave evidence to prove that, in making the charges contained in the alleged libel, the defendant was actuated by express malice towards the complainant. Held, with reference to the terms of s. 499 of the Penal Code, that evidence of particular instances of abusive language applied by the complainant upon former occasions to natives appearing in his Court was admissible, first, as relating to the question what was the reputation which the defendant was said to have injured, and secondly, because it must be gathered from the document complained of as a whole whether it showed a malicious intention or not.—LAIDMAN v. HEARSEY, I. L. R., 7 All 906. [Petheram, C.J. July 21, 1885.]

WHERE a judge was charged with using defamatory language to a witness during the trial of a suit held that, under s. 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the complaint could not be entertained by a Magistrate without sanction.—In re GOLAM MUHAMMAD SHARIF-UDDAULAH, I. L. R., 9 Mad. 439. [Parker J. Jan. 8, 1886.]

ON the prosecution of the editor of a newspaper for defamation under s. 500 of the Penal Code by publishing a libel in his paper, an attested copy of a declaration made by the editor under s 5 of Act XXV. of 1867, to the effect that he was the printer and publisher of the newspaper, was produced in evidence by the complainant. The editor having been convicted by the Magistate, the Sessions Court on appeal quashed the conviction on the ground there was no evidence that the editor was the writer of the libel, or permitted its publication. Held that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the declaration was primâ-facie proof of publication by the editor. Held also that it would be a sufficient answer to the charge if the editor proved that the libel was published in his absence and without his knowledge, and that he had in good faith entrusted the temporary management of the newspaper during his absence to a competent person.—RAMASAMI v. LOKANADA, I. L. R., 9 Mad. 387. [Collins, C.J., and Muttusami Ayyar, J. April 12, 1886.]

AN advocate in India cannot be proceeded against civilly or criminally for words uttered in his office as advocate.—SULLIVAN v. NORTON, I. L. R, 10 Mad. 28. [Collins, C.J., and Kernan, Muttusami Ayyar, Brandt, and Parker, JJ. Sep. 24, 1886.]

EXPLANATION 4 of s. 499 of the Penal Code does not apply where the words used and forming the basis of charge are per se defamatory; though, when the meaning of words spoken or written is doubtful, and evidence is necessary to determine the effect of such words, and whether they are calculated to harm a particular person's reputation, it is possible that the principle enunciated in the explanation might and would with propriety be applied.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MCCARTHY, I. L. R., 9 All. 420. [Straight and Tyrrell, JJ. Feb. 7, 1887.]

A COMPLAINT was filed, under s. 499 of the Penal Code, against the proprietors, editor, and printer of a newspaper for publishing matter alleged to be defamatory. The Magistrate, before whom the complaint was lodged, found that the publication complained of was a mere reproduction or republication of what had been previously printed and published in another newspaper. He was, therefore, of opinion that unless and until criminal proceedings had been taken in respect of the earlier publication, a charge of defamation could not properly be brought with regard to the later publication. He, therefore, dismissed the complaint under s. 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882). Held that the order of dismissal was improper. The Penal Code (s. 499) makes no exception in favour of a second or third publication as compared with a first. If the complaint is properly laid in respect of a publication which is primâ facie defamatory, the Magistrate is bound to take cognizance of the complaint, and deal with it according to law.—In re HOWARD, I. L. R., 12 Bom. 167. [West and Birdwood, JJ. Aug. 25, 1887.]

IN order to substantiate a defence under the ninth exception to s. 499 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), it is sufficient to show that the imputation was made in good faith, and for the protection of the interest of the accused. Any one in the transaction of business with another has a right to use language bonâ fide which is relevant to that business, and which a due regard to his own interest makes necessary, even if it should directly or by its consequences be injurious or painful to another. The complainant, Haji Jusub Pirbhoy, and his partner Baladina, were owners of the steam-ship "Tanjore." The ship was mortgaged to the Bank of Bengal for Rs. 50,000. In March 1890, the complainant desired to send the vessel to Jeddah with pilgrims and freight. For this purpose, he entered into an agreement with Mr. Slater, the Agent of the Bank, to pay Rs. 5,000 to the Bank as a condition precedent to the vessel being allowed by the mortgagees to go on her intended voyage. The sum was to be paid out of the freight and passage-money collected by the complainant. On the 9th April 1890, on which day the vessel sailed, the complainant promised to pay the sum in the evening. This he did not do. Thereupon Mr. Slater wrote to the complainant, demanding immediate payment of the amount, and also sent for him five or six times, but the complainant neither called at Mr. Slater's office, nor made the payment. On the 12th April Mr. Slater wrote to the complainant's partner as follows: "Haji Jusub Pirbhoy (i.e., the complainant) has misappropriated the Rs 5,000 which were to have been paid to the Bank for allowing the 'Tanjore' to go to Jeddah, and is keeping out of the way." Immediately after the receipt of this letter, the complainant tendered the money to the Bank's solicitors. Thereupon Mr. Slater wrote to Baladina on the 13th April, withdrawing the statement made by him about the complainant in his letter of the 12th April On the 14th April, the complainant filed a complaint against Mr. Slater, charging him with defamation in his letter of the 12th April 1890. Mr. Slater was convicted by the Magistrate under s. 500 of the Penal Code, and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 200. Held, reversing, the conviction and sentence, that the imputations complained of were made in good faith, and for the protection of the interest of the accused, and, therefore, fell under the ninth exception to s. 499 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. E M SLATER, I. WHEN a married woman is defamed by the imputation of unchastity, her husband is a person aggrieved, upon whose complaint the Magistrate may take cognizance of a complaint under the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 198.—CHELLAM NAIDU v. RAMASAMI, I. B, THE guru or spiritual guide of the caste to which K belonged, issued a letter or ajna patra to K's fellow-villagers to the effect that, as K's wife had been caught with a man of a lower caste, no one of her co-religionists should have any social intercourse with her, and in effect that she should be outcasted. K proceeded against B for defamation, and

B pleaded that the statements contained in the letter were privileged, having been made in good faith and for the public good, and that the case came within one of the exceptions to s. 499. It was admitted by K that B had no enmity towards him or his wife, and that it was the custom of the guru to settle such matters as those that had arisen in connection with his wife, and it was proved that the letter was issued after B had made an enquiry into the truth of the allegation. The lower Court convicted. Held that the conviction was wrong, it being clear that the statements contained in the letter had been made in good faith for the protection of the social and spiritual interests of the community of which B was the guru, and that, so far as they implied a censure on the conduct of K's wife, they were justified by the authority with which B was vested as spiritual head of the community, and that therefore the case came within the seventh exception to s 499.—BASUMATI ADHIKARINI v. BUDHRAM KOLITA, I. A PLEADER, in addressing a Mamlatdar on behalf of his client, who was charged under s. 125 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom Act V. of 1879) with wilfully removing boundary-marks, commented on some of the witnesses for the prosecution, and called them loafers. Thereupon one of those witnesses prosecuted the pleader for defamation. The Magistrate held that there was no justification for the offence, and convicted the pleader, and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs. 15 under s. 500 of the Indian Penal Code. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that, in the absence of express malice (which was not to be presumed), the pleader was protected by excep. 9 to s. 499 of the Indian Penal Code. Held also that, in considering whether there was good faith (i.e., due care and attention), the position of the person making the imputation must be taken into consideration. In the case of an advocate, where express malice is absent, a Court having due regard to public policy would be extremely cautious before depriving him of the protection of excep. 9 to s 499 of the Indian Penal Code. Semble.—S 499 of the Indian Penal Code should be construed without reference to the English law.—In re NAGARJI TRIKAMJI, I. UNDER s. 499 of the Penal Code, the person who publishes, and the person who makes, an imputation, are alike guilty of defamation. A Court may find that an imputation is true, and made for the public good; but, on considering the manner of the publication (ex. gr, in a newspaper), it may hold that the particular publication is not for the public good, and is, therefore, not privileged. —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JANARDHAN DAMODHAR DIKSHIT, I. THE complainant, a Brahman, who had been put out of caste, was re-admitted by the executive committee of the caste after performing expiatory ceremonies. This re-admission was not approved by the accused, who formed a faction of the caste, and they, after an interval of six months, distributed in the bazaar to all classes of the public printed papers, in which the complainant was described as a "doshi," or sinner, which signified that he was a person unfit to be associated with. The accused were charged with the offence of defamation. They pleaded privilege, and it was admitted that they had acted without malice Held that the accused had not acted in good faith, and that the publication was not, under the circumstances, privileged and protected by the Penal Code, s. 499, excep. 10, and that the accused were accordingly guilty of defamation.—THIAGARAVA v. KRISHNASAMI I. THE mere sending a notice to a person, albeit containing matter of a defamatory nature, cannot be held to be equivalent to making or publishing an imputation "intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that it will harm, the reputation of the person to whom it is addressed." Where the accused sent by post a notice to the complainant, containing certain false imputations, and the complainant thereupon prosecuted the accused on a charge of defamation under s 500 of the Penal Code, held that the accused was not guilty of defamation.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SADASHIV ATMARAM, I. L. R., 18 Bom 205 [Candy and Fulton, JJ. Mar. 1, 1893.]

THE complainant was Deputy Collector and First-class Magistrate of Bijapur. Certain petitions, said to emanate from the accused, were received by Government, charging the complainant with bribery and corruption Government thereupon ordered Mr. Monteath, Collector and Magistrate of the district, to inquire into the matter. Mr. Monteath, enforced the attendance of the accused by writing to the police, who brought the accused before him. In answer to questions put to him, the accused denied having sent any petition to Government, but stated that he had paid a bribe to the complainant to secure the acquittal of his son, who was then on his trial on a charge of theft before him. Mr. Monteath examined other witnesses, and reported the result of his inquiry to Government. Government permitted the Deputy Collector to prosecute the accused, and he accordingly lodged a complaint against the accused for defamation, under s. 500 of the Penal Code, in having stated to Mr. Monteath, in the course of the inquiry, that he (the complainant) had accepted a bribe from him. The trying Magistrate was of opinion that the offence fell under s. 211 of the Penal Code. He at first framed charges both under ss. 211 and 500. But subsequently he struck out the charge of defamation under s. 500, and convicted the accused under s. 211 of making a false charge. On appeal the Joint Sessions Judge was of opinion that the charge under s. 211 could not be maintained, as the accused had not made any "false charge" to a Court or officer having jurisdiction to investigate it. As regards the charge of defamation, he was of opinion that the fact of bribery was not proved. But he held that, in making the statement to Mr. Monteath, the accused had acted in good faith and that his case fell under excep. 8 to s. 499 of the Penal Code. He, therefore, reversed the conviction under s. 211, and acquitted the accused of defamation under s. 500 of the Code. Against this order of acquittal Government appealed to the High Court. Held that the accused was guilty of defamation. Held, also, that s. 211 of the Penal Code had no application to the present case. The accused was brought before Mr. Monteath against his will. He did not make any complaint before that officer; and though what he stated, in answer to questions put to him was defamatory, the imputations did not constitute a "false charge" within the meaning of s. 211, as he did not intend to set the criminal law in motion. Per Ranade, J.—The words "falsely charging" in s. 211 must be construed along with the words which speak of the "institution of proceedings." These latter words are obviously used in a technical and exclusive sense, and the same restricted sense must be given to the words which relate to a false charge as implying a false complaint. Karim Buksh v. Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 17 Cal. 574) followed. Held, also, that in the absence of sanction from Government, the inquiry held by Mr. Monteath, the District Magistrate, was not a taking cognizance of the offence. Held, also, that, as Mr. Monteath was not sitting as a "Court" when he made the inquiry, and examined the accused, the accused was not entitled to claim the absolute protection from a charge of defamation as a witness in a judicial proceeding. The accused was only entitled to a qualified privilege depending on the exceptions to s. 499 of the Penal Code. Per Ranade, J.—The High Court, in exercising jurisdiction in the matter of appeals against acquittals, should confine its exercise to the particular grounds of objection which are raised by Government against the acquittal complained of.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KARIGOWDA, I. L. R., 19 Bom. 51. [Jardine and Ranade, JJ. Jan. 18, 1894.]

B, THE guru or spiritual guide of the caste to which K belonged, issued a letter or ajna patra to K's fellow-villagers to the effect that, as K's wife has been caught with a man of lower caste, no one of her co-religionists should have any social intercourse with her, and in effect that she should be outcasted. K proceeded against B for defamation, and B pleaded that the statements contained in the letter were privileged, having been made in good faith and for the public good, and that the case came within one of the exceptions to s. 499. It was admitted by K that B had no enmity towards him or his wife, and that it was the custom of the guru to settle such matters as those that had arisen in connection with his wife, and it was proved that the letter was issued after B had made an enquiry into the truth of the allegation The lower Court convicted. Held that the conviction was wrong, it being clear that the statements contained in the letter had been made in good faith for the protection of the social and spiritual interests of the community of which B was the guru, and that, so far as they implied a censure on the conduct of K's wife, they were justified by the authority with which B was vested as spiritual head of the community, and that therefore the case came within the seventh exception to s. 499.—BASUMATI ADHIKARINI v. BUDHRAM KOLITA, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 46. [Beverley and Banerjee, JJ. July 5, 1894.]

OF CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION, INSULT, AND ANNOYANCE.

Criminal intimidation.

503. Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation, or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do, as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat, commits criminal intimidation.

Explanation.—A threat to injure the reputation of any deceased person in whom the person threatened is interested is within this section.

A, for the purpose of inducing B to desist from prosecuting a civil suit, threatens to burn B's house. A is guilty of criminal intimidation.

WHERE the accused went to the complainant, the brother of an adult woman and told him that he had come from the Sarkar, and would get him six months' imprisonment, if he (the complainant) did not let his sister go, it was held that these words did not constitute either criminal intimidation within the meaning of s. 503 of the Penal Code (there having been no threat of an injury in the sense of the Code), or any other offence known to the law.—REG. v. MORARA BHASKARJI, 8 Bom. H. C. R. 101. Kemball and West, JJ. July 13, 1871.

N HAVING attended a Hindu widow-marriage (legalized by Act XV of 1856), S, his guru or spiritual superior, published a notice declaring N to be an outcaste, and forbidding the disciples of S, and the public of the town in which N lived, to associate with N until he submitted to the prescribed penance, and obtained a certificate of purification from S. S also sent by post a registered post-card of similar purport to N. In consequence of the interdict of S N was prevented from performing vows in the temple, lost the society of his relatives, and was otherwise damnified. N charged S with criminal intimidation, intimidation by attempt to induce a belief that by an act of the offender the person intimidated will become an object of divine displeasure and defamation. Held that the first two charges were unfounded, but that S, by communicating the sentence of excommunication by a registered post-card to N, was guilty of defamation.—QUEEN v. SANKARA, I. L. R., 6 Mad. 381. Turner, C.J., and Muttusami Ayyar, J. April 20, 1883.

WHERE the exercise of ecclesiastical jurisdiction is plainly ultra vires, or otherwise unsanctioned by the ordinances of a religious society, or where such ordinances controvert the general law, and in either case consequences result which the criminal law was intended to restrain, the Criminal Courts are not at liberty to decline jurisdiction. A Roman Catholic complained to a Magistrate that he had been threatened with an illegal sentence of excommunication, and had been excommunicated by the ecclesiastical authorities, with a view to prevent him from asserting his legal rights in defending a civil suit concerning the property of a church. Held that, under the circumstances, the proper course was for the Magistrate to have postponed the trial till the complainant proved in a Civil Court the illegality of the action of the ecclesiastical authorities.—In re DE-CRUZ, I. L. R., 8 Mad. 140. Turner, C.J., and Brandt, J. Dec. 22, 1884.

THE accused sent a fabricated petition to the Revenue Commissioner, SD, containing a threat that, if a certain forest-officer were not removed elsewhere, he would be killed. The accused was charged with the offence of criminal intimidation under s. 507 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860). The Sessions Judge found that the Commissioner had neither official nor personal interest in the forest-officer. He therefore acquitted the accused of the offence of criminal intimidation, but convicted him of an attempt to commit the offence punishable under s. 507, and sentenced him to four months' simple imprisonment. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that, as the person to whom the petition was addressed was not interested in the person threatened, the act intended and done by the accused did not amount to the offence of criminal intimidation within the meaning of s. 503 of the Penal Code. Per West, J.: "The offence of criminal intimidation, as defined, seems to require both a person to be threatened and another in whom he is specially interested. Then there must be the intent to cause alarm to the former by a threat to him of injury to the latter. The intent itself might be complete, though it could not be effected. But the existence of the interest seems essential to the offence, as also and equally to the attempt at the offence, since otherwise the attempt would be to do something not constituting an offence." Per Birdwood, J.: "No criminal liability can be incurred, under the Penal Code, by an attempt to do an act which, if done, would not be an offence against the Code. In the present case, therefore, if the accused was not guilty of committing criminal intimidation, because the act intended and done by him lacked an ingredient of that offence, he could not be guilty of an attempt at that offence."—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MANGESH JIVAJI, I. L. R., 11 Bom. 376. West and Birdwood, JJ. Feb. 10, 1887.

WHERE, in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution on a charge of assault which was dismissed, it appeared from the facts as found by the lower Courts that there was 'Criminal Intimidation' on the part of the plaintiff, although he was not charged with that offence by the defendant. Held that the plaintiff would not be entitled to any damages, as no malice or dishonest motive could be imputed to the defendant in bringing the charge of 'assault.'—MADHU LAL AHIR GAYAWAL v. SAHU PANDE DHAMI, I. The persons who threw the shoe were convicted of mischief, on the ground as their action had polluted the food, and had, from a Hindu religious point of view, rendered it unfit to be eaten. On reference by the Sessions Judge it was held that this conviction was wrong; neither could the accused be convicted under s. 298 or under s. 504 of the Indian Penal Code on the facts found.—KING-EMPEROR v. MOTI LAL, I. THE threat referred to in s. 503 of the Penal Code must be a threat communicated, or uttered with the intention of its being communicated, to the person threatened for the purpose of influencing his mind. The facts of the case are fully set out in the following judgment of the Court, which was delivered by Petheram, C.J.: "This is a rule which has been obtained for the purpose of revising a conviction of three men for an offence under ss. 503 and 506 of the Indian Penal Code—that is to say, for the offence of having threatened the complainant within the meaning of those sections. The charge is a charge of having threatened him on the 28th Aughran 1294, and in support of that charge two witnesses are called, who speak to what took place on that occasion. The facts of the case up to that point are these: that the complainant had purchased a rayati tenure within the limits of the accused's zemindari, and the accused disliked his being there, and apparently, from what the witnesses say, they intimated their dislike of that to them. Two witnesses say that, on that day, they were at the house of the accused, when a piyada of theirs came and told them that the complainant, notwithstanding what they had done, was still in the place, and was still taking away the paddy on the land, upon which the accused said that they would beat him and set fire to his house. Assuming that to be true, the question is whether that is a threat within the meaning of the section. The section which defines the offence is s. 503, and it is in these words: 'Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation, or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do, as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat, commits criminal intimidation.' It is clear that the gist of the offence, as defined in that section, is the effect which the threat is intended to have upon the mind of the person threatened, and it is equally clear that, before it can have any effect upon his mind, it must be either made to him by the person threatening, or communicated to him in some way. In this particular case there is no suggestion that the threat was made to the person threatened. All that happened was that, in the presence of some persons, the accused used the words I have quoted in their house. In one sense those words amount to a very bad threat; but there is no evidence on the face of them and there is no other evidence, that they intended that the words should be communicated to the complainant for the purpose of influencing his mind. It seems to us that the evidence in the case falls far short of establishing the offence defined by this section, which is, in our opinion, a threat communicated, or uttered with the intention of its being communicated, to the person threatened, for the purpose of influencing that man's mind. In this case there is nothing whatever to show that it was the intention of the accused that the threat should be communicated to the complainant. The complainant himself was called, and he does not say that he ever heard this particular threat. Though he speaks of a threat uttered on some other occasion, he does not say that the threat, which is the subject of this charge, was ever communicated to him, or that he ever heard it. Under these circumstances we think that there is no evidence of an offence having been committed under this section, and that this rule must be made absolute."—GUNGA CHUNDER SEN v. GOUR CHUNDER BANIKYA, I. Criminal intimidation by an anonymous communication.

THE accused sent a fabricated petition to the Revenue Commissioner, S D, containing a threat that, if a certain forest-officer were not removed elsewhere, he would be killed. The accused was charged with the offence of criminal intimidation under s. 507 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860). The Sessions Judge found that the Commissioner had neither official nor personal interest in the forest-officer. He, therefore, acquitted the accused of the offence of criminal intimidation, but convicted him of an attempt to commit the offence punishable under s. 507, and sentenced him to four months' simple imprisonment. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that, as the person to whom the petition was addressed was not interested in the person threatened, the act intended and done by the accused did not amount to the offence of criminal intimidation within the meaning of s. 503 of the Penal Code. Per West, J.: "The offence of criminal intimidation, as defined, seems to require both a person to be threatened and another in whom he is specially interested. Then there must be the intent to cause alarm to the former by a threat to him of injury to the latter. N HAVING attended a Hindu widow-marriage (legalized by Act XV. of 1856), S, his guru, or spiritual superior, published a notice declaring N to be an outcast, and forbidding the disciples of S and the public of the town in which N lived to associate with N until he submitted to the prescribed penance, and obtained a certificate of purification from S S also sent by post a registered post-card of similar purport to N. In consequence of the interdict of S, N was prevented from performing vows in the temple, lost the society of his relatives, and was otherwise damnified. N charged S with criminal intimidation by attempt to induce a belief that, by an act of the offender, the person intimidated will become an object of divine displeasure and defamation. Held that the first two charges were unfounded, but that S, by communicating the sentence of excommunication by a registered post-card to N, was guilty of defamation.—QUEEN v. SANKARA, I. THE accused in the middle of the night effected an entry into a room occupied by four women. On an alarm being given, and an attempt made to capture him, he escaped. He was charged with an offence under s. 456 of the Penal Code. The defence set up was disbelieved by both the lower Courts. Neither Court found specifically what was the intention with which the accused entered the room, but it was suggested that it was probably for the purpose of prosecuting an intrigue with one of the women. There was no evidence that he had been invited by her to go there. The lower Courts convicted the accused under s. 456. It was contended that, as the prosecution had failed to prove that the entry was made with intent to commit any offence, the conviction was illegal. Held that the facts proved were good evidence of an intent and of an intrusion on privacy within the meaning of s. 509 of the Penal Code, and that therefore the intent to commit an offence within the meaning of s. 441 was made out.—Balmakand Ram v. Ghansamram (I. 511. Whoever attempts to commit an offence punishable by this Code with transportation or imprisonment, or to cause such an offence to be committed, and in such attempt does any act towards the commission of the offence, shall, where no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such attempt, be punished with transportation or imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term of transportation or

* NOTE.—Ss. 13 and 15 of the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act (XXVII. of 1870) enact as follows:—

13. [Application of certain chapters of Penal Code.]—The following chapters of the same Code, namely, IV. (General Exceptions), V. (Of Abetment), and XXIII. (Of Attempts to commit Offences), shall apply to offences punishable under the said ss. 121A, 294A, and 304A, and the said Chapters IV. and V. shall apply to offences punishable under "ss. 124A, 225A, and 225B" [The words and figures quoted have been substituted for the words and figures, "said sections 124A and 225A," by the second schedule to the Repealing and Amending Act (XII. of 1891).]

15. [Saving of special and local laws.]—Nothing contained in this Act (XXVII. of 1870) shall be taken to affect any of the provisions of any special or local law.

Attempts to commit certain offences are compoundable.—See the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), s. 345.

THE term of imprisonment for attempting to fabricate false evidence for the purpose of being used in a stage of judicial proceeding cannot extend beyond one-half of seven years. —QUEEN v. SOONDUR PUTNAICK, 3 W. R. 59. [Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ. Aug. 7, 1865.]

ATTEMPT at murder must not be confounded with causing grievous hurt with dangerous weapons.—GHOLAM RUSSOOL v. CROWN Panj. Rec., No. 32 of 1866.

S. 511 of the Penal Code does not apply to a case of dacoity. Where a prisoner was found guilty of an attempt at dacoity under that section, and of causing grievous hurt in such attempt under s. 397, and a sentence of three years rigorous imprisonment was passed on him, the finding was amended by striking out "ss. 397 and 511," and substituting "s. 395."—QUEEN v. KOONEE, 7 W. R. 48. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. Mar. 25, 1867.] Referred to in Queen-Empress v. Bani, I. L. R., 23 All. 78 infra.

IN order to constitute the offence of attempt to murder under s. 307, the act committed by the prisoner must be an act capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of events. Aliter under s. 511 taken in connection with ss. 299 and 300. Therefore, where the prisoner presented an uncapped gun at F. G. (believing the gun to be capped) with the intention of murdering him, but was prevented from pulling the trigger, held that he could not be convicted of an attempt to murder upon a charge framed under s. 307, but that, under the same circumstances, he might be convicted upon a charge of simple attempt to murder framed under s. 511 in connection with ss. 299 and 300. Unnecessary allegations in a charge may be rejected as surplusage. Apparent inconsistency between the English law with reference to attempts as laid down in Reg. v. Collins (33 L. J. M. C. 177) and the provisions of the Indian Penal Code explained.—REG. v. FRANCIS CASSIDY, 4 Bom. H. C. R. 17 [Couch, C.J., and Westropp, J. Dec. 23, 1867.]

HELD by Glover, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions, occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under s. 511 of the Penal Code, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by Mitter, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about with it, cannot support a conviction under ss. 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards the commission of the offence but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it.—QUEEN v. DOYAL BAURI, 3 B. L. R. A. Cr. 55. [Glover and Mitter, JJ. Sep. 1, 1869.] In subsequent rulings, the opinion of Mitter, J., was upheld.

A, INTENDING to procure a forged document purporting to be executed by one Chotak applied to K to accompany A to Gorakhpur, where A said Chotak would be found, and there to draw out a bond for execution by Chotak. In pursuance of this invitation, K, believing that Chotak would execute the bond, accompanied A to Gorakhpur. A took with him his ploughman, named Chetoo, and directed Chetoo to purchase a stamp paper for the bond, and to give his name and description to the stamp-vendor as Chotak.

Chetoo complied with this direction, and the stamp-vendor wrote on the stamp-paper an endorsement to the effect that the purchaser was Chotak, with the description which would apply to that person, but, suspecting false personation, arrested Chetoo, and took him to the Magistrate. On the above facts, the Sessions Judge convicted A of attempt to forge a valuable security, and, under ss. 467 and 511, sentenced him to be rigorously imprisoned for five years. Held that, to constitute the offence of attempt under s. 511, Penal Code, there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence, and for the purpose of committing that offence, and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence. The provisions of s. 511, Penal Code, do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. Although such are doubtless done towards the commission of the offence, they are not done in the attempt to commit the offence within the meaning of the word "attempt" as used in the section. —QUEEN v. RAMSARUN CHOWBEY, 4 N.-W. P. 46. [Turner, J. Mar. 13, 1872.] Distinguished and observed on in Empress v. Mula, I. L. FACTS showing that an accused person had dug a hole, intending to place salt therein, in order that the discovery of the salt so placed might be used in evidence against his enemy in a judicial proceeding, would justify a conviction for an attempt to fabricate false evidence.—QUEEN v. M INSTIGATED Z to personate C, and to purchase in C's name certain stamped paper, in consequence of which the vendor of the stamped paper endorsed C's name on such paper as the purchaser of it. M acted with the intention that such endorsement might be used against C in a judicial proceeding. Held that the offence of fabricating false evidence had been actually committed, and M was properly convicted of abetting the commission of such offence. Queen v. Ramsarun Chowbey (4 N.-W. P. 46) distinguished and observed on.—EMPRESS v. MULA, I. L. R., 2 All. 105. [Turner, J. Jan. 24, 1875.]

THE act of causing the publication of banns of marriage is an act done in the preparation to marry, but does not amount to an attempt to marry. Where, therefore, a man having a wife living, causes the banns of marriage between himself and a woman to be published, he could not be punished for an attempt to marry again during the lifetime of his wife.—REG. v. PETERSON, I. L. R., 1 All. 316. [Pearson, J. Dec. 6, 1876.]

AN indecent assault upon a woman does not amount to an attempt to commit rape, unless the Court is satisfied that there was a determination in the accused to gratify his passions at all events, and in spite of all resistance.—EMPRESS v. SHANKAR, I. L. R., 5 Bom. 403. [Melvill and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Mar. 2, 1881.]

A PERSON cannot be convicted of an attempt to commit an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code unless the offence would have been committed if the attempt charged had succeeded. A prisoner, who was charged with attempting to commit forgery of a valuable security, was found guilty by the jury of attempting to commit forgery. The jury explained their finding by saying that the prisoner had ordered certain receipt forms to be printed similar to those used by the Bengal Coal Company, and that one of these forms had actually been printed, and the proof corrected by him, that the prisoner had had an intention of making such addition to the printed forms as would make it a false document, and that he did this dishonestly, and with intent to commit fraud. The Sessions Judge sentenced the prisoner to rigorous imprisonment for one year under ss. 465 and 511 of the Penal Code for attempting to commit forgery. Held that the conviction was wrong and must be set aside. —In re RIASAT ALI, alias BARI MIYA, alias BODIUZZUMA. THE accused sent a fabricated petition to the Revenue Commissioner, S D, containing a threat that, if a certain forest-officer were not removed elsewhere, he would be killed. The accused was charged with the offence of criminal intimidation under s. 507 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860). The Sessions Judge found that the Commissioner had neither official nor personal interest in the forest-officer. He, therefore, acquitted the accused of the offence of criminal intimidation, but convicted him of an attempt to commit the offence punishable under s. 507, and sentenced him to four months' simple imprisonment. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that, as the person to whom the petition was addressed was not interested in the person threatened, the act intended and done by the accused did not amount to the offence of criminal intimidation within the meaning of s. 503 of the Penal Code. Per West, J. "The offence of criminal intimidation, as defined, seems to require both a person to be threatened and another in whom he is specially interested. Then there must be the intent to cause alarm to the former by a threat to him of injury to the latter. The intent itself might be complete, though it could not be effected. But the existence of the interest seems essential to the offence, as also and equally to the attempt at the offence, since otherwise the attempt would be to do something not constituting an offence." Per Birdwood, J.: "No criminal liability can be incurred under the Penal Code, by an attempt to do an act, which, if done, would not be an offence against the Code. In the present case, therefore, if the accused was not guilty of committing criminal intimidation, because the act intended and done by him lacked an ingredient of that offence, he could not be guilty of an attempt at that offence."—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MANGESH JIVAJI, I. L. R., 11 Bom. 370. [West and Birdwood, JJ. Feb. 10, 1887.]

A PERSON who has been convicted of the offence of theft (an offence punishable under ch. 27 of the Penal Code) does not, on being convicted of an attempt to commit the offence of theft, become liable to the enhanced punishment allowed by s. 75 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SRICHARAN BAURI, I. L. R., 14 Cal. 357. Petheram, C. J., and Cunningham, J. Mar. 19, 1887.

A MAN may be guilty of an attempt to cheat, although the person he attempts to cheat is forewarned, and is therefore not cheated. R. v. Heesler (11 Cox, C. C. 570) referred to. M wrote a letter to the Currency Office at Calcutta enclosing the halves of two Government currency notes, stating that the other halves were lost, and enquiring what steps should be taken for the recovery of the value of the notes. The Currency Office having, upon enquiry, discovered that the amount of the notes had been paid to the holder of the other halves, and that the notes had been withdrawn from circulation and cancelled, sent M the usual form of claim to be filled up and returned to it. It appeared from the evidence that the Currency Office never contemplated paying M in respect of the notes. The form was filled up and signed by M, and returned by him to the Currency Office. Held that, although there was no intention on the part of the Currency Office to pay the amount of the notes, M was guilty of an attempt to cheat.—GOVT. OF BENGAL v. UMESH CHUNDER MITTER, I. L. R., 16 Cal. 310. [Macpherson and Trevelyan, JJ. Nov. 6, 1888.]

PRISONER was requested to make an entry in a book of account belonging to the complainant to the effect that he was indebted to the complainant in a certain sum found due on a settlement of account; instead of making this entry as requested, prisoner entered in a language not known to complainant that this sum had been paid to complainant. He was convicted of forgery under s. 465 of the Penal Code. Held that the offence was not forgery, but an attempt to cheat.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KUNJU NAYAR, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 114. [Muttusami Ayyar and Shephard, JJ. Sep. 9, 20, 1888.

S. 511 of the Indian Penal Code does not apply to attempts to commit murder, which are fully and exclusively provided for by s. 307 of the said Act. A person is criminally responsible for an attempt to commit murder when, with the intention or knowledge requisite to its commission, he has done the last proximate act necessary to constitute the completed offence, and when the completion of the offence is only prevented by some cause independent of his volition.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIDDHA, I. L. R., 14 All. 38. [Straight, J. Aug. 5, 1891.

S. 511 of the Penal Code was not meant to cover only the penultimate act towards completion of an offence, and not acts precedent, if those acts are done in the course of the attempt to commit the offence, are done with the intent to commit it, and done towards its commission. Whether any given act or series of acts amounts to an attempt of which the law will take notice, or merely to preparation, is a question of fact in each case.—IN THE MATTER OF R. MACCREA, I. L. R., 15 All. 173. Knox and Blair, JJ. Feb. 24, 1893.

S. 75 of the Penal Code does not apply to cases which are confined to s. 511 of that Code. The offences which come under s. 511 must be punished entirely irrespective of s. 75. Queen-Empress v. Ajudhia (I. L. R., 17 All. 120) approved.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BHAROSA, I. L. R., 17 All. 123. [Edge, C.J., and Banerji, J. Jan. 9, 1895.]

ONE Chaturi (calling himself Kehri, the son of Bhupal Kachhi, went to a stamp-vendor, accompanied by a man named Kalyan Singh, and purchased from him, in the name of Kehri, a stamp-paper of the value of four annas. The two men then went to a petition-writer, and, Chaturi again giving his name as Kehri, they asked the petition-writer to write for them a bond for Rs. 50 payable by Kehri to Kalyan Singh. The petition-writer commenced to write the bond, but, his suspicions being aroused, did not finish it, but took Chaturi and Kalyan Singh to the nearest thana. Held that, under the above circumstances, Kalyan Singh was rightly convicted of an attempt to commit the offence defined in s. 467 of the Indian Penal Code, and Chaturi of abetment of the said attempt. The Queen v. Ram

On the 5th May 1894 C applied in writing under the provisions of s. 133 of Ben. Act III. of 1884 to a municipality for a license to be granted to him in respect of two carriages and six ponies, and filled up and signed the usual statement required by the section. The sum payable in respect of the license was received, and the license asked for by C was granted to him, and at the same time the statement was sent to an overseer of the municipality for verification. On the 7th May the overseer reported that C had in his possession eight ponies and one horse. On the 8th May the chairman of the municipality passed an order, directing C to be prosecuted for making a false statement in the schedule to his statement regarding the number of animals in respect of which he applied for the license. On the 9th May C presented a petition asking that the tax on the three animals might be received, and stating that he did not think he was liable to take out a license for them, as they were old and diseased, and unfit for work. On the 13th May the chairman passed an order on this application that he had no power to interfere, as the prosecution of C had already been ordered. Meanwhile on the 9th May a paper was sent to the Magistrate headed "List of municipal cases under Act III. of 1884," in which C appeared as charged with an offence under s. 199 of the Penal Code for "filing a false statement, that is to say, putting down in the schedule six ponies only instead of eight ponies and one horse." On the 12th May the Deputy Magistrate directed a summons to issue to C, returnable on the 23rd. On the 18th May the District Magistrate passed an order to the effect that the municipality could not institute a prosecution under the Penal Code, but that the Deputy Magistrate had power to do so, and that he should consider the provisions of ss. 182 and 417, read with 511, of the Penal Code, as applicable to the facts of the case. On the 19th May the summons was issued, and the case was heard on the 23rd and 24th May and 19th June, on which date formal charges under ss. 190, 182, and 417-511 of the Penal Code were framed. Thereafter the hearing proceeded till the 16th July, when, on an application to the High Court, the proceedings were stayed, and a rule issued to show cause why they should not be quashed. It was contended at the hearing of the rule that the High Court should not interfere at that stage of the proceedings under its revisional jurisdiction. Held that the High Court has power to interfere at any stage of a case, and that, when it is brought to its notice that a person has been subjected as in this case, for over two months, to the harassment of an illegal prosecution, it is its bounden duty to interfere. Held, further, that it was quite clear that the municipality had no power to institute the proceedings, and that, having regard to the provisions of s. 191 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it did not appear that the Deputy Magistrate, having no private complainant before him, had power, of his own motion, to institute them; but that, whether he had such power or not, the admitted facts of the case did not in law constitute any of the offences with which C was charged, and that the whole proceedings must be quashed. The Municipal Act is intended to be complete in itself as regards offences committed against the Municipal Commissioners, and there is no indication of any intention to render a delinquent also liable to punishment under the Penal Code. There is no penalty in the Act attached to the omission to make a return under s. 133, and no words in the Act constituting the making a false return a penal offence; and, as there are no such words in the Act as are necessary to make the provisions of the Penal Code applicable, the Court has no power to import them. The Municipal Commissioners in such a case have the remedy provided by the Act itself.—CHANDI PERSHAD v. ABDUR RAHMAN, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 131. Petheram, C.J., and Beverley, J. Aug. 13, 1894.]

THE accused was committed for trial before a Sessions Court on a charge of abetment of dacoity under s. 110 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860). In the course of the trial the Assistant Sessions Judge added an alternative charge under s. 511 of the Code and sentenced the accused under ss. 395, 116, and 511 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860). In appeal the Sessions Judge held that the evidence disclosed the offence of an attempt to commit the offence of collecting arms, &c., with intention of waging war against the Queen, under s. 122, and as no charge under that section could be framed for want of the sanction of Government under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898), the accused could not be brought to trial at all. He, therefore, reversed the conviction and acquitted the accused. Held (reversing the order of acquittal), that the mere fact that no charge for the graver offence under s. 122 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860) could be framed for want of Government sanction, did not render the trial for the minor offence of attempting or abetting dacoity either irregular or illegal. Per Fulton, J.—According to the 2nd clause of

s. 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898), if the accused abetted an offence under s. 122 of the Penal Code, and by the same speech also attempted or abetted the offence of dacoity, he could be tried for each of these offences; but as that section is controlled, as regards the offence against the State, by the provisions of s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code, its operation in this case is restricted to the minor offence for which the accused could legally be charged and tried. Queen-Empress v. Karigowda (I. L. R., 19 Bom. 51) and In re Nagarji (I. L. R., 19 Bom. 340) distinguished.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ANANT PURANIK, I. L. R., 25 Bom. 90. [Ranade and Fulton, JJ. July 19, 1900

WHERE several persons were found endeavouring to break into a house, and some of them, being armed, used violence, but only in attempting to escape being arrested, it was held that they could not properly be convicted under s. 397 read with s. 511 of the Indian Penal Code. Queen v. Koonee (7 W. R. 48) referred to.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BENI, I. L. R., 23 All 78. Henderson, J. July 25, 1900.

THE petitioners mortgaged their property and under the terms of the agreement certain persons were appointed managers of the estate under certain conditions in regard to payment of the moneys realized by them. In execution of a decree obtained by the managers in a suit brought in the names of the petitioners a certain putni taluk was sold for Rs. 3,000. The debtor settled with the petitioners that, on payment of Rs. 1,000, the sale was to be set aside. The money was paid into Court, and an application was made by the petitioners for the withdrawal of this money. The Court, however, made no order on this application. The petitioners were convicted of an attempt to commit an offence under s. 422 of the Penal Code. Held that, having regard to the relation between the petitioners and their managers at whose instance the proceedings were taken, it could not properly be said that an attempt to commit an offence under s. 422 of the Penal Code was made. That the interference of the petitioners and their application to obtain the money paid into Court might have been breaches of their contract with the mortgagees, but such conduct could not necessarily be regarded as dishonest or fraudulent so as to render them liable to punishment. Their attempt to get this money was more to put an end to the management than to prevent the money from being available for payment of their debt under the mortgage.—Nobin Chunder Mudduck (22 W. R. # PREFACE.

A CHEAP annotated edition of the Indian Evidence Act (I. of 1872), containing only criminal rulings of the several High Courts in India, is a desideratum which has long and severely been felt by those who have to deal with the criminal law.

To supply this desideratum the present work has been compiled, and is specially intended for insertion in the New Criminal Court Manual.

This edition of the Evidence Act contains rulings up to December 1900, and is amend.d up to date of publication.

It is trusted that, as the costlier works on the Evidence Act are beyond the means of many who have to deal with the criminal law, the present work will prove useful to them.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

ACT NO. I. OF 1872.*

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT, 1872.

RECEIVED THE G.-G.'S ASSENT ON THE 15TH MARCH 1872.

Preamble. WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate, define, and amend the Law of Evidence; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.—RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

CHAPTER I.—PRELIMINARY.

Short title. 1. This Act may be called "The Indian Evidence Act, 1872:"

Extent. It extends to the whole of British India, and applies to all judicial proceedings in or before any Court, including Courts-martial,† but not to affidavits‡ presented to any Court or officer,

* For the Statement of Objects and Reasons, see Gazette of India, 1868, p. 1574; for the Draft or Preliminary Report of the Select Committee, dated 31st March 1871, see ibid, 1871, Pt. V, p 273, and for the Second Report of the Select Committee, dated the 30th January 1872, see ibid, 1872 Pt V, p 34, for Discussions in Council, see ibid, 1868, Supplement, pp. 1060 and 1209, ibid, 1871, Extra Supplement, p 42, and Supplement, p. 1641, and ibid, 1872, pp 130 and 230

Act I. of 1872 has been declared in force in Upper Burma generally (except the Shan States) by the Upper Burma Laws Act (XX. of 1886), s 6; in the Hill District of Arakan, by the Arakan Hill District Laws Regulation (IX. of 1874), s. 3; in British Baluchistan, by the British Baluchistan Laws Regulation (I of 1890), s 3, in the Santhál Parganas, by the Santhál Parganas Settlement Regulation (III of 1872), as amended by the Santhál Parganas Laws Regulation (III. of 1886), s 6, in Angul and the Khondmals, by the Angul District Regulation (I of 1894), s 3, in the Kachin Hill-tracts, as regards Hill-tribes, by the Kachin Hill District Regulation (I. of 1895), s 3, and in the Chin Hills, as regards Hill-tribes, by the Chin Hills Regulation (V of 1896), s. 3; also, by notification under s 3 (a) of the Scheduled Districts Act (XIV. of 1874), in the following Scheduled Districts, namely: The Districts of Hazáribágh, Lohárdaga, and Manbhum, and Pargana Dhálbhum, and the Kolhán in the District of Singbhum (see Gazette of India, 1881, Pt I, p. 504); and in the North-Western Provinces Tarái (see ibid, 1876, Pt. I., p. 505). The District of Lohárdaga included at this time the present District of Palamau, which was separated in 1894.

So much of this Act as relates to the General Clauses Act (I. of 1868) was repealed by the General Clauses Act (X. of 1897)

† But see the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict., c 58), s. 127, which is as follows:—

"A Court-martial under this Act shall not, as respects the conduct of its proceedings, or the reception or rejection of evidence, or as respects any other matter or thing whatsoever be subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, or to any Act, law, or ordinance of any Legislature whatsoever, other than the Parliament of the United Kingdom."

Act I. of 1872 is (subject to such modifications as the Governor-General in Council may direct) applicable to all proceedings before Indian Marine Courts.—See the Indian Marine Act (XIV. of 1887), s 68.

‡ The Civil Procedure Code regulates matters to which affidavits are confined.—See Act XIV. of 1882, ss. 194 to 197, and s. 647; see also the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), s. 539.

Ss. 2, 3. nor to proceedings before an arbitrator; and it shall come into force on the first day of September 1872.

Commencement of Act.

Ruling.

It may be that, as observed by Mr. Norton in his preface (Law of Evidence, 8th Edition), the framer of the Act over-estimated what had been done, when he claimed to have reproduced, within the compass of his 167 sections, the whole of Taylor's Work that was applicable to India, and there can be no doubt that cases must arise for which no positive solution can be found in the Act itself, and in such cases we shall probably be justified, and shall always be safe, in adopting English rules, in so far as they follow, or are in accord with, the general tenor of the Act. But in respect of matters expressly provided for in the Act, we must, so to say, start from the Act, and not deal with it as a mere modification of the Law of Evidence prevailing in England.—Per JACKSON, J, in EMPRESS v. ASHOOTOSH CHUCKERBUTTY, I. L. R., 4 Cal. 483.

Repeal of enactments.

(1) all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute, Act, or Regulation in force in any part of British India;

(2) all such rules, laws, and regulations as have acquired the force of law under the twenty-fifth section of "The Indian Councils Act, 1861,"* in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for; and

(3) the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto, to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule.

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act, or Regulation in force in any part of British India, and not hereby expressly repealed.

Interpretation-clause.

3. In this Act, the following words and expressions are used in the following senses, unless a contrary intention appears from the context:—

"Court." "Court" includes all Judges† and Magistrates,‡ and all persons, except arbitrators, legally authorized to take evidence.

"Fact." "Fact" means and includes—

(1) anything, state of things, or relation of things, capable of being perceived by the senses;

any fact from which, either by itself or in connection with other facts, the existence, non-existence, nature, or extent of any right, liability, or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows.

Explanation.—Whenever, under the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure,* any Court records an issue of fact, the fact to be asserted or denied in the answer to such issue is a fact in issue.†

A is accused of the murder of B.

At his trial the following facts may be in issue:—

that A caused B's death;

that A intended to cause B's death;

that A had received grave and sudden provocation from B; that A, at the time of doing the act which caused B's death, was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing its nature.

"Document." "Document"‡ means any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures, or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, for the purpose of recording that matter.

Ss. 4, 5. A fact is said to be disproved when, after considering the matters before it, the Court either believes that it does not exist, or considers its non-existence so probable that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it does not exist.

"Disproved."

A fact is said not to be proved when it is neither proved nor disproved.

Rulings.

1. A Sub-Registrar is a public officer, his proceedings are judicial proceedings within the meaning of s. 228 of the Penal Code, and his Court is a Court within the meaning of that word in the Evidence Act In cases under s 228 of the Penal Code the Court in which the offence is committed is to try the offence, but the procedure is to be restricted by the provisions of ch. 32 of the Code. Where, in a case under s. 228, the Sub-Registrar, before whom the offence was committed, did not proceed under s 435 or 436, it was held that a Magistrate had no jurisdiction.—IN THE MATTER OF SARDHARE LALL. 22 W. R. 10; 13 B. L. R Ap. 10. [Kemp and Birch, JJ. April 28. 1874.]

2. A Sub-Registrar acting under s. 34 of the Registration Act, 1877, is not a "Court" within the meaning of s 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SUBBA, I. L. R., 11 Mad 3 [Turner, C.J., and Hutchins J Aug 22, 1884.]

3. A Sub-Registrar under the Registration Act (III of 1877) is not a Judge, and therefore not a 'Court' within the meaning of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882). His sanction is therefore not necessary for a prosecution for forgery in respect of a forged document presented for registration in his office. The ruling in In re Venkatachala (I. L. R., 10 Mad 154) dissented from. The word 'forgery' is used as a general term in s. 463 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860); and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882) so as to embrace all species of forgery, and thus includes a case falling under s. 467 of the Indian Penal Code. The definition of 'Court' given in the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) is framed only for the purposes of the Act itself and should not be extended beyond its legitimate scope. Distinction between judicial and an administrative inquiry pointed out.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TULJA I. L. R. 12 Bom. 36. [West and Birdwood, JJ July 14, 1887.]

4. A Registrar acting under Registration Act ss. 72-75 is a Court for the purposes of the Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195.—ATCHAYAT GANGIYA, I. L. R. 15 Mad. 138. [Collins C.J., and Muttusami Ayyar, Parker and Shephard, JJ Jan. 22, Oct. 13, 1891 Jan. 1892.]

4. Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume a fact, it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or may call for proof of it.

"May presume."

Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact, it shall regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved.

"Shall presume."

When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it.

CHAPTER II.—OF THE RELEVANCY OF FACTS.

5. Evidence may be given, in any suit or proceeding, of the existence or non-existence of every fact in issue, and of such other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others.

Evidence may be given of facts in issue and relevant facts.

Explanation.—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to Civil Procedure.*

Illustrations.

(a.) A is tried for the murder of B by beating him with a club with the intention of causing his death.

At A's trial the following facts are in issue :—

A's beating B with the club ;

A's causing B's death by such beating ;

A's intention to cause B's death

(b.) A suitor does not bring with him, and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case, a bond on which he relies. This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure.*

1. The statement of a witness for the defence, that a witness for the prosecution was at a particular place at a particular time, and consequently could not then have been at another place where the latter states he was, and saw the accused persons, is properly admissible in evidence, even though the witness for the prosecution may not himself have been cross-examined on the point [ss. 5, 11, 153, illus. (c), of Act I. of 1872]. Where such a statement, after being admitted, was withheld from the jury, the High Court ordered a new trial.—REG. v. SAKHARAM MUKUNDJI, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 160. West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Sep. 2, 1874.]

2. The accused was charged with having received illegal gratifications from C. and Co. on three specific occasions in 1876. In 1876, 1877, and 1878, C. and Co. were doing business as commissariat contractors, and the accused was the manager of the commissariat office. Held that evidence of similar but unconnected instances of receiving illegal gratifications from C. and Co. in 1877 and 1878 was not admissible against him under ss. 5 to 13 of the Evidence Act. Held per Garth C.J. (Maclean, J., concurring): The evidence was not admissible under s. 14. Per Garth, C.J.: S. 14 applies to cases where a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it, not to cases where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts, and not upon the state of a man's mind or feeling. Per Mitter, J.: If the receipt of the illegal gratifications mentioned in the charge be considered proved by other evidence, and if it were necessary to ascertain whether the accused received them as a motive for showing favour in the exercise of his official functions, the alleged transactions of 1877 and 1878 would be relevant under s. 14, but they would not be relevant to establish the fact of payments in 1876.—EMPRESS v. M. J. VYAPOORY MOODELIAR, I. L. R., 6 Cal. 655; 8 C. L. R. 197. Garth, C.J., and Mitter and Maclean, JJ. Jan. 22 and Feb. 9, 1881.]

6. Facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant, whether they occurred at the same time and place, or at different times and places.

Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction.

(a.) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or by the bystanders at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction, is a relevant fact.

(b.) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked, and gaols are broken open. The occurrence of these facts is relevant, as forming part of the general transaction, though A may not have been present at all of them.

* See now Act XIV. of 1882.

Ss. 7, 8.

(c.) A sues B for a libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose, and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained, are relevant facts, though they do not contain the libel itself.

(d.) The question is, whether certain goods ordered from B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact.

Ruling.

The only evidence against a prisoner charged with having voluntarily caused grievous hurt was a statement made in the presence of the prisoner by the person injured to a third person, immediately after the commission of the offence. The prisoner did not, when the statement was made, deny that she had done the act complained of. Held that the evidence was admissible under s. 6 and s. 8, illus. (g), of the Evidence Act.—IN THE MATTER OF SURAT DHOBNI, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 302. [Mitter and Field, JJ. Jan. 24, 1884.]

Facts which are occasion, cause, or effect of facts in issue.

7. Facts which are the occasion, cause, or effect, immediate or otherwise, of relevant facts or facts in issue, or which constitute the state of things under which they happened, or which afforded an opportunity for their occurrence or transaction, are relevant.

(a.) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, shortly before the robbery, B went to a fair with money in his possession, and that he showed it, or mentioned the fact that he had it, to third persons, are relevant.

(b.) The question is, whether A murdered B.

Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed, are relevant facts.

(c.) The question is, whether A poisoned B.

The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison, and habits of B known to A, which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison, are relevant facts.

Motive, preparation, and previous or subsequent conduct.

8. Any fact is relevant which shows or constitutes a motive or preparation for any fact in issue or relevant fact.

The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding, in reference to such suit or proceeding, or in reference to any fact in issue therein, or relevant thereto, and the conduct of any person, an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding, is relevant, if such conduct influences, or is influenced by, any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous or subsequent thereto.

Explanation 1.—The word "conduct" in this section does not include statements, unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements; but this explanation is not to affect the relevancy of statements under any other section of this Act.

Explanation 2.—When the conduct of any person is relevant, any statement made to him or in his presence and hearing, which affects such conduct, is relevant.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B.

The facts that A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C, and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public, are relevant.

(b.) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond: S. 8.

The fact that, at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose, is relevant.

(c.) A is tried for the murder of B by poison:

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B, is relevant.

(d.) The question is, whether a certain document is the will of A:

The facts that, not long before the date of the alleged will, A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged will relate, that he consulted vakils in reference to making the will, and that he caused drafts of other wills to be prepared, of which he did not approve, are relevant.

(e.) A is accused of a crime:

The facts that, either before, or at the time of, or after, the alleged crime, A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself, or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence, or procured the absence, of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned persons to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant.

(f.) The question is, whether A robbed B:

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence, "The police are coming to look for the man who robbed B," and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant.

(g.) The question is, whether A owes B rupees 10,000:

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing, "I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees," and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts.

(h.) The question is, whether A committed a crime:

The facts that A absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter, are relevant.

(i.) A is accused of a crime:

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime, or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant.

(j.) The question is, whether A was ravished:

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or

as corroborative evidence under section 157.

(k.) The question is, whether A was robbed:

The fact that, soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant.

The fact that he said he had been robbed, without making any complaint, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant—

as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or

1. A prisoner was indicted for theft and dishonestly receiving stolen property. The prosecutor, while travelling by train to Calcutta, discovered the loss of the property, and reported his loss to a railway police-inspector at the first station at which the train stopped after he became aware of the theft, prisoner not then being present. This statement was tendered in evidence, and admitted under s. 8, ill. (h), of the Evidence Act. Evidence was also tendered of a statement made by the prisoner to the constable who arrested him, to the effect that some of the property had been given him by his sister, and that he had bought the rest, and this was admitted; the Court remarking then that there was a distinction in the Evidence Act between "admission" and "confession."—QUEEN v. MACDONALD, 10 B. L. R. Ap. 2. [Phear, J. Dec. 3, 1872.]

2. The only evidence against a prisoner charged with having voluntarily caused grievous hurt was a statement made in the presence of the prisoner by the person injured to a third person immediately after the commission of the offence The prisoner did not, when the statement was made, deny that she had done the act complained of. Held that the evidence was admissible under s. 6 and s. 8, ill. (g), of the Evidence Act.—IN THE MATTER OF SURAT DHOBNI, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 302. [Mitter and Field, JJ. Jan. 24, 1884.]

3. The accused was charged, under s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code, with dishonestly receiving stolen property. In the course of the police-investigation the accused was asked by the police where the property was. He replied that he had kept it, and would show. He said he had buried the property in the fields. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which the property was kept. He made a second statement when pointing out the spot to the effect that he had buried the property there. It was contended that those statements were inadmissible, having been made when the accused was in custody of the police. Held—(1) That the above statements were clearly in the nature of a confession, as they suggested the inference that the prisoner committed the crime, and, even if not intended by the accused as a confession of guilt, they were an admission of a criminating circumstance, and would form a very important part of the evidence against the accused, as showing that he had not come by the property honestly, and therefore properly within the rule of exclusion in regard to confessions made by a person in custody of the police. (2) That neither of the above statements was admissible in evidence under explanation 1 of s. 8 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) as evidence of the conduct of the accused. S. 8, so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct," must be read in connection with ss. 25 and 26, and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections. (3) That the accused's statement, that he had buried the property in the fields, was admissible in evidence under s. 27 of the Evidence Act, as it set the police in motion, and led to the discovery of the property. A statement is equally admissible under s. 27, whether the statement is made in such detail as to enable the police to discover the property themselves, or whether it be of such a nature as to require the assistance of the accused in discovering the exact spot where the property is concealed.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NANA, I. L. R., 14 Bom 260. [Sargent, C.J., and Bayley, Scott, Jardine, and Parsons, JJ. Sep. 10, 1889.]

4 In a trial upon a charge of murder, it appeared that the deceased, shortly before her death, was questioned by various persons as to the circumstances in which the injuries had been inflicted on her, and that she was at that time unable to speak, but was conscious and able to make signs. Evidence was offered by the prosecution, and admitted by the Sessions Judge, to prove the questions put to the deceased, and the signs made by her in answer to such questions. Held by the Full Bench (Mahmood, J., dissenting) that the questions and the signs taken together might properly be regarded as "verbal statements" made by a person as to the cause of her death within the meaning of s. 32 of the Evidence Act, and were, therefore, admissible in evidence under that section. Per Straight, J., that statements by the witnesses as to their impressions of what the signs meant were inadmissible, and should be eliminated; but that, assuming that the questions put to the deceased were responded to by her in such a manner as to leave no doubt in the mind of the Court as to her meaning, it was not straining the construction to hold that the circumstances were covered by s 32. Per Mahmood, J., that the expression "verbal statements" in s. 32 should be confined to statements made by means of a word or words, and that the signs made by the deceased, not being verbal statements in this sense, were not admissible in evidence under that section. Per Petheram, C.J., that the signs could not be proved as "conduct" within the meaning of s. 8 of the Evidence Act, inasmuch as, taken alone, and without reference to the questions leading to them, there was nothing to connect them with the cause of death, and so to make them relevant; while the questions could not be proved either under expl. 2 of s. 8, or under s. 9, inasmuch as the condition precedent to their admissibility under either of these provisions was the relevancy of the conduct which they were alleged to affect, or of the facts which they were intended to explain. The "conduct" made relevant by s. 8 is conduct which is directly and immediately influenced by a fact in issue or relevant fact; and it does not include actions resulting from some intermediate cause, such as questions or suggestions by other persons. Per Mahmood, J., that the word "conduct," as used in s. 8, does not mean only such conduct as is directly and immediately influenced by a fact in issue or relevant fact; that the signs made by deceased were the conduct of "a person, an offence against whom was the subject of any proceeding," and were relevant as such under s. 8; and that the questions put to her were admissible in evidence either under expl. 2 of the same section, or under s. 9, by way of an explanation of the meaning of the signs.—EMPRESS v. ABDULLAH, I. L. R., 7 All. 385. [Petheram, C.J., and Straight, Oldfield, Brodhurst, and Mahmood, JJ. Feb. 27, 1885.]

(a.) The question is, whether a given document is the will of A:

The state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged will may be relevant facts.

(b.) A sues B for a libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A; B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true:

The position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in issue.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrevelant, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations between A and B.

(c.) A is accused of a crime:

The fact that, soon after the commission of the crime, A absconded from his house, is relevant, under section 8, as conduct subsequent to, and affected by, facts in issue.

The fact that, at the time when he left home, he had sudden and urgent business at the place to which he went, is relevant, as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly.

The details of the business on which he left are not relevant, except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden and urgent.

(d.) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C, on leaving A's service, says to A, "I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer:" This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct, which is relevant as a fact in issue.

(e.) A, accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B, who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says, as he delivers it, "A says you are to hide this:" B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction.

(f.) A is tried for a riot, and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob:

The cries of the mob are relevant as explanatory of the nature of the transaction.

Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design.

10. Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence, or an actionable wrong, any thing said, done, or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.

Illustration.

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view at Agra, and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Cabul the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant, both to prove the existence of the conspiracy, and to prove A's complicity in it, although he may have been ignorant of all of them and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy, or after he left it.

The fact that, on that day, A was at Lahore, is relevant.

The fact that, near the time when the crime was committed, A was at a distance from the place where it was committed, which would render it highly improbable, though not impossible, that he committed it, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A committed a crime

The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed either by A, B, C, or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else, and that it was not committed by either B, C, or D, is relevant.

1. S. 11 of the Evidence Act should not be construed in its widest signification, but considered as limited in the effect by s. 34 of the Act. So construed, s. 11 renders inadmissible the evidence of one crime (not reduced to legal certainty by a conviction) to prove the existence of another unconnected crime, even though it be cognate. Accordingly, the possession by an accused person of a number of documents suspected to be forged is no evidence to prove that he has forged the particular document, with the forgery of which he is charged. Per West, J.—Where a person charges another with having forged a promissory note, and denies having ever executed any promissory note at all, the evidence that a note similar to the one alleged to be forged was, in fact, executed by that person, is not admissible, nor even would a judgment founded upon such note be so (ss. 43 and 153 of the Evidence Act).—REG. v. PARBHUDAS AMBARAM, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 90. [Melvill and West, JJ. Jan. 2, 1874.]

When the document was presented, a witness was called to prove the identity of the thumb-mark of the person who alleged that he was the executant of the document, taken at the Registration Office with an admitted thumb-mark of the accused F. Held that, though a comparison of thumb-mark is admissible in law, it can be made only by the Court; no evidence as to the identity of thumb-marks can be given by a witness.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles, is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles of which he was in possession to be stolen.

(b.)† A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a counterfeit coin which, at the time when he delivered it, he knew to be counterfeit:

The fact that, at the time of its delivery, A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin, is relevant.

The fact that A had been previously convicted of delivering to another person as genuine a counterfeit coin, knowing it to be counterfeit, is relevant.‡

The facts that the dog had previously bitten X, Y, and Z, and that they had made complaints to B, are relevant.

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person is relevant as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person

(e) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B.

The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill-will on the part of A towards B, is relevant, as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question.

The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B.

(f.) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B, being induced to trust C, who was insolvent, suffered loss:

The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent, C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him, is relevant, as showing that A made the representation in good faith.

(g) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B upon a house of which A is owner by the order of C, a contractor.

A's defence is that B's contract was with C

The fact that A paid C for the work in question is relevant as proving that A did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's own account, and not as agent for A.

(h.) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found, and the question is whether, when he appropriated it, he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found:

The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was, is relevant, as showing that A did not, in good faith, believe that the real owner of the property could not be found.

The fact that A knew, or had reason to believe, that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who had heard of the loss of the property, and wished to set up a false claim to it, is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith.

The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage is relevant.

The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let to hire is irrelevant.

(o.) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead.

The fact that A, on other occasions, shot at B, is relevant, as showing his intention to shoot B.

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant.

Rulings

An accused, in custody at the time, made to a Magistrate in Calcutta, in the course of a police-investigation held in Calcutta, a statement confessing that he had murdered his father. The accused spoke and understood English, and the Magistrate questioned him in English, and was answered sometimes in English and sometimes in Bengali: whenever the answers were given in English, they were so taken down; when in Bengali, they were written down in English, and read over to the accused in that language, who accepted the English as being the meaning of that which he had stated, and signed the document in the presence of the Magistrate, who affixed the usual certificate thereto. In taking this confession, the Magistrate purported to have acted under ss. 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code. At the trial, subsequently to the admission of the confession in evidence under s. 80 of the Evidence Act, the Magistrate was called as witness, and deposed to the above facts, with reference to the language in which the confession was taken, and the mode in which it was recorded. Held, on a reference to a Full Bench as to whether the confession was inadmissible in evidence by reason of some of the answers having been given in Bengali, but recorded in English, that the provisions of s. 164 of the Code had no application to statements taken in the couse of a police-investigation made in the town of Calcutta, and that consequently ss 364 and 533 had no application. Held, nevertheless, that the document was properly admitted upon the evidence of the Magistrate under the provisions of s. 26 of the Evidence Act. Semble.—That the provisions of s. 164, as read with s. 364, would not be complied with where answers made by an accused to a Magistrate in one language are taken down in another, unless it could be shown that it was impracticable to have taken down the answers in the language in which they were given; and further, that there would be grave doubt if such a defect could be cured by s. 533.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NILMADHUB MITTER I. L. R., 15 Cal. 595. [Petheram, C. J., and Wilson, Pigot, O'Kinealy, and Ghose, JJ. June 7 1888.]

2. When a Deputy Magistrate was deputed by the District Magistrate under s. 159 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882) to hold an investigation into a case of murder, and recorded the statements of the accused persons, held that the statements were rightly rejected as inadmissible. The rule laid down in s. 21 of the Evidence Act must be taken subject to the special provisions relating to confessions and statements of accused persons enacted in ss. 24, 25, and 26 of the Evidence Act, and ss. 164 and 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Were it otherwise confessions and statements of accused persons not recorded in accordance with the requirements of ss. 164 and 364 of the Code might be proved as admissions by the accused and the wholesome provisions elaborately laid down in those two sections practically reduced to a nullity. Nor can s. 533 of the Code be construed to favour that view. Under that section when a confession or other statement of an accused person is duly made in accordance with the provisions of law but in the recording of it, those provisions have not been fully complied with, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the confession or other statement was duly made. The defect which the section is intended to cure is not one of substance, but of form only. Queen-Empress v. Viran I. L. R. 9 Mad 224) and Jai Narayan Rai v. Queen-Empress (I. L. R., 17 Cal 862) followed. The statements having been recorded by a Magistrate, not being a police-officer, in the course of an investigation under Ch. XIV. of the Code, the provisions of s. 164 must be observed. The statements contemplated by that section should be recorded in the manner prescribed for recording evidence, and confessions must be recorded in the manner provided by s 364. Ss. 355 to 363, which deal with the mode of recording evidence, can only relate to the statements of witnesses, while s 364 deals with all statements made by accused persons, whether amounting to confessions or not. The reason that s 164 provides only for the recording of that class of statements of an accused, which are, or purport to be, confessions, is that the section relates to a stage of the case, namely, the police-investigation stage, at which statements of the accused, which do not amount to confessions, and which are elicited by examination, are not intended to be obtained. Ss 209 and 342 of the Code are the only provisions authorizing the examination of the accused by the Magistrate. Empress v. Maika (I. L. R., 2 Bom. 643) and Queen-Empress v. Viran (I. L. R., 9 Mad 224) followed. It is improper to attempt to make an accused person, before any evidence is required, confess his guilt and admit facts that may go to incriminate him. In re Chimbash Ghose (1 C. L. R 436) and Queen v. Virabhadra (1 Mad H. C. R. 199) followed. If these statements are confessions they are clearly inadmissible under s. 164, as the appended certificate does not show they were voluntarily made, or that the Magistrate enquired whether they were so made: while the nature of the questions put indicates that they were not so made. And if they are statements other than confessions under s 364 they are equally inadmissible as having been made before the case reached the stage at which the examination of the accused is authorized.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BHAIRAB CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY, 2 C. W. N. 702. [Maclean and Banerji, JJ. Aug. 3, 1898.]

When oral admissions as to contents of documents are relevant.

22. Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under the rules hereinafter contained or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question.

Admissions in civil cases when relevant.

23. In civil cases no admission is relevant, if it is made either upon an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given, or under circumstances from which the Court can infer that the parties agreed together that evidence of it should not be given.

Explanation.—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney, or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give evidence under section 126.

24. A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement,* threat, or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority,† and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds, which would appear to him reasonable, for supposing that, by making it, he would gain any advantage, or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him.

Confession caused by inducement, threat, or promise, when irrelevant in criminal proceeding.

Rulings.

1. A Magistrate acts without due discretion when, as a prosecutor, he holds out promises to prisoners as an inducement to them to confess.—QUEEN v. RAMDHUN SING, 1 W. R. 24. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Nov. 12, 1864.]

2. A prisoner, being arrested on a charge of dacoity, made a full confession; and a promise of pardon was made to him. He then made a statement confirming his previous confession. But, without fulfilling the condition under which pardon was tendered, he escaped from hajat, and had very lately been apprehended. It was held that the statement made under the promise of pardon is no evidence against the prisoner.—QUEEN v. RADHA NATH DOSADH, 8 W. R. 53. [Kemp, J. July 29, 1867.]

3. W, a travelling auditor in the service of the G. I. P. Railway Company, having discovered defalcations in the accounts of the prisoner, who was a booking clerk of the Company, went to him and told him "he had better pay the money than go to jail," and added that "it would be better for him to tell the truth," after which the prisoner was brought before the Traffic Manager, in whose presence he signed a receipt for, and admitted having received, a sum of Rs 826-8. The prisoner was subsequently put on his trial for criminal breach of trust as a servant in respect of this and of other sums. Held that the words used by W, the travelling auditor, constituted an inducement to the prisoner to confess, and that W was a person in authority within the meaning of s. 24 of the Evidence Act, and that the receipt signed by the prisoner was therefore not admissible in evidence on his trial. Held also (Bayley J., dissentiente) that the High Court, in considering a point of law reserved under cl. 80 of the Letters Patent, where it is of opinion that evidence has been improperly admitted as to one of two heads of charge of which a prisoner stands convicted (the two heads of charge relating to distinct and separate offences), and that the conviction on such head of charge is bad, has power to review the whole case, and, if it appears that the evidence improperly admitted could not reasonably be supposed to have influenced the jury as to the latter head of charge, ought not to set aside the conviction on that head of charge, but should proceed to pass judgment and sentence on it. Semble.—S. 167 of the Evidence Act applies to criminal trials by jury in the High Court.—REG. v. NAVROJI DADABHAI, 9 Bom. H. C. R. 358. Sargent, Offg. C.J., and Bayley and Green, JJ. Oct. 8, 1872.]

4. The prisoner was tried for wounding with intent to murder, and wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The crime was committed on the high seas on a ship on which the prisoner was a seaman. The Standing Counsel having proved that the master of the ship had sailed from Calcutta and could not be found, tendered, under ss. 33 and 80 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) his deposition before the committing Magistrate. The deposition contained an admission alleged to have been made to the deponent by the prisoner when in custody. Phear, J., refused to allow this, as the admission was stated to have been made immediately after the prisoner with others had been threatened by the witness, to whom the statement was made, with a loaded rifle. It was immaterial that the threat was not for the purpose of extorting the confession, but in order to suppress an attempt at mutiny.—QUEEN v. HICKS, 10 B. L. R. Ap. 1. [Phear, J. Dec. 7, 1872.]

5. In the absence of evidence that a confession of an accused person has been induced by illegal pressure, it is not to be presumed that such confession was so induced. According to s. 24 of the Evidence Act, a confession is inadmissible only if the Court considers it to have been induced by illegal pressure. Where the Sessions Judge did not consider a confession to have been so induced, the High Court, upon a reference under s. 263 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, held it to have been properly admitted, and, finding it to be full and clear, and supported by reliable evidence, acted upon it by convicting the person who made it, notwithstanding his retraction of it in the Court of Session, and his being found not guilty by the jury.—REG. v. BALVANT PENDHARKAR, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 137. [Nanabhai Haridas and Larpent, JJ. July 9, 1874.]

6. Where more persons than one are jointly tried for the same offence, the confession made by one of them, if admissible in evidence at all, should be taken into consideration against all the accused, and not against the person alone who made it The circumstances which will render a confession objected to under ss. 24-26 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) admissible in evidence discussed — EMPRESS v. RAMA BIRAPA, I. L. R., 3 Bom 12. [West and Pinhey, JJ. Aug 1, 1878.]

7. Where a pardon was tendered by the Magistrate to a person supposed to have been concerned with other persons in offences none of which were exclusively triable by the Court of Session, and such person was examined as a witness in the case, held that, the tender of pardon to such person not being warranted by s. 347 of Act X of 1872, he could not legally be examined on oath, and his evidence was inadmissible Held also, that the statement made by such person was irrelevant and inadmissible as a confession with reference to s. 344 of Act X of 1872 and s. 24 of Act I of 1872 — EMPRESS v. ASHGAR ALI, I. L. R., 2 All. 260. [Pearson and Oldfield, JJ. April 10, 1879.]

8. A confession does not become irrelevant merely because the memorandum required by law to be attached thereon by the Magistrate taking it has not been written in the exact form prescribed.—EMPRESS v. BHAIRON SINGH, I. L. R., 3 All. 338. [Pearson, J. Nov. 27, 1880.]

9. The matter before a "panchayat" was whether M and K had murdered B, and thereby disqualified themselves from further intercourse with the rest of their brotherhood. M and B made certain statements before the panchayat, which it was afterwards sought to prove against them on their trial for the murder of B as confessions corroborating the evidence of an approver. The witnesses called to prove these "confessions" did not state specifically what was said by M and K before the panchayat One witness, a member of the panchayat, said: "M confessed, and K acquiesced." Another witness, also a member of the panchayat, said: "M and K were taxed with taking B's house, upon which both admitted having murdered him." The same witness also said: "The admissions were not taken down." It appeared that it was not till at the sixth meeting of the panchayat, and when M and K were threatened with excommunication from caste for life, that they made such statements. Held that, if the statements attributed to M and K had been actually made and assented to, and this fact had been duly proved, the provisions of s. 24 of Act I. of 1872 could not be pleaded against the admissibility on the ground that such statements had been caused by such threat, for the members of the panchayat were not in authority over M and K within the meaning of that section, nor was there any threat made having reference to any charge against them. The statements, however, could not be accepted as sufficient in themselves to corroborate the evidence of the approver, or to support the conviction of M and K for the murder of B. The statements were in general terms, and represented only the impression conveyed by what might have been said to the mind of the witnesses It was always essential that the Court should know, as nearly as possible, what were the words used by the supposed confessors, and what were the questions or matters in regard to which they were said It might have been that the words ascribed to M and K, taken with the questions put and the exact subject-matter of the inquiry did not amount to a confession of the guilt believed by the hearers to have been confessed.—EMPRESS v. MOHAN LAL, I. L. R., 4 All. 46. [Spankie and Tyrrell, JJ. May 25, 1881.]

10. A Deputy Magistrate, before taking down a statement from a person brought before him by the police, noted on the paper on which he was about to take down the statement the following words, which, after excluding the police-officers from his presence, he had verbally addressed to the accused: "After excluding from my presence the police-officers who brought him, I warned the accused that what he would say would go as evidence against him. so he had better tell the truth." Held that the use of such language was calculated to hold out an inducement to the prisoner to confess, and that such a confession was therefore inadmissible in evidence against him —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. UZEER, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 775. [McDonell and Field, JJ. May 16, 1884.]

11. Two persons, T and U, were charged with the murder of U's husband, and in the course of the police enquiry made certain statements to the police. They were then

S 25. sent up by the police to a Deputy Magistrate for enquiry. J made three statements on the 28th of February, the 1st of March, and the 9th of March 1894 respectively, two of which were confessions, the third being a withdrawal of such confessions. U also made two statements on the 2nd and 9th of March, the first of which was a confession, and the second a withdrawal thereof. On the 20th of April U was tendered a pardon, and was thereafter treated as an approver, in which capacity she gave evidence against J. J was then committed to the Court of Session to take his trial, U being sent up as an approver. In the Sessions Court U resiled from her deposition before the committing Magistrate, and was then and there treated as an accused person, and placed on her trial with the other accused, and the deposition aforesaid was put in as evidence. Both accused were convicted mainly on their confessions, J of murder, and U of abetment of murder. Held that the conviction of U was bad, the Court of Session having had no jurisdiction to try her, as she was never committed to that Court by any competent Magistrate. Held that the conviction of J was also bad—(1) because U's statement to the police was not admissible in evidence; (2) because her statements on the 2nd and 9th of March were not, under the circumstances, admissible in evidence, as she was not being legally tried jointly with him for the same offence; (3) that her deposition on the 24th of April was not admissible in evidence, because, apart from other reasons, J had no opportunity to cross-examine her; (4) because J's confession, under the circumstances, was not a free and voluntary admission of guilt. Held, on the whole case, that, independently of the aforesaid statements and confessions, there was not sufficient evidence to justify the conviction. Queen-Empress v. Rama Tevan (I. L. R., 15 Mad. 352) commented on.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JAGAT CHANDRA MALI, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 50. [Beverley and Banerjee, JJ. July 17, 1894.]

Confession to police-officer not to be proved.

25. No confession made to a police-officer* shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence.

Rulings.

1. The following extract from the First Report of the Indian Law Commissioners shows the reasons which prompted the Legislature in enacting ss. 25 and 26: "The police in the provinces of Bengal are armed with very extensive powers. They are prohibited from inquiring into cases of a petty nature; but complaints in cases of the more serious offences are usually laid before the police-daroga, who is authorized to examine the complainant, to issue process of arrest, to summon witnesses, to examine the accused, and to forward the case to the Magistrate, or submit a report of his proceedings, according as the evidence may, in his judgment, warrant the one or the other course. The evidence taken by the Parliamentary Committees on Indian Affairs during the sessions of 1852 and 1853, and other papers which have been brought to our notice, abundantly show that the powers of the police are often abused for purposes of extortion and oppression; and we have considered whether the powers now exercised by the police might not be greatly abridged. We have arrived at the conclusion that, considering the extensive jurisdiction of the Magistrate, the facilities which exist for the escape of parties concerned in serious crimes, and the necessity for the immediate adoption in many cases of the most prompt and energetic measures, it is requisite to arm the police with some such powers as they now possess; and we have accordingly adopted many of the provisions of the Bengal Code on this head. In one material point we propose a change in the duties of the police. By the existing law, the daroga or other police-officer presiding at an enquiry into a crime committed within his division is required, upon the apprehension of the accused, to question him fully regarding the whole of the circumstances of the case and the persons concerned in the commission of the crime, and, if any property may have been stolen or plundered, the person in possession of such property, or the place where it has been deposited. In the event of the accused making a free and voluntary confession, it is to be immediately written down. Then follow other provisions for preventing any species of compulsion or maltreatment with a view to extort a confession or procure information. But we are informed, and this information is corroborated by the evidence we have examined, that, in spite of this qualification as to the character of the confession, confessions are frequently ex-

* In s 25, as in force in Upper Burma, the words "who is not a Magistrate," shall be deemed to have been inserted after "police-officer" [see the Upper Burma Laws Act (XX. of 1886), s 7 (1) (d).] As to statement made to a police-officer investigating a case, see the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), ss. 161 and 162.

torted or fabricated. A police-officer, on receiving intimation of the occurrence of a dacoity or other offence of a serious character, failing to discover the perpetrators of the offence, often endeavours to secure himself against any charge of supineness or neglect by getting up a case against parties whose circumstances or characters are such as are likely to obtain credit for an accusation of the kind against them. This is not unfrequently done by extorting or fabricating false confessions; and, when this step is once taken, there is, of course, impunity for the real offenders, and a great encouragement to crime. The daroga is henceforth committed to the direction he has given to the case; and it is his object to prevent a discovery of the truth and the apprehension of the guilty parties, who, as far as the police are concerned, are now perfectly safe. We are persuaded that any provisions to correct the exercise of this power by the police will be futile; and we accordingly propose to remedy the evil, as far as possible, by the adoption of a rule prohibiting any examination whatever of any accused party by the police, the result of which is to constitute a written document. This, of course, will not prevent a police officer from receiving any information which any one may voluntarily offer to him; but the police will not be permitted to put upon record any statement made by a party accused of an offence

2. A police-officer acts improperly and illegally in offering any inducement to an accused person to make any disclosure or confession. No part of his evidence as to the discovery of facts in consequence of such confession is legally admissible. Remarks to the effect that the prisoner was a person of wealth and influence, and had prevented truth from appearing, ought not, unless established in evidence, to find a place in a judgment.—QUEEN v. DHURUM DUTT OJHA, 8 W. R. 13. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. June 13, 1867.]

3. An admission obtained from a prisoner by persuasion and promises of immunity by the police ought not to be received in evidence, as being in direct contravention of s. 146, Code of Criminal Procedure. The deposition of the police-officer, moreover, should be taken before the admission can at all be used against the prisoner under s. 150, Code of Criminal Procedure. It must be proved that the prisoner received or retained plundered property, knowing it to be plundered property, before he can be convicted under s. 412 of the Penal Code.—In re BISHOO MANJEE, 9 W. R. 16. [Jackson and Mitter, JJ. Feb. 12, 1868.]

4. G D presented a Government promissory note at the Bank of Bengal, bearing a forged endorsement, and was arrested. A police-constable asked N if he knew G D. N replied that he knew him as a common man. The police-constable then asked N if he knew anything about the note. N replied that he did not. No threat or inducement was held out, nor was any caution administered to N. Held that the statement made by N in answer to the questions of the police-constable was admissible. N was afterwards brought before R, the Deputy Magistrate of Serampore, who told him, before any depositions were taken, that he (N) was charged with having received a stolen promissory note, and R asked him if he wished to say anything. N replying in the affirmative, R, without administering any caution to him, asked him how or where he had obtained the note, and other questions, the answers to which were taken down. N was again brought up before R, and was asked whether a promissory note then produced was one he had delivered to G D to take to the Bank. R told N that he was not bound to answer the question; but that, if he objected to answer, that would also be noted. R committed N to take his trial before the High Court. Held that on the trial the answers of N to the questions of R, whether R acted as a Justice of the Peace for Bengal, or as a Magistrate, were admissible.—QUEEN v. NABADWIP CHANDRA GOSWAMI, 15 W. R. 71n.; 1 B. L. R., O Cr., 15 [Peacock, C.J., and Norman and Markby, JJ. April 7, 8, 1868.]

5. The accused confessed to a police-constable, on being assured by him that nothing would happen to her, that she had killed her new-born child, and had buried it in the enclosure of her house. This statement led to the discovery of some bones of the head of an infant, a stone stained with blood, and a knife, with which stone and knife she said that she had killed her child. Before the committing Magistrate she made the same statement. In her trial before the Sessions Judge, she admitted the birth of the child. She stated that it would not cry, and that she buried it, not knowing whether it was alive or dead. She also stated that the police-constable had pressed and threatened her, and told her that, if she confessed the truth, nothing would happen to her. She denied having killed the child with the stone and sickle, and said that she had merely pressed it on the ground, and then buried it. There was no evidence to show that the child was born alive. Held that the confession before the Magistrate was irrelevant, and that the Court was not prepared to say that the confession made before the Sessions Judge was made after the impression caused by the promise of the police-constable had been fully removed; and that, looking at the fact that a promise of safety

S. 25. had been made, that the confession was, even if accepted, of a limited character, that there was nothing to show that the child was born alive, and, considering that, if the child was born dead, the accused might, under fear of exposure and disgrace, have wished to conceal the body, the accused must be acquitted of murder.—QUEEN v. MUSSUMAT LUCHOO, 5 N.-W. P. 86. [Spankie, J. April 5, 1873.]

6. The prisoner, on his arrest, made a statement in the nature of a confession, which was reduced into writing by one of the inspectors in whose custody the prisoner was, and subsequently signed and acknowledged by the prisoner in the presence of the Deputy Commissioner of Police at the police office, the Deputy Commissioner receiving and attesting the statement in his capacity of Magistrate and Justice of the Peace. At the trial of the prisoner at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court, this statement was tendered in evidence against him, and admitted by the Judge, who overruled an objection on behalf of the prisoner that, under s. 25 of the Evidence Act, it was inadmissible. On a case certified by the Advocate-General under cl 26 of the Letters Patent, held that the confession was, under s. 25 of the Evidence Act, not admissible in evidence Per Garth, C.J.: S. 26 of the Evidence Act is not to be read as qualifying the plain meaning of s. 25 In construing s. 25 the term "police-officer" is not to be read in a technical sense, but in its more comprehensive and popular meaning Per Curiam: S 167 of the Evidence Act applies as well to criminal as to civil cases Per Garth, C.J. (Pontifex, J., doubting): The Court which under that section is to decide upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support the conviction is, in a case coming before the Court under s 26 of the Letters Patent, the Court of Review, and not the Court below. Such decision is to be come to on being informed, by the Judge's notes, and, if necessary, by the Judge himself, of the evidence adduced at the trial. Per Curiam: Apart from s 167, the Court has power, in a case under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent, to review the whole case on the merits, and affirm or quash the conviction.—REG. v. HURRIBOLE CHUNDER GHOSE, I. L. R., 1 Cal 207; 25 W. R 86. [Garth, C.J., and Pontifex, J. Mar. 21 and April 26, 1876.]

7. S. 25 of the Evidence Act does not preclude one accused person from proving a confession made to a police-officer by another accused person tried jointly with him Such a confession is not to be received or treated as evidence against the person making it, but simply as evidence on behalf of the other. The High Court, on a point of law as to the admissibility of rejected evidence, reserved under cl. 25 of the Letters Patent, 1865, and s. 101 of the High Court's Criminal Procedure Act, has power to review the whole case, and determine whether the admission of the rejected evidence would have affected the result of the trial; and a conviction should not be reversed unless the admission of the rejected evidence ought to have varied the result of the trial (Evidence Act, s. 167).—EMPRESS v. PITAMBER JINA, I. L. R., 2 Bom. 61. [Westropp, C.J., and Sargent and Atkinson, JJ. July 7, 1877.]

8. Under s. 25 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), a confession made to a police-officer is inadmissible in evidence except so far as is provided by s. 27. It is immaterial whether such police-officer be the officer investigating the case—the fact that such person is a police-officer invalidates a confession.—IN THE MATTER OF HIRAN MIYA alias ABDOOL WAHID, 1 C. L. R. 21. [Ainslie and McDonell, JJ. July 12, 1877.]

9. A statement made to a police-officer by an accused person while in the custody of the police, although intended to be made in self-exculpation, and not as a confession, may be nevertheless an admission of a criminating circumstance, and, if so, under ss. 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), it cannot be proved against the accused. After excluding evidence improperly admitted and put before the jury, the High Court found that the remaining evidence was not of such a character that a conviction might reasonably be based upon it. It accordingly reversed the conviction and sentence of the accused, declining to order his re-trial.—EMPRESS v. PANDHARINATH, I. L. R., 6 Bom. 34. [Melvill and Pinhey, JJ. Oct. 5, 1881.]

10. An admission made by an accused person to a police officer before arrest is admissible in evidence.—EMPRESS v. DABEE PERSHAD, I. L. R., 6 Cal. 530; 7 C. L. R. 451. [Prinsep, J. Jan. 29, 1881.]

11. P, accused of the murder of a girl, gave to a police-officer a knife, saying it was the weapon with which he had committed the murder. He also said that he had thrown down the girl's anklets at the scene of the murder, and would point them out. On the following day he accompanied the police-officer to the place where the girl's body had been found, and pointed out the anklets. Held that such statements, being confessions made to a police-officer, whereby no fact was discovered, could not be proved against P. Observations on the use of confessions made to police-officers. Reg. v. Jora Hasji (11 Bom. H. C. R. 242) and Empress v Rama Birapa (I. L. 12. A Village-Magistrate is not a police-officer, and therefore a confession made to a Village-Magistrate is not inadmissible in evidence by reason of s. 25 of the Evidence Act.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SAMA PAPI, I. L. R., 7 Mad. 287. [Turner, C.J. and Hutchins, J. Dec 17, 1883.]

13. Statements made to the police by accused persons as to the ownership of property, which is the subject-matter of the proceedings against them, although inadmissible as evidence against them at the trial for the offence with which they are charged, are admissible as evidence with regard to the ownership of the property in an inquiry held by the Magistrate under s 523 of the Criminal Procedure Code. An order, after trial, made by a Criminal Court for the restoration of property under s. 517 of the Criminal Procedure Code is conclusive as to the immediate right to possession. Where an order has to be made under s. 523, the Magistrate may, in the inquiry, proceed on such evidence as is available, and make an order for handing the property to the persons he thinks entitled. This does not conclude the right of any person. The real owner may proceed against the holder of the articles or for damages as for conversion. The High Court declined to interfere with an order made by a Magistrate under s. 523 of the Criminal Procedure Code for the delivery of property where the Magistrate made such order upon the mere evidence of a confession of the accused to the police that the property was stolen from the adjudged owner.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TRIBHOVAN MANEKCHAND, I. L. R, 9 Bom. 131. [West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Oct. 10, 1884.]

14. A policeman, on being cross-examined, stated that, when he arrested the prisoner, the prisoner said to him, "Some Chinamen, at the time of the occurrence, came out with hatchets." In re-examination the policeman so far altered the words stated to have been used by the prisoner as to substitute, for the words at the time of the occurrence, the words at the time, and, on being asked if the prisoner had explained "what time," answered, "He said, 'At the time I struck the deceased.'" Counsel for the prisoner interposed, and objected to the evidence. The Standing Counsel contended that he was entitled to clear up a matter which had been left in doubt by the cross-examination Held that the evidence could not be given.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MATHEWS, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 1022. [Field, J. July 21, 1884.]

15. B and R, accused of offences under s. 414 of the Penal Code, gave information to the police which led to the discovery of the stolen property. This information was to the effect that the accused had stolen a cow and calf, and sold them to a particular person at a particular place. Held by the Full Bench (Mahmood, J., dissenting) that s 27 of the Evidence Act is a proviso, not only to s. 26, but also to s 25; and that, therefore, so much of the information given by the accused to the police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, as related distinctly to the facts thereby discovered, might be proved Empress v. Kaurpala (Weekly Notes, 1882, p. 225) dissented from. Per Mahmood, J., that s 27 of the Indian Evidence Act is not a proviso to s. 25, but only to s. 26; and that, therefore, the statements in question were wholly inadmissible in evidence. Empress v. Pancham (I. L. R., 4 All. 198) referred to by Straight, Offg. C.J., and Mahmood, J. Per Straight, Offg. C J., that, where a statement is being detailed by a constable as having been made by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a certain fact, the strictest precision should be enjoined on the witness, so that there may be no room for mistake or misunderstanding. Observations by Straight, Offg. C.J., as to the mode in which the testimony of a witness should be recorded in cases where two persons are being tried. Observations by Straight, Offg. C.J., and Duthoit, J., upon the nature of confessions by accused persons in India, and the circumstances in which such confessions are made.—EMPRESS v. BABU LAL, I. L. R., 6 All. 509. [Straight, Offg. C J., and Oldfield, Brodhurst, Mahmood, and Duthoit, JJ. June 30, 1884.]

16. The accused were charged with theft of some jwari. During the police-investigation they admitted before the police that they had taken the grain, and concealed it in a jar, which they forthwith produced. The identity of the jwari recovered with that stolen was not proved to the satisfaction of the trying Magistrate except by these admissions, and upon these admissions they were convicted of theft. Held that, as the prisoners themselves produced the jwari, it was by their own act, and not from any information given by them, that the discovery took place. S. 27 of the Evidence Act, therefore, did not apply; and, though the fact of the production of the property might be proved, the accompanying confession made to the police was inadmissible in evidence.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KAMALIA, I. L. R., 10 Bom. 595. [Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Mar. 19, 1886.]

17. Instances of statements made by an accused person to a police-officer held to be admissible and inadmissible in evidence against such accused person. A medical man who has not seen a corpse which has been subjected to a post-mortem examination, and who is called to corroborate the opinion of the medical man who made such post-mortem examination, and who has stated what he considered was the cause of death, is in a position to give evidence of his opinion as an expert. The proper mode of eliciting such opinion is to put the signs observed at the post-mortem to the witness, and to ask what, in his opinion, was the cause of death on the hypothesis that those signs were really present and observed.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MEHER ALI MULLICK, I. L. R., 15 Cal. 589. [Wilson, J. May 11 1888.]

18. A statement made to a police-officer by an accused person while in the custody of the police, if it is an admission of a criminating circumstance, cannot be used in evidence under ss. 25 and 26 of the Indian Evidence Act (I. of 1872). The action of a spy and informer in suggesting and initiating a criminal offence is itself an offence, the act not being excused or justified by any exception in the Indian Penal Code, or by the doctrine which distinguishes the spy from the accomplice. But the act of a detective in supplying marked money for the detection of a crime cannot be treated as that of an accomplice. Distinction between a spy and an accomplice pointed out, Rex v. Despard (28 State Trials 489), Reg. v. Mullins (3 Cox C. C. 526), Queen-Empress v. Mona (I. L. R., 16 Bom. 661), referred to and followed.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JAVECHARAM, I. L. R., 19 Bom. 363. [Jardine and Ranade, JJ. April 2, 1894.]

The provisions of s. 25 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), which declare that no confession made to a police-officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence, applies to every police officer, and is not to be restricted to officers of the regular police-force.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v SALEMUDDIN SHEIK, I. L. R., 26 Cal. 569. [Prinsep and Stanley, JJ. March 14, 1899.]

Confession by accused while in custody of police not to be proved against him.

26. No confession made by any person whilst he is in the custody of a police officer, unless it be made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be proved as against such person.

*Explanation.—In this section "Magistrate" does not include the head of a village discharging magisterial functions in the Presidency of Fort St. George or in Burma or elsewhere, unless such head man is a Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882.†

Rulings.

1. The accused confessed to a police-constable, on being assured by him that nothing would happen to her, that she had killed her new-born child, and had buried it in the enclosure of her house. This statement led to the discovery of some bones of the head of an infant, a stone stained with blood, and a knife, with which stone and knife she said that she had killed her child. Before the committing Magistrate she made the same statement. In her trial before the Sessions Judge she admitted the birth of the child. She stated that it did not cry and that she buried it, not knowing whether it was alive or dead. She also stated that the police-constable had pressed and threatened her, and told her that, if she confessed the truth, nothing would happen to her. She denied having killed the child with the stone and sickle, and said that she had merely pressed it on the ground, and then buried it. There was no evidence to show that the child was born alive. Held that the confession before the Magistrate was irrelevant, and that the Court was not prepared to say that the confession made before the Sessions Judge was made after the impression caused by the promise of the police-constable had been fully removed, and that, looking at the fact that a promise of safety had been made, that the confession was, even if accepted, of a limited character, that there was nothing to show that the child was born alive, and, considering that, if the child was born dead, the accused might, under fear of exposure and disgrace, have wished to conceal the body, the accused must be acquitted of murder.—QUEEN v. MUSSUMAT LUCHOO, 5 N.-W. P. 86. [Spankie, J. April 5, 1873.]

* This explanation has been added to s. 26 by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act (III of 1891), s. 3.

† Act X. of 1882. But see now the new Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898).

2. When a fact is discovered in consequence of information received from one of several persons charged with an offence, and when others give like information, the fact should not be treated as discovered from the information of them all. It should be deposed that a particular fact has been discovered from the information of A B, and this will let in so much of the information as relates distinctly to the information therein discovered.—QUEEN v. RAM CHURN CHUNG, 24 W. R. 36. [Jackson and McDonell, JJ. Aug. 11, 1875.]

3. Money obtained upon forged money-orders is not "stolen property" within the definition thereof given in the Penal Code, s. 410. A statement which a man in the custody of the police volunteers to one in the position of the Magistrate can be used as evidence against the man who makes it —QUEEN v. MON MOHUN ROY, 24 W. R. 33 [Birch and Lawford, JJ. July 26, 1875.]

4. A statement made to a police-officer by an accused person while in the custody of the police, although intended to be made in self-exculpation, and not as a confession, may be nevertheless an admission of a criminating circumstance, and, if so, under ss. 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) it cannot be proved against the accused. After excluding evidence improperly admitted and put before the jury, the High Court found that the remaining evidence was not of such a character that a conviction might reasonably be based upon it. It accordingly reversed the conviction and sentence of the accused, declining to order his re-trial.—EMPRESS v. PANDHARINATH, I. L. R., 6 Bom. 34. [Melvill and Pinhey, JJ. Oct. 5, 1881.]

5. The word "confession," as used in the sections of the Evidence Act relating to confessions, must not be construed as including a mere inculpatory admission which falls short of being an admission of guilt.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JAGROP, I. L. R., 7 All. 646. [Straight, J. Mar. 21, 1885.]

6. Where a prisoner was convicted of murder on a confession, retracted at the trial, corroborated by depositions read under s. 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and also retracted at the trial, held that the prisoner should not have been convicted on such evidence.—QUEEN EMPRESS v. BHARMAPPA, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 123. [Collins, C.J., and Parker, J. Oct. 24, 1888.]

7. A person under arrest on a charge of murder was taken in a tonga from the place where the alleged offence was committed to Godhra. A friend drove with her in the tonga, and a mounted policeman rode in front. In the course of the journey, the policeman left the tonga, and went to a neighbouring village to procure a fresh horse, the tonga meanwhile proceeding slowly along the road for some miles without any escort. In the absence of the policeman, the accused made a communication to her friend with reference to the alleged offence. At the trial it was proposed to ask what the prisoner had said, on the ground that she was not then in custody, and that s. 26 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) did not apply. Held that, notwithstanding the temporary absence of the policeman, the accused was still in custody, and the question must be disallowed.—EMPRESS v. LESTER, I. L. R., 20 Bom. 165. [Jardine, C.J. July 1, 1895.]

8. The custody of the keeper of a jail in a Native State, who is not a police-officer, does not become that of a police-officer merely because his subordinates, the warders of the jail, are members of the police-force of that State. In the absence of any suggestion of a close custody inside the jail, such as may possibly occur when an accused person is watched and guarded by a police-officer investigating an offence, s. 26 of the Indian Evidence Act (I. of 1872) does not exclude such a jailor from giving evidence of what the accused told him while in jail.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TATYA, I. A confession made by a prisoner while in police-custody to a First-class Magistrate of the Native State of Muli in Kathiawar, and duly recorded by such Magistrate in the manner prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882), is admissible in evidence. Queen-Empress v. Sundar Singh (I. 27. Provided that, when any fact is deposed to as discovered in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence in the custody of a police-officer, so much of such information, whether it amounts to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, may be proved.

How much of information received from accused may be proved.

1. To make the confession of a prisoner, not uttered in the presence of a Magistrate admissible in evidence, the fact discovered must be one which, of its own force, independently of the confession, would be admissible in evidence. Ss. 149 and 150 of the Criminal Procedure Code considered.—In re CHODA ATCHENAH, 3 Mad. H. C. R. 318 [Holloway and Ellis, JJ. Feb. 28, 1867.]

2. The accused made a confession to a police-inspector, part of which related to the concealment of certain jewels, and in consequence of the information so received, the jewels were discovered. Held that under s. 27 of the Evidence Act that part of the accused's confession which described his assault on the deceased, and her consequent death, and the way in which he became possessed of the jewels, related distinctly to the fact of the discovery of the ornaments, and might be proved against the accused.—QUEEN v. PAGARES SHAHA, 19 W. R. 51. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. April 1, 1873.]

3. Under s. 27 of the Evidence Act not every statement made by a person accused of any offence while in the custody of a police-officer, connected with the production or finding of property, is admissible. Those statements only which lead immediately to the discovery of property and in so far as they do lead to such discovery, are properly admissible. Whatever be the nature of the fact discovered, that fact must, in all cases be itself relevant to the case, and the connection between it and the statements made must have been such that that statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made, in order to render the statement admissible. Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence, and thus mediately, but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered, are not admissible. That a witness says that a plan was prepared in his presence is not a sufficient reason for admitting the plan in evidence, unless the witness also says that to his own knowledge the plan is correct.—REG. v. JORA HASJI, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 242. [West and Pinhey JJ. Dec. 3, 1874.]

4. No judicial officer dealing with the provisions of s. 27 of Act I. of 1872 should allow one word more to be deposed to by a police-officer detailing a statement made to him by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a fact, than is absolutely necessary to show how the fact that was discovered is connected with the accused, so as, in itself, to be a relevant fact against him. S. 27 was not intended to let in a confession generally, but only such particular part of it as set the person to whom it was made in motion, and led to his ascertaining the fact or facts of which he gives evidence. Empress of India v. Pancham (I. L. R., 4 All. 198), Queen-Empress v. Babu Lall (I. L. R., 6 All. 509), discussed and commented on. Thus, when a police-officer deposed that an accused had told him that he had robbed K of Rs. 48, whereof he had spent Rs. 8, and has got Rs. 40, and that he had made over the Rs. 40 to him, held that the statement, that he robbed K of Rs. 48, was not necessarily preliminary to the surrender of Rs. 40, and was inadmissible in evidence against him. When also a police-officer deposed to the fact that the accused, who was charged with murder, had stated to him that he and K had stolen some hides from C, and upon such statement he had sent for C, and recorded his information, and when it appeared that C had already informed the police of the fact of the theft, though the witness was not aware of it, held that the statement was inadmissible upon the ground that it would be most dangerous to extend the provisions of s. 27, and allow a police-officer, who is investigating a case, to prove an information received from a person accused of an offence in the custody of a police-officer, on the ground that a material fact was thereby discovered by him, when that fact was already known to another police-officer. Although, under some circumstances, a charge of murder may be sustained, when the body of the person said to have been murdered is not forthcoming, still, when that is the case, the strongest possible evidence as to the fact of the murder should be insisted on before an accused is convicted. When an accused charged with murder was alleged to have taken a boat from a place where it had been secured by its owner, and, after proceeding some distance in it, had abandoned it, and when he was charged with the theft of the boat, held that the charge was unsustainable, inasmuch as it was evidently not his intention to convert it to his own use, and make it permanently his own property, but merely to make use of it for the purpose of aiding him in escaping.—ADU SHIKDAR v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 11 Cal. 635. [Mitter and Norris, JJ. May 29, 1885.]

5. The test of the admissibility, under s. 27 of the Evidence Act, of information received from an accused person in the custody of a police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, is, "Was the fact discovered by reason of the information and how much of the information was the immediate cause of the fact discovered, and as such a relevant fact?"—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. COOMER SAHIB, I. Confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat, or promise, relevant.

28. If such a confession as is referred to in section 24 is made after the impression caused by any such inducement, threat, or promise, has, in the opinion of the Court, been fully removed, it is relevant.

29. If such a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant, merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy, or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it, or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions which he need not have answered, whatever may have been the form of those questions, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession, and that evidence of it might be given against him.

1. The prisoner was convicted of murder by the Sessions Judge, and sentenced to death, subject to confirmation by the High Court. The High Court directed the Sessions Judge to take any evidence that might be forthcoming to prove the alleged confession before the Magistrate, which as recorded, was inadmissible, not being taken as prescribed in s. 205 of the Criminal Procedure Code; and to certify the result of such inquiry and evidence to that Court. Evidence of the confession having been taken by the Sessions Judge and certified as directed, the High Court confirmed the conviction and the sentence of death.—REG. v. GANU BAPU, 2 Bom. H. C. R. 398 [Arnould, Acting C.J., and Newton and Janardan, JJ. Aug. 18, 1864.]

2. A prisoner was convicted of murder by the Sessions Court, and sentenced to death subject to the confirmation of the High Court. The High Court returned the case to the Sessions Judge in order that he should take any evidence that might be forthcoming to prove the alleged confession before the Magistrate, which, as recorded, was inadmissible, because it was not taken as prescribed in s. 205 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the result of such inquiry and evidence to be certified to that Court. The case being resumed for final disposal, the High Court remarked: "There is no evidence of what the questions were; but the witness says the confession was given freely, and was not elicited by any threats or promises. The form of the question is im-

S. 29. material, even although it assumes the prisoner's guilt. The Court alter the conviction of murder to one of culpable homicide, and sentence the prisoner to be transported for ten years "—REG. v. PEVADI BIN BASSAPA, 2 Bom. H. C. R. 397. [Couch and Newton, JJ. Mar. 16, 1864.]

3. The prisoner was convicted by the Sessions Judge of the offence of accepting a gratification as police-patel under s. 161 of the Penal Code. The examination of the prisoner before the Magistrate was not taken down in the form of question and answer, as required by s. 205 of the Criminal Procedure Code Per Curiam: 'The examination under s. 205, to be admissible as evidence under s. 366, must be taken in the form of question and answer, and certified as required in s. 205. But if it be not taken, as in the present case, the Court can order the confession to be proved by the evidence of the writer of the examination or other person who was present In the case, however, the evidence is sufficient without the inadmissible examination, and, under ss 426 and 429, the admission of the examination as evidence does not invalidate the trial and conviction."—REG v VITHOJI VALAD ABBA, 2 Bom H. C R 398. [Couch and Newton, JJ. Mar. 16. 1864.]

4. An admission of crime, when fairly made after due warning, is not admissible, simply because, at the time it was made, no formal accusation had been made against the party making it.—QUEEN v. RAM CHURN CHAMER 4 W. R. 10. [Kemp and Seton-Karr, JJ. Sep. 12, 1865.]

5. The admission of prisoners in their own statements before the Magistrate ought to be given in evidence at the trial. A Sessions Judge's note of the evidence should be sent up in a legible form.—QUEEN v. BHUGWAN DOSADH, 4 W. R 18. [Glover, J. Oct. 24, 1865.]

6. The whole, and not part, of a prisoner's confession must be taken in order to his conviction.—QUEEN v. CHOKOO KHAN, 5 W. R. 70. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. April 16, 1866.]

7. The Magistrate in his grounds of commitment, and the Sessions Judge in his conviction, should specifically note with exactness and precision the proof against each particular prisoner, and the manner in which it is supported. To give weight to confessions of prisoners recorded under s. 149, Code of Criminal Procedure, there should be a judicial record of the special circumstances under which such confessions were received by the Magistrate, showing in whose custody the prisoners were, and how far they were quite free agents. In a preliminary inquiry before a Magistrate, the evidence should be sent in as found, and not kept by the police till they have made it all complete.—QUEEN v. KODAI KAHAR, 5 W. R. 6 [Norman and Campbell JJ. Jan. 15, 1866.]

8. A prisoner may be convicted on his own uncorroborated confession.—QUEEN v. RUNJEET SENTAL, 6 W. R 73. [Loch, J. Sep. 10, 1866.]

9 The confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate, though retracted before the Judge, is admissible in evidence against the prisoner, provided the Judge be satisfied that it was voluntarily made —QUEEN v. SREEMUTTY MONGOLA 6 W. R. 81. [Kemp, J. Oct. 5, 1866.]

10 An admission by A and B that the crime charged against them was committed by C and D, and that whatever share they had in it was under compulsion, is not a confession on which any person ought to be convicted. Previous statements of witnesses on oath are not available as evidence in a subsequent trial.—QUEEN v. KRISTO MUNDUL, 7 W. R. 8. [Kemp and Markby, JJ. Jan 7, 1867.]

11. Where a wife died from a chance-kick to the spleen inflicted by her husband on provocation given by the wife, the husband not knowing that the spleen was diseased, and showing by the blow itself, and by his conduct immediately afterwards, that he had no intention or knowledge that the act was likely to cause hurt endangering human life held that the husband was guilty of an offence under ss 319 and 321 of the Penal Code and not of an offence under ss. 320 and 322 An admission by the husband in the presence of several witnesses that he had killed his wife, and that she died after receiving the kick, was held to be direct evidence against him.—QUEEN v BYSAGOO NOSHYO, 8 W. R 29 [Seton-Karr and Hobhouse JJ June 29, 1867.]

12. A prisoner's confession must be taken in its entirety. Where a prisoner confessed that he did not suspect his wife's fidelity; that he left home on business; that on his return he saw what convinced him of his wife's infidelity; and that, maddened at the sight, he killed both her and her paramour, held that he was guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and that the case was one in which he ought to be treated with lenity.—QUEEN v. SHEIKH BOODHOO, 8 W. R. 38. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. July 9, 1867.]

13. A confession before the Magistrate, though afterwards retracted before the Sessions Court, is evidence against the party making it under s. 366 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV. of 1861).—

QUEEN v. MUSSAMUT JEMA, 8 W. R. 40. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. July 16, 1867.]

14. A voluntary and genuine confession is legal and sufficient proof of guilt.—QUEEN v. JHURREE, 7 W. R. 41. [Seton-Karr, J. Mar. 11, 1867.]

15. The confessions of a prisoner in one case in which he was convicted cannot be used against him in another case, unless they are deposed to on oath either by the person who took them down, or by some one else who heard them.—MUNGER BHOOYAN, REVISION OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE CASE OF, 10 W. R. 56 [Phear and Hobhouse, JJ. Nov. 24, 1868.]

16. The properly-attested confession of a prisoner before a Magistrate is sufficient for his conviction without corroborative evidence, and notwithstanding a subsequent denial before the Sessions Court.—QUEEN v. BHUTTUN RUJWUN, 12 W. R. 49. [Glover and Mitter, JJ. Aug. 21, 1869.]

17. S. 109 of the Code of Criminal Procedure refers to cases where the confession of a prisoner has been made to the Magistrate conducting the investigation, and not to the police. It is only when properly made to the Magistrate that the confession can be used as evidence against the prisoner. The mere standing by of the Magistrate when the confession is being made to the police is not sufficient.—QUEEN v. DOMUN KAHAR, 12 W. R. 82. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. Dec. 21, 1869.]

18. A confession made to a Joint-Magistrate of a district in charge of the Sudder Sub-Division is receivable in evidence although the Joint Magistrate may not have been specially empowered under Act VIII of 1869 to receive the confession of prisoners. A confession made to a private individual may be evidence against the prisoner if proved by the person before whom the confession was made.—QUEEN v. GOPEE NATH KOLLU, 13 W. R. 69. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. May 7, 1870.]

19. It is not necessary for a Sessions Judge to read out to prisoners confessions made by them before a Magistrate, and ask them if they have any objection to the reception of these confessions. The examination of prisoners before a Magistrate is to be received in evidence, and the attestation of the Magistrate is prima-facie proof of the circumstances.—QUEEN v. MISSER SHEIKH, 14 W. R. 9. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. June 30, 1870.]

20. The words, "a Magistrate," in s. 149 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, mean "any Magistrate," and not merely "the Magistrate having jurisdiction." The practice of taking prisoners before Magistrates not having jurisdiction in the case, for the purpose of getting a confession recorded, is not generally desirable, but such a confession is legally admissible in evidence when duly proved.—REG. v. VAHALA JETHA, 7 Bom. H. C. R. 56. [Gibbs and Melvill, JJ. June 30, 1870.]

21. A Sessions Judge, after a prisoner upon his trial has pleaded what in effect amounts to a plea of not guilty is not justified in convicting the prisoner solely upon a confession made before the committing Magistrate.—QUEEN v. HURSOOKH, 2 N.-W. P. 479. [Spankie, J. Dec. 19, 1870.]

22. Although the averment on the record of a Magistrate by whom a prisoner is tried, that the accused, before making a confession, was warned that it was optional with him to answer the questions put to him or not, is on appeal conclusive as to the fact of such a warning having been given; it is not conclusive to show that such a confession has not been made under the influence of fear engendered by previous maltreatment, or is not otherwise valueless. Allegations made in a regular and proper manner before a Sessions Court on appeal, that a confession made by the accused before the Magistrate who tried the case was made under such circumstances as to preclude its admissibility in or diminish its value as evidence, should receive due attention, and be inquired into. A Sessions Court refusing to make such inquiry commits a grave error in law and procedure. Upon an inquiry which the High Court directed the Sessions Judge to make into such an allegation the prisoners were ordered to be and were solemnly affirmed, and the prosecution neither objected to the form of the order nor to the affirmation of the prisoners, and moreover cross-examined them, but objected to their evidence being used upon the return of the inquiry. It was held that the objection, though possibly good if taken in time, was too late, and that the evidence of the prisoners might be used whether the order directing them to be affirmed was correct or otherwise. Where, during such an inquiry, the Sessions Judge accorded his sanction to the prosecution for perjury of some of the witnesses who deposed on behalf of the prisoners, the High Court considered such a proceeding improper, and eminently calculated to defeat the object of the inquiry. Semble (per Lloyd and Kemball, JJ.)—A person cannot be convicted, under s. 201 of the Penal Code, of causing evidence of the commission of an offence by himself to disappear, nor can he be convicted of the abetment of such an act. Question as to the extent of the privilege of speech accorded to counsel and advocates considered. Important state-

S 29. ments made in verified petitions to the High Court, if untrue, should be contradicted on affidavit. Appointment of the Magistrate, who, in the first instance, had tried and convicted the accused, to be Crown Prosecutor to conduct an inquiry subsequently directed in the same case, censured as being unprecedented and objectionable. A public prosecutor should be without a personal interest in the cases which he conducts Prisoners should be allowed to have free converse with their vakils out of the hearing of the police officers in charge of such prisoners. It is undesirable that Magistrates whose decisions are under appeal, or who have been engaged in promoting the prosecution, or police-officers concerned in a case, should sit on the bench beside, or converse privately in Court with, the Judge who is engaged in trying prisoner's appeal. If the Appellate Judge wishes to ascertain any facts relating to the case from the Magistrate who convicted the accused, he should examine the Magistrate upon oath or solemn affirmation, in the same manner as an ordinary witness.—REG v. KASHINATH DINKAR, 8 Bom. H C R 126 [Westropp, C.J., and Lloyd. Melvill, Green, and Kemball, JJ. April 12, 1871.]

23 Points out the importance of properly recording and attesting the confessions of prisoners under s. 205 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.—QUEEN v. BHIKAREE, 15 W. R. 63 [Glover, J. April 29, 1871.]

24. A detailed confession made by an accused before a Magistrate, but retracted on the examination being read over to him in conformity with s. 205 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, does not amount to a confession, although the plea for retracting the confession viz, ill-treatment of the accused by the police, may be inquired into and found to be untrue—REG v. GARBAD BECHAR, 9 Bom. H C. R 344 [Lloyd and Kemball, JJ. Aug. 22, 1872.]

25. The words actually used by an accused, who is said to have confessed, ought to be ascertained. The Court should not accept merely the conclusions at which the witnesses deposing to a confession themselves arrived, from the answers which the accused gave to questions put by them. Where an accused makes two distinct statements—the one amounting to a confession of guilt, the other repudiating guilt—if the one statement is taken against the accused, the other also must be taken, for what it is worth, in his favour. The Court ought to weigh well the relative credibility of the two statements before it accepts the one in preference to the other. Documents which were in the record sent up by the Magistrate but which were not put in evidence before the Sessions Judge, were looked at, because they told in favour of the prisoner.—QUEEN v. SOOBJAN, 10 B. L. R. 332. [Phear and Ainslie, JJ. Jan. 14, 1873.]

26. The direction of s. 346 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, enjoining that an accused person shall sign the record of his confession, is not satisfied by the following: "Signature of A B (the accused); the handwriting of C D." Where the conviction of a person was based upon a confession thus subscribed, the High Court reversed it, and held that the Sessions Judge was bound to prevent the production of such a confession.—REG. v. DAYA ANAND, 11 Bom. H C. R. 44 [West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ Mar. 12 1874.]

27 S 122 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which requires a Magistrate to certify on a confession his belief that it was voluntarily made, does not apply to the case of a confession taken by a Magistrate, who is actually investigating the case, and examining the witnesses preparatory to commitment, but to a case where some other Magistrate takes a confession, and forwards it to the Magistrate by whom the case is inquired into or tried—QUEEN v JETOO, 23 W. R. 16 [Phear and Morris, JJ. Jan. 7, 1875.]

28. A confession not recorded according to the provisions of Act X. of 1872, s. 346, is inadmissible as evidence. — QUEEN v. KALA CHAND PAL, 24 W. R. 29. [Birch and Lawford, JJ July 28, 1875.]

29 The ordinary rule of taking confessions as a whole, and giving the accused (in the absence of other evidence against him) the benefit of any circumstance that may appear in his favour therefrom, cannot apply to confessions which are diametrically opposed to each other, but only where the more favourable view is not absolutely inconsistent with the general tenor of the confession—QUEEN v. NITYO GOPAL DASS BYRAGEE, 24 W R. 80. [Glover and Mitter, JJ Dec 21, 1875.]

30. Where a person, accused of murder, acknowledged having struck his victim, but repudiated the intention to murder, and the Sessions Judge accepted this acknowledgment as a plea of guilty, and omitted to record any further evidence, held that the Judge was bound to accept the statement of the accused as a whole, if it was taken as a confession at all Conviction for murder accordingly set aside, and new trial ordered. —QUEEN v SONADOLLAH, 25 W. R. 23. [Macpherson and Morris, JJ. Mar. 14, 1876.]

morandum that the Magistrate believed it to have been voluntarily made, but also a certificate, under s. 346 of the Code, that it was taken in the Magistrate's presence and hearing, and contains accurately the whole of the statement made by the accused person. No oral evidence can be received to prove the fact of the confession, if the confession itself be inadmissible Reg. v. Bai Ratan (10 Bom. H. C. R. 166) followed.—REG. v. SHIVYA, I L. R., 1 Bom. 219 [Melvill and West, JJ. April 5, 1876.] Dissented from in Empress v. Ramanjiyya, infra, ruling 34.

32. Where the only evidence in a Sessions trial was confessions made to a Magistrate, but subsequently retracted, and it was established that the police misconducted themselves in the search of the houses of the prisoners who confessed, and of others under trial and produced evidence which was rejected as false, it was held that the prisoners could not safely be convicted on their own statements without any corroboration.—IN THE MATTER OF SOFIRUDDEEN, 2 C. L R. 132. [Markby and Prinsep, JJ. April 28 1878.]

33 The attestation required by s 346 of the Criminal Procedure Code is unnecessary when a confession is made in Court to the officer trying the case at the time of trial — IN THE MATTER OF CHUMMAN SHAH, I L R., 3 Cal 756, 2 C L R 317. [Markby and Prinsep, JJ April 30, 1878.]

34 Where a Magistrate, in taking the confession of a prisoner under s 122 of the Criminal Procedure Code, omits to take it in writing with the formalities prescribed by s. 346 of that Code, such confession is not absolutely inadmissible in evidence. Evidence may be taken to show that the prisoner duly made the statement recorded Reg. v Shivya (I L. R., 1 Bom 219) dissented from A Village-Munsif in the Madras Presidency is a "Magistrate" within the meaning of s 26 of the Evidence Act, 1872 The word "include" in cl 13 and other clauses of s 1 of Act I. of 1868 is intended to be enumerative, not exhaustive. —EMPRESS v RAMANJIYYA, I. L. R., 2 Mad 5. [Innes and Forbes, JJ Sep 18, 1878.]

35. When the confession of a prisoner under s 122 of the Criminal Procedure Code was not taken in the manner provided by s. 346, and was, therefore, defective, held that the evidence of the recording officer, that such confession was actually made, was inadmissible to remedy the defect. — In re EMPRESS v MANNOO TAMOOLEE, I. L. R., 4 Cal. 696, 4 C. L. R. 137. [Morris and White, JJ. Feb 19, 1879.]

36. S. 122 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply to a confession recorded by a Magistrate acting under ch. 15 or ch. 17, but to a confession made by a Magistrate other than the Magistrate by whom the case has to be inquired into or tried, and to a confession made during, or before the commencement of, an investigation by the police —IN THE MATTER OF BEHARI HADJI, 5 C. L. R. 238. [Wilson and Tottenham, JJ. Oct. 11, 1879.]

37. A defect in a confession taken under s. 122 of the Code of Criminal Procedure cannot be remedied, as in the case of an examination of a prisoner under s. 346, by evidence taken at the Sessions.—EMPRESS v. HARI KRISTO BISWAS, 5 C. L. R. 209. [Wilson and Tottenham, JJ. Oct. 31, 1879.]

38. A confession made by the accused person before a Magistrate who has jurisdiction to deal with the matter to which it relates may be made at the commencement of a trial or enquiry under ch. 15 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and be treated as a confession under s. 346, whether or not the case be still under the investigation of the police Per Curiam —The object of s. 122 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is to enable any Magistrate, other than the Magistrate by whom the case is to be tried or enquired into, to record a confession promptly. In the Matter of Behari Hadji (5 C. L R 238) and Reg. v. Shivya (I. L. R., 1 Bom 219) discussed —KRISHNO MONEE v. EMPRESS, 6 C L R. 289. [Morris and Prinsep, JJ. Feb. 5 1880.]

39. A confession recorded by a Magistrate who afterwards conducts the enquiry preliminary to committal, and has jurisdiction to do so, is to be treated as an examination under s. 193 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and not as a confession recorded under s. 122, notwithstanding that the prisoner may have been brought before the Magistrate before the conclusion of the police-investigation. To such confession, consequently, the provisions of the last paragraph of s 346 apply. S. 122 of the Criminal Procedure Code contemplates and provides for cases in which confessions are recorded by a Magistrate other than the Magistrate by whom the case is enquired into or tried.—EMPRESS v. ANUNTRAM SINGH, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 954; 6 C. L. R 97. [Garth, C.J., and Jackson, Pontifex, Morris, and Mitter, JJ April 26, 1880.]

40 The confession of an accused person was recorded in a simple narrative form, instead of in the shape of question and answer, as required by the Code of Criminal Procedure, s. 346. There was nothing in the character of the confession, or in the circumstances of the case, to lead to the inference that the accused had been pre-

S. 30. judiced by the error. Held that the error did not affect the admissibility of the statement in evidence.—In re MUNSHI SHEIKH; EMPRESS v. MUNSHI SHEIKH, I. L. R., 8 Cal. 616; TITU MAYA v. REG., I. L. R., 8 Cal. 618n. [Cunningham and Tottenham, JJ. Mar. 15, 1882.]

41. On a certain day a confession by an accused person was recorded by a Magistrate, and on the next day the same Magistrate, having jurisdiction to do so, examined the witnesses for the prosecution, and eventually committed the accused. Held, following Empress v. Anuntram Singh (I. L. R., 5 Cal. 954; 6 C. L. R. 97), that such confession, having been made to a Magistrate competent to hold, and who actually then was holding, an enquiry preliminary to committal, must be regarded as falling within s. 193 of Act X. of 1872, or s. 342 of Act X. of 1882, and as such governed by the reservations contained in s. 346 of the former Act, or s. 364 of the latter. Observations on ss. 346 and 364 of Act X. of 1882 (Criminal Procedure Code). —EMPRESS v. YAKUB KHAN, I. L. R., 5 All. 253. [Stuart, C.J., and Straight, J. Jan. 13, 1883.]

(a.) A and B are jointly tried for the murder of C. It is proved that A said, 'B and I murdered C.' The Court may consider the effect of this confession as against B.

(b.) A is on his trial for the murder of C. There is evidence to show that C was murdered by A and B, and that B said, 'A and I murdered C.'

This statement may not be taken into consideration by the Court against A, as B is not being jointly tried.

1. The confession of an accused person is only evidence against himself.—QUEEN v. KALLY CHURN LOHARA, 6 W. R. 84. [Loch, J. Nov. 20, 1866.]

2. The admission of an accused cannot be taken to be corroborative evidence, or any evidence at all, against anybody other than himself. Police-papers ought not to be taken judicial notice of either as evidence or consulted in order to test evidence.—QUEEN v. BUSSIRUDDI, 8 W. R. 35. [Hobhouse, J. July 8, 1867.]

3. The confession of one prisoner cannot be used as corroborative evidence against another prisoner. Corroboration as to the details of the crime without corroboration as to the person of the accused, is worthless.—QUEEN v. DURBAROO DASS SIRDAR, 13 W. R. 14. [Jackson and Markby, JJ. Jan. 11, 1870.]

4 Under s. 30 of the new Evidence Act (I. of 1872), the statement of fact made by a prisoner, which amounts to a confession of guilt on his part, may be taken into consideration so far and so far only, as that particular statement of fact itself extends against the other prisoners who are being tried, as well as himself, for the offence which is thus confessed.—QUEEN v. MOHESH BISWAS, 19 W. R. 16 to 8 B. L. R. 455, note. [Phear and Ainslie, JJ. Jan. 23, 1873.]

5 S. 30 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) is an exception, and its wording shows that the confession is merely to be an element in the consideration of the evidence. Unless there is something more, a conviction upon it will still be a case of no evidence, and bad in law.—PRO., Jan 24, 1873; 7 Mad H C R Ap. 15.

conviction was by the verdict of a jury. The confessions of persons tried jointly for the same offence may, by s. 30, Act I. of 1872, be "considered" as against other parties then on their trial with them; but such confessions, when used as evidence against others, stand in need of corroboration, and cannot be used as corroborating in any way the evidence of approvers against such other parties. S. 30, Act I. of 1872, ought to be construed with great strictness, and the confession of one person is not admissible in evidence against another, although the two are jointly tried, if one is tried for the abetment of the offence for which the other is on his trial. By s. 297 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Court can deal with the case of a prisoner who does not appeal, and is authorized to pass such "order," sentence, or judgment as it thinks fit.—QUEEN v. JAFFIR ALI, 19 W. R. 57. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. April 17 1873.]

7. Before a confession of a person jointly tried with the prisoner can be taken into consideration against such prisoner it must appear that that confession implicates the confessing person substantially to the same extent as it implicates the person against whom it is to be used in the commission of the offence for which the prisoners are being jointly tried.—QUEEN v. BRIAR ALI MOONSHEE, 19 W. R. 67: 10 B. L. R. 453 [Kemp. and Phear, JJ. April 20 1873.]

8. When more persons than one are being tried for the same offence and a confession made by one affecting himself and some of the others, is proved, the Evidence Act, s. 30 does not provide that such confession is evidence, but that it may be "taken into consideration" the intention of the Legislature being that when as against any person implicated by such confession, there is evidence tending to his conviction, the circumstance of such person being implicated by the confession of one of those who are being jointly tried with him shall be taken into consideration as bearing upon the truth or sufficiency of such evidence. When a confession has to be used for the above purpose, the person to be affected by it has a right to demand that it be strictly proved and shown to have been in all essential respects taken and recorded as prescribed by law (Criminal Procedure Code, s. 122), i.e., in the manner provided by ss. 345 and 346. When the examination of the accused is taken otherwise than in the course of a preliminary inquiry, an omission to comply with the provisions of s. 346 cannot be remedied by the evidence of the Magistrate who took it. The reception, as evidence against an accused person, of a confession which ought not to have been proved, and which is not in accordance with law, and the grounding of a case against him upon such confession, must be held to be irregularities which seriously prejudice the prisoner.—QUEEN v. CHUNDER BHUTTACHARJEE 24 W. R. 42. [Jackson and McDonell JJ. Aug. 12, 1875.]

9. A confession, not taken in the form of question and answer, and not authenticated by the Magistrate's endorsement as to its accuracy, is inadmissible in evidence, even though no objection should be made to its reception: ss. 45, 122 256, and 346 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and s. 91 of the Evidence Act. If an abettor of a crime is, on account of his presence at its commission, to be charged under s. 114 of the Penal Code as principal, his abetment must continue down to the time of the commission of the offence. If he distinctly withdraws at any moment before the final act is done, the offence is not committed with his continuing abetment. The confession of a person who says he abetted a murder, but withdrew before the actual perpetration of that murder by his associates, cannot be used as evidence against those associates, though the person confessing is tried with them jointly on a charge of murder: s. 30 of the Evidence Act. If, in a case tried by a jury, the High Court finds that inadmissible evidence has been received, but that, after setting it aside, there is other evidence on the record on which the jury may find a verdict of guilty the High Court may reverse the conviction and sentence, and order a new trial: s. 280 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.—REG. v. AMRITA GOVINDA, 10 Bom. H. C. R. 497. [West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Dec. 17, 1873.]

10. Statements made by one set of prisoners criminating another set of prisoners, when each individual prisoner made a case for himself on which he was free from any criminal offence, ought not to be taken into consideration under s. 30 of the Evidence Act against the prisoners of the second set, when the two sets, although tried together, were tried upon totally different charges.—QUEEN v. BUNWAREE LALL, 21 W. R. 53. [Phear and Morris, JJ. Mar. 24, 1874.]

11. Act I. of 1872, s. 30, which makes the confession of one prisoner evidence against person other than the man who made the confession, applies only to cases in which the confession is made by a prisoner tried at the same time with the accused person against whom the confession is used.—QUEEN v. SHEIKH BUXOO, 21 W. R. 65. [Phear and Morris, JJ. Mar. 31, 1874.]

12. Held, on a consideration of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, that the Legislature intended to lay down as a maxim or rule of evidence that the testimony of an

S. 30. accomplice is unworthy of credit, so far as it implicates an accused person, unless it is corroborated in material particulars in respect to that person; and it is the duty of a Court which has to deal with an accomplice's testimony to consider whether this maxim applies to exclude that testimony or not, and in a case tried by jury, to draw the attention of the jury to the principles relative to the reception of an accomplice's testimony. A Judge should charge the jury that the mere confessions of prisoners tried simultaneously with the accused for the same offence, which are in a very qualified manner made operative as evidence by Act I. of 1872, s. 30, are only to be rated as evidence of a defective character, and that they require specially careful scrutiny before they can be safely relied on.—QUEEN v. SADHU MUNDUL, 21 W. R. 69. [Phear and Morris, JJ. April 2, 1874.]

13. The evidence requisite for the corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice must proceed from an independent and reliable source, and previous statements made by the accomplice himself, though consistent with the evidence given by him at the trial, are insufficient for such corroboration. The confession of one of the prisoners cannot be used to corroborate the evidence of an accomplice against the other.—REG. v. MALAPA BIN KAPANA, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 196. [Nanabhai Haridas and Larpent, JJ. July 15, 1874.]

14. A prisoner who pleads guilty at the trial and is thereupon convicted and sentenced, cannot be said to be jointly tried with the other prisoners, committed on the same charge who plead not guilty. Where, therefore, one out of eight prisoners before the committing Magistrate made a confession affecting himself and five others, and afterwards, at the trial before the Assistant Sessions Judge, pleaded guilty, and was thereupon convicted and sentenced, and the Judge then proceeded to take his evidence on solemn affirmation, and recorded his confession as evidence in the case against the other prisoners, held that the Judge was wrong in taking the confession into consideration against those prisoners who pleaded not guilty. The proper course for the Judge was either to have sentenced the prisoner who pleaded guilty, and then put him aside, or to have waited to see what the evidence would disclose. Discrepancies are not less infirmative of testimony, because a greater sagacity on the part of witnesses would have avoided them.—REG. v. KALLU PATIL 11 Bom. H. C. R. 146 [West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Aug 13 1874.]

15. While A and B were being jointly tried before a Court of Session, the first for murder, and the second for abetment of murder, a confession made by A, that he himself had committed the murder at the instigation of B, was put in as evidence against A. Subsequently the charge against A was altered to one of abetment of murder, and the Sessions Judge, under the authority of s. 30 of the Evidence Act, used the confession against both, and convicted them. The High Court held that the original and amended charges were so nearly related that the trial might, without any unfairness, be deemed to have been a trial on the amended charge from the commencement; and that no objection having been taken by B, who was represented by a vakil, to the admissibility of A's confession against him when the charge against A was altered, the Sessions Judge was justified in using the confession against B also.—REG v. GOBIND BABJI RAUL AND BABAJI GOBIND KUBAL, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 278. [West and Nanabhai Haridas JJ Dec. 2, 1874.]

16. The confession of co-prisoners cannot, under the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), s. 30, be treated as evidence of ordinary character not distinguished by any special infirmity or qualifications against the other prisoners, as, in addition to the infirmity inherent in an accomplice's testimony, they are not given on oath, and are not liable to be tested by cross examination.—QUEEN v. NAGA, 23 W. R. 24 [Phear and Morris, JJ Jan. 22, 1875.]

17. Tainted evidence is not made better by being corroborated by other tainted evidence. The statement of one prisoner cannot be taken as evidence against another prisoner under s. 30 of the Evidence Act, unless the confessing prisoner implicates himself to the full as much as his co-prisoner whom he incriminates. The rules of evidence cannot be departed from, because there may be strong moral conviction of guilt.—QUEEN v. BAIJOO CHOWDHRY, 25 W. R. 43. [Kemp and Glover, JJ. May 8, 1876.]

18. A conviction based solely on the evidence of a co-prisoner is bad in law.—REG. v. AMBIGARA HULAGU, I. L. R., 1 Mad. 163 [Holloway and Innes, JJ. Oct. 16, 1876.]

19. 20. Under s. 30 of the Evidence Act, the confession of a prisoner affecting himself and another person charged with the same offence is, when duly proved, admissible as evidence against both, but such second person cannot, when it is uncorroborated as against him, be legally convicted on it. Per Garth, C.J.: Such evidence must be dealt with by the Court in the same manner as any other evidence. The weight, however, to be attached to such evidence, and the question whether, taken by itself, it is sufficient in point of law to justify a conviction, is a question for the Judge. Unsupported by other evidence, it, however, should be taken as evidence of the very weakest kind, being simply a statement of the third person not made upon oath or affirmation. If such confession is corroborated by other evidence, it is immaterial whether, in proving the case at the trial, the confession precedes the other evidence, or the other evidence precedes the confession. Per Jackson, J. (McDonell, J, concurring): Such evidence is not sufficient to support a conviction, even if corroborated by circumstantial evidence, unless the circumstances constituting corroboration would, if believed to exist, themselves support a conviction. Per Curiam.—The word 'Court' in s. 30 of the Evidence Act means not only the Judge in a trial by a Judge with a jury, but includes both Judge and jury.—EMPRESS v. ASHOOTOSH CHUCKERBUTTY, I. 21. Where the confession of a person being tried jointly with other persons did not implicate him to the same extent as it implicated such other persons, and was not sufficient in itself to justify his conviction, held that such confession could not be taken into consideration under s. 30 of Act I. of 1872 against such other persons, Queen v. Belat Ali Moonshee (10 B. 22. Held that it is only in extreme cases of delay or expense that the personal attendance of a witness before the Court of Session should be dispensed with, and the evidence given by him before the committing Magistrate referred to. Held also, where a person being tried jointly with other persons made a statement, deprecating any guilty knowledge, and seeking to clear himself at the expense of such other persons, that such statement could not be taken into consideration under s. 30 of Act I. of 1872 against such other persons Queen v. Belat Ali Moonshee (10 B. 23. A and B were committed for trial, the former for dacoity under s. 395 of the Penal Code, and the latter under s. 412 for receiving stolen property, knowing it to be such. A made two confessions, and in both he stated he had handed over to B some pieces of gold and silver stolen at the dacoity. When B was arrested, a gold ring and a silver wristlet were found in his possession. At the trial A pleaded guilty, and B claimed to be tried. A goldsmith deposed that he made the ring and wristlet found with B out of pieces of gold and silver given to him for the purpose by B. On this evidence and on the confessions made by A the Sessions Judge convicted B. On appeal to the High Court, held that A and B not having been tried jointly for the same offence, the confession of A was inadmissible as evidence against B. There was, therefore, no evidence of the identity of the goods stolen at the dacoity with those found in B's possession, and the case against him failed. Conviction quashed — EMPRESS v. BALA PATIL, I. L. R., 5 Bom. 63. [Westropp, C.J., and Melvill, J. April 7, 1880.]

The Calcutta High Court appear to have decided, under a series of rulings, that the statement of a person, being tried jointly with other persons, cannot be used in evidence against such other persons, unless such statement implicates himself as well as such other persons and to the same extent. — Queen v. Baijoo Chowdhry, 25 W. R. 43; Queen v. Keshub Bhoonia, 25 W. R. 8; Queen v. Belat Ali Munshee, 10 B. L. R. 453; 19 W. R. 67; Queen v. Mohesh Biswas, 10 B. L. R. 455; 19 W. R. 10; Reg. v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom. H. C. R. 497.

It has also been ruled that such statement cannot be used as corroborating the evidence of an accomplice.—Queen v. Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R. 57; Reg. v. Malapa bin Kapana, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 196.

Also that such statement cannot be used in evidence where one party is being tried for the abetment of the offence of which the other is on his trial —Queen v. Jaffir Ali, 19 W. R. 57. See also Reg. v. Amrita Govinda, 10 Bom. H. C. R. 497.

S. 30. another, in which he endeavoured to exculpate himself. Held that this statement was not evidence against the other prisoners under s. 30 of the Evidence Act. It was not a confession, nor did it amount to any admission by the prisoner that he was guilty in any degree of the offence charged; but it was simply an endeavour on his part to explain his own presence on the occasion in such a manner as to exculpate himself, and any mention made by him in such a statement of other persons having been engaged in the riot was altogether irrelevant, and not evidence against them At a trial before a Sessions Court, the Judge, on the examination-in-chief of the witnesses for the prosecution being finished, questioned the witnesses at considerable length upon the points to which he must have known that the cross-examination would certainly and properly be directed. Held that such a course of procedure was irregular and opposed to the provisions of s. 138 of the Evidence Act. It is not the province of the Court to examine the witnesses unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material question or questions; and the Court should, as a general rule, leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in s. 138 of the Act. —NOOR BUX KAZI v. EMPRESS. I. L. R., 6 Cal. 270, 7 C. L. R. 385 Garth, C.J., and Tottenham J July 20, 1880.

25. Several persons were charged together with offences under ss 148, 302, 324, and 326 read with s. 149 of the Penal Code. The Sessions Judge, when about to examine the prisoners, required all but the prisoner under examination to withdraw from the Court, until his turn for examination came round and convicted each prisoner chiefly upon what was said by his co-prisoners during his absence from the Court. Held that the evidence so given was inadmissible.—IN THE MATTER OF CHANDRA NATH SIRCAR, EMPRESS v. CHANDRA NATH SIRCAR, I. L. R., 7 Cal. 65; 8 C. L. R. 352. [Morris and Prinsep, JJ. April 2 1881.]

26. The two accused persons were jointly tried before the Sessions Judge on a charge of murder. The Sessions Judge examined each of the accused in the absence of the other, making the latter withdraw from the Court during the examination of the former, though without objection from the pleaders of the accused persons. Held that the examination of each accused could be used only against himself, and not against his fellow-accused. — EMPRESS v. LAKSHMAN BALA, I. L. R., 6 Bom. 124. [Melvill and Kemball, JJ. Jan. 11, 1882.]

27. If the certificate required by s. 122 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1872), that a confession is voluntarily made, is not recorded by the Magistrate, at the time the confession is made, or, at any rate, on the day it is reduced to writing, the confession is bad, and inadmissible in evidence. To render the statement of one person jointly tried with another for the same offence liable to consideration against that other, it is necessary that it should amount to a distinct confession of the offence charged.—EMPRESS v. DAJI NARSU, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 288. [West and Pinhey, JJ. Mar. 8, 1882.]

28. Several prisoners being charged together with house-breaking, some of them pleaded guilty The Sessions Judge used the confessions made by those who pleaded guilty as evidence against a prisoner who was tried. Held that such confessions were not evidence under s. 30 of the Evidence Act, 1872. — VENKATASAMI v. QUEEN, I. L. R., 7 Mad. 102 [Hutchins, J. Aug. 21, 1883.]

29 Evidence of the possession and attempted disposal of coins of unusual kind is relevant on a charge of uttering such coins soon afterwards when the factum of uttering is denied. A and B were tried together, under s. 239 of the Penal Code, on a charge of delivering to another counterfeit coins knowing the same to be counterfeit at the time they became possessed of them. A confessed that he had got the coins from B, and had passed them to several persons at his request Held that the confession of A was relevant against B When two persons are accused of an offence of the same definition arising out of a single transaction, the confession of the one may be used against the other, though it inculpates himself through acts separable from those ascribed to his accomplice, and capable, therefore, of constituting a separate offence from that of the accomplice.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NUR MAHOMED, I. L. R., 8 Bom. 223. [West and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Dec. 6, 1883.]

30 It is open to a Judge in charging the jury to express his opinion as to the effect of a certain portion of the evidence; but he should always be careful to add that it is for the jury to form their own opinion. Exact correspondence in details of several statements made by an approver in the course of a trial is not corroborative evidence such as is ordinarily required to make it safe to convict a particular prisoner. Confessions of prisoners are not, as against their fellow-prisoners who were not present when the confessions were made, such corroborative evidence of the statement of an approver as would justify the conviction of the other prisoners thereon. Confessions of two of several accused persons made in the absence of the others are of no weight against the latter. Such confessions, as well as the statements of approvers, are always regarded as tainted; because, from the position occupied by the person making them, they are not entitled to the same weight on the evidence of ordinary witnesses. An accused person is not bound to account for his movements at or about the time an offence was committed, unless there has been given legal evidence sufficient, primâ facie, to convict him of the offence.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BIPIN BISWAS, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 970. [Prinsep and Macpherson, JJ. June 26, 1884.]

31. Upon the trial of A for murder and B for abetment thereof, a confession by A implicating B cannot be taken into consideration against B under s. 30 of the Evidence Act, 1872.—BADI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 7 Mad. 579. [Kernan and Hutchins, JJ. July 30, 1884.]

32. In cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session, s. 436 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882) empowers the Court of Session or District Magistrate to order a discharged person to be committed for trial by such Court. There is nothing in that section to show that, when such order is made, the commitment thereupon must necessarily be made by the Magistrate who has discharged him, whilst the first proviso to it shows that it may be made by the Court of Session or by the District Magistrate according as the power under that section happens to be exercised by one or the other. Meaning of the expression "a Court of competent jurisdiction" in s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882) considered. A Court of Session may try a prisoner so committed and charged by itself. It is an established rule of practice that the accomplice must be corroborated by independent evidence as to the identity of every person whom he impeaches Reg. v. Malapa bin Kapana (11 Bom. H. C. R 196) and Reg. v. Budhu Nahu (I. L. R., 1 Bom. 475) followed.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KRISHNABHAT, I. L. R., 10 Bom. 319 [Nanabhai Haridas and Wedderburn, JJ. Dec. 1, 1885.]

33. A conviction of a person who is tried jointly with other persons for the same offence cannot proceed merely upon the uncorroborated confession of one of such other persons. Where the accused was convicted of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, and the only evidence against him was the confession of a fellow-prisoner, and the fact that he pointed out the stolen property some months after the commission of the offence, held that the mere production of the stolen property by the accused was not sufficient corroboration of the confession of the other prisoner.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DOSA JIVA, I. L. R., 10 Bom. 231. [Birdwood and Jardine, JJ. Dec. 17, 1885.]

34. When the accused was convicted solely on the confessions of his fellow-prisoners who were tried jointly with him for the same offence, held that the conviction was bad. Under s 30 of the Evidence Act, such confessions could be "taken into consideration against the accused, but they were not evidence within the definition given in s. 3 of the Act, and they could not, therefore, alone form the basis of a conviction.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v KHANDIA BIN PANDU, I L R, 15 Bom. 66. [Birdwood and Candy, JJ. July 3, 1890.]

35 Where the only evidence against two prisoners accused of murder directly implicating them in the commission of the crime consisted of confessional statements made by them before the committing Magistrate, which were subsequently retracted, and the statements in such confessions were corroborated in material particulars by other evidence on the record, held that the evidence was sufficient to support a conviction.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RARU NAYAR, I. L. R., 19 Mad 482. [Subramania Ayyar and Davies, JJ. Aug. 12, 1896.]

36. A and B were charged with murder. A pleaded guilty, but he was not convicted or sentenced till the conclusion of the trial of his fellow-prisoner B. The Sessions Judge, holding that both the accused were jointly tried for the same offence, took into consideration as against B the confessions made by A, and convicted both of murder. Held that after A had pleaded guilty, he could not be treated as being jointly tried with B. A's confessions were, therefore, not admissible against B under s. 30 of the Evidence Act.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. PAHUJI, I. L. R., 19 Bom 195 [Jardine and Ranade, JJ. Jan. 23, 1894.]

37. In order to constitute an offence under s 373 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that the intention or knowledge of likelihood as to the employment of the minor for purposes of prostitution should be, with reference to employment, either immediate or at some definite, and not very remote, future period, but an offence under the section is complete as soon as a girl is purchased with the guilty intention or knowledge of likelihood that she will, while still a minor under the age of 16 years, be employed for that purpose, although the point of time for such employment may be remote by reason of her physical incapacity for the purpose. H, the father of two girls, twins about a year old, sold one of them to K, a prostitute, for Rs 9, and within ten days of such sale sold her the other for Rs. 14. K was shown to have previously purchased another child whom she had brought up from her

S. 30. infancy, and who was then living with her, and leading the life of a prostitute. Both H and K made confessions as to the guilty knowledge and intention with which the sale of the two children was made. K's confession was made within two hours after her arrest and immediately thereafter she was committed to hajat for seven days On the seventh day, on being brought up for trial before the Deputy Magistrate, she retracted her confession, and assigned an innocent reason for her purchase of the girl. H and K were tried jointly — H being charged with an offence under s. 372, viz., selling the girls for the purpose of prostitution, and K with an offence under s 373, viz., buying for the same purpose. Neither was charged with abetting the other. The two confessions were used as evidence, and there was other evidence tending to prove the intention and guilty knowledge. The Deputy Magistrate convicted each of the offence with which they were charged. On appeal the Sessions Judge acquitted K on the ground that the offence under s. 373 could not be committed unless the intention was that the minor was to be used for the purpose of prostitution at some definite future time, and that it would be carrying the law too far to hold that the intention had reference to a period some 12 or 14 years after the purchase when the minor became capable of being used for that purpose. Held, for the reasons above stated, that the acquittal on that ground was erroneous. Held, further, that, having regard to the circumstances under which the confession of K was given and retracted, it was open to suspicion, and could not safely be acted upon, and that the confession made by H was not legally admissible against her, as they were not being tried jointly for the same offence. Held, also, that, having regard to the provisions of s. 106, ill. (a) of the Evidence Act, and to the fact that there was evidence, apart from the confessions which tended to show the knowledge and intention which the character and circumstances of the Act suggested, the onus lay on K to show that the intention was other than that which the Act suggested, or that the employment of the girls as prostitutes was not intended till after they had attained the age of 16 years, and that, as she had failed to show this, and the evidence all tended the other way, the acquittal was erroneous, and must be reversed.—DEPUTY LEGAL REMEMBRANCER v. KARUNA BAISTOBI, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 164. [Banerjee and Sale, JJ. Oct. 19, 1894.]

38. Where two out of several persons on their trial in a Court of Session on a joint charge pleaded guilty, and made certain statements to the Court, it was held that such statements could not be taken into consideration as evidence against the other accused persons, inasmuch as, after pleading guilty, the persons making those statements were no longer on their trial —QUEEN-EMPRESS v PIRBHU, I. L. R., 17 All. 524, [Edge, C.J.. and Aikman, J. April 27, 1895.]

See QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JAGAT CHANDRA MALI, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 50, ruling 11, under s. 24, p. 19.

On the trial of more persons than one, jointly, for the same offence, where one of them pleads guilty, the person so pleading is no longer on his trial, and cannot be treated as being jointly tried with the others. A confession by that person affecting himself and others cannot, therefore, be taken into consideration as against such others under s. 30 of the Evidence Act.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. LAKSHMAYYA PANDARAM, I. L. R., 22 Mad. 491. [Boddam, J. March 17, 1899.]

The trial of an accused person does not necessarily end if he pleads guilty. Under section 271 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, where an accused pleads guilty, "the plea shall be recorded," and the accused "may be convicted" thereon; but evidence may be taken in sessions cases as if the plea had been one of "not guilty," and the case decided upon the whole of the evidence, including the accused's plea. When such a procedure is adopted, the trial does not terminate with the plea of guilty, and therefore a confession by the person so pleading may be taken into consideration under section 30 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, as against any other person who is being jointly tried with him for the same offence. A trial does not strictly end until the accused has been either convicted or acquitted or discharged.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. CHINNA PAVUCHI, I. L. R., 23 Mad. 151. [Subrahmania Ayyar and Benson, JJ. Nov. 29, 30, 1899.]

Where a witness who has made a statement before the committing Magistrate subsequently resiles from that statement in the Court of Session, the statement made before the committing Magistrate can be used under section 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to contradict the witness; but the use of such statement as substantial evidence of the facts alleged by the witness on the prior occasion is fraught with the gravest peril, and could never have been the intention of the Legislature. The words "take into consideration" in section 30 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, do not mean that the confession referred to in the section is to have the force of sworn evidence. Queen-Empress v. Khandia (1890, I. L. R., 15 Bom. 66) referred to. The bare finding of stolen property and arms in the house of a joint Hindu family is not such evidence of possession on the part of each of its members as would form a sufficient basis for a conviction.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIRMAL DAS, I. L. R., 22 All. 445. [Blair and Henderson, JJ. July 7, 1900.] Ss. 31, 32.

Cases in which statement of relevant fact by person who is dead or cannot be found, &c., is relevant.

(1) When the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question.

When it relates to cause of death;

Such statements are relevant whether the person who made them was or was not, at the time when they were made, under expectation of death, and whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of his death comes into question.

(2) When the statement was made by such person, in the ordinary course of business, and in particular when it consists of any entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or in the discharge of professional duty; or of an acknowledgment, written or signed by him, of the receipt of money, goods, securities, or property of any kind; or of a document used in commerce, written or signed by him, or of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written, or signed by him.

or is made in course of business;

(3) When the statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when, if true, it would expose him, or would have exposed him, to a criminal prosecution, or to a suit for damages.

or against interest of maker;

(4) When the statement gives the opinion of any such person as to the existence of any public right or custom or matter of public or general interest, of the existence of which, if it existed, he would have been likely to be aware, and when such statement was made before any controversy as to such right, custom, or matter had arisen.

or gives opinion as to public right or custom, or matters of general interest;

(5) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship "by blood, marriage, or adoption"* between persons as to whose relationship "by blood, marriage, or adoption"* the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, and when the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.

or relates to existence of relationship; or is made in will or deed relating to family-affairs;

(6) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship "by blood, marriage, or adoption"* between persons deceased, and is made in any will or deed relating to the affairs of the family to which any such deceased person belonged, or in any family-pedigree, or upon any tombstone, family portrait, or other thing on which such statements are usually made, and when such statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.

or in document relating to transaction mentioned in section 13, clause (a);

(7) When the statement is contained in any deed, will, or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in section 13, clause (a).

or is made by several persons, and expresses feelings relevant to matter in question.

(8) When the statement was made by a number of persons, and expressed feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question.

1. The High Court of Bombay has jurisdiction to try a prisoner accused of having committed murder at Zanzibar, and sent by the British Consul at Zanzibar for trial to Bombay. A prisoner accused of having committed murder at Zanzibar was sent by the British Consul there for trial before the High Court at Bombay. The Consul could not enforce the attendance of witnesses at Bombay, but he transmitted to the High Court the depositions which he had taken in the course of the inquiry he had held with regard to the commission of the alleged offence. In the absence of the witnesses these depositions were tendered in evidence at the trial in Bombay. Held that the British Consul at Zanzibar was authorized to take the depositions, and that they were admissible in evidence at the trial under s. 38 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872).—EMPRESS v. DASSAJI GULAM HUSEIN, I. L. R., 3 Bom. 334 [Sargent, J. Dec. 3, 1878.]

2. When a confession is made to a Magistrate by an accused person during an inquiry held previously to the case being taken up by the committing officer and by an officer acting merely as a recording officer, it must be recorded in strict accordance with the provisions of ss. 122 and 346 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. If the provisions of these sections have not been fully complied with by the recording officer, the Court of Session cannot take evidence that the accused person duly made the statement recorded; and in cases where evidence can be taken, a Court of Session is not at liberty to treat a deposition sent up with the record, and made by the recording officer before the committing officer, to the effect that the accused person did, in fact, duly make before him the statement recorded, as evidence of the fact. In such case the recording officer must himself be called and examined by the Court of Session, except in cases in which

S. 33. the presence of the recording officer cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court of Session considers unreasonable. — NOSHAI MISTRI AND RAM CHUNDER HALDAR v. EMPRESS, I. L. R., 5 Cal. 958; 6 C. L. R. 353 [White and Maclean, JJ. May 13, 1880.]

3. Where a person is accused of an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code, he cannot, where the circumstances do not raise the presumption that he received the property knowing it to be stolen, be convicted of that offence, merely because he is in possession of the property, and does not account for his possession. The prosecution must prove both that the property was stolen, and that the accused received it dishonestly. At the trial of a person for an offence under s. 411 of the Penal Code, the Court of Session, under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, 1872, used, against the accused, the evidence of the owner of the property in respect of which the accused was charged, and of his wife taken by commission during the inquiry, and the evidence of the servant of those persons taken at the inquiry, and also the evidence of the owner of the property during the trial under a commission issued by the Sessions Judge under s 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The grounds upon which the Sessions Judge admitted the evidence taken during the inquiry were that the attendance of the witnesses could not be procured without an expense of Rs 500 an amount which he considered unreasonable, that the witnesses would be inconvenienced, and that their evidence did not concern the accused personally, having reference only to the identification of the property in respect of which the accused was charged. Held that the Sessions Judge had improperly admitted such evidence. Inconvenience to witnesses is no ground allowed under s. 33 of the Evidence Act and the question of identification was a most material one, and the evidence of the witnesses in question was of the utmost moment, the whole case resting on it, and, as regards the ground of expense it was impossible to consider the amount unreasonable, considering that the entire case rested on the evidence of those witnesses, and that accused had not cross-examined those whose evidence had been taken by commission, nor, looking at his position, could he arrange for their cross-examination. Held also that on similar grounds the Sessions Judge was not justified in issuing a commission under s. 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—EMPRESS v. T. BURKE, I. L. R., 6 All. 224. [Oldfield, J. Feb. 16 1884.]

4. In 1874 five out of six persons, who were named as having committed a murder, were arrested, and after inquiry before a Magistrate were tried before the Court of Session and convicted. At the time of the inquiry before the Magistrate, the sixth accused person absconded, as was recorded by the Magistrate. In their examination before that officer the witnesses deposed to the absconder having been one of the participators in the crime charged against the prisoners then under trial. In the Sessions Court, the Judge did not record that the sixth accused person had absconded, and the evidence was recorded against the prisoners then under trial only. In 1886 the absconder was apprehended and tried before the Court of Session upon the charge of murder. At that time most of the former witnesses were dead, and the Sessions Judge, referring to s. 48 of the Evidence Act, admitted in evidence against the prisoner the depositions given in 1874 before both the Magistrate and the Sessions Court. He also admitted the deposition of a surviving witness which had been given in 1874 before the Sessions Court. This witness now also gave evidence against the prisoner. Held that the depositions were not admissible in evidence under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, the prisoner not having been a party to the former proceedings, and not having then had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses. Held, however, that, under the circumstances, the depositions given in 1874 before the committing Magistrate, though not those given in the Court of Session, were admissible in evidence under s. 512 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Per Straight, J. that, under the special circumstances the deposition taken in 1874 of the surviving witness was admissible under s. 157 of the Evidence Act as corroboration of her evidence given at the trial of the prisoner. In cross-examination before the Court of Session, a witness stated that, when she was before the committing Magistrate, that officer, addressing her, said "Recollect, or I will send you into custody." Held that, if the Magistrate did so address the witness, he exceeded his duty.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ISHRI SINGH I. L. R., 8 All 672. [Edge and Straight, JJ. Sep. 21, 1886.]

5. Evidence taken under a commission issuing from the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate during the course of an inquiry before him cannot be used in evidence at the trial before the High Court under s. 507 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held, further, that, on the facts before the High Court, it was also inadmissible under s. 33 of the Evidence Act.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. A. M. JACOB, I. L. R., 19 Cal. 113 [Wilson, J. Dec. 7, 1891.]

6. The accused was charged with abetting the offence of criminal breach of trust committed by the nazir of the Small Cause Court at Poona. The accused was a karkun in the nazir's office, and it was his duty to keep the accounts of moneys received in the office from judgment-debtors, and of moneys paid out to decree-holders. He was charged with abetting the misappropriation of three sums, viz., Rs 20 on the 19th November 1885, Rs. 45 on the 23rd November 1885, and Rs. 10 on the 26th June 1886. As to the first sum, it was alleged that an instalment of Rs. 25 due under a decree had been paid into the nazir's office by a judgment-debtor on the 19th November 1885, but the accused had entered in the office day-book only Rs. 5, thereby enabling the balance of Rs. 20 to be misappropriated. It appeared, however, that a sum of Rs. 25, being the instalment due to the decree-holder under the above decree, had been in due course paid out to him on the 4th December 1885. As to the second sum of Rs. 45, it was alleged that a sum of Rs. 50 had been paid in, but only Rs. 5 had been entered by the accused, the balance being misappropriated. It appeared, however, in this case also that the full amount of the instalment, viz., Rs. 50, had been duly paid out to the decree-holder a few days after its receipt. As to the third sum, it was alleged that the total receipts entered in the book on the 26th June 1886 were Rs. 55, but the figure entered as the total was only Rs. 45, and that the balance of Rs. 10 had been misappropriated. The jury found the accused guilty on all three charges. On appeal by him it was contended that there was no evidence of the misappropriation of the specific sums in respect of which he was charged. There was evidence of a general deficiency: but there was no evidence that these specific sums formed part of that deficiency. On the contrary, the evidence showed that the instalments paid into the office had been duly paid out to the persons to whom they were payable. Held that the jury having had the facts brought to their notice, their verdict was final, and the High Court would not interfere with the verdict. Depositions taken on commission in criminal cases, although inadmissible under Ch. XL. of the Criminal Procedure Code, may be admitted under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, if the requirements of the proviso to that section have been complied with. The words "opportunity to cross-examine" in the proviso to s. 33 do not imply that the actual presence of the cross-examining party or his agent before the tribunal taking the evidence is necessary. To make evidence admissible against an accused person under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, the fact that he had full opportunity of cross-examination, if not admitted, must be proved. Quære.—Whether the opportunity to administer cross-interrogatories under a commission is an "opportunity to cross-examine" within the meaning of the proviso to s. 33 of the Evidence Act so as to render the evidence taken on interrogatories admissible. The provisions of s. 167 of the Evidence Act apply to criminal trials by jury. When part of the evidence, which has been allowed to go to the jury, is found to be irrelevant and inadmissible, it is open to the High Court in appeal either to uphold the verdict upon the remaining evidence on the record under s 167 of the Evidence Act, or to quash the verdict and order a re-trial. The law as settled in England by the Queen v. Gibson (L. R., 18 Q. B. D. 537), and as stated by the Privy Council in Makin v. Attorney-General of New South Wales (L. R., 1894, A. C., 57; see pp. 69-70), with reference to the granting of new trials where evidence has been improperly admitted does not apply to India. Wafadar Khan v. Queen Empress (I. L. Statements made under Special Circumstances.

34. Entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.

Entries in books of account when relevant.

Illustration.

A sues B for Rs. 1,000, and shows entries in his account-books showing B to be indebted to him to this amount. The entries are relevant, but are not sufficient, without other evidence, to prove the debt.

* Compare s. 198 of the Indian Companies Act (VI. of 1882) and s. 62 of the Code of Civil Procedure Act (XIV. of 1882); as to admissibility in evidence of certified copies of entries in Bankers' books, see s. 4 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act (XVIII. of 1891), infra.

Rulings.

1. Though under s. 34 of the Evidence Act the actual entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business are relevant to the extent provided by the section, such a book is not by itself relevant to raise an inference from the absence of any entry relating to a particular matter. The fact that the accused has, during the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution, used certain documents, and that such documents have been put in as evidence on his behalf, does not entitle the prosecutor to the right of reply, if, when asked, upon the close of the case for the prosecution whether he means to adduce evidence, the accused says that he does not.—QUEEN v. GREES CHUNDER BANERJEE, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 1024. [Field, J. July 28, 29, 30, 1884.]

2. The accused persons were tried on 27 charges, comprising the offences of theft, abetment of theft, and receiving stolen property, in 1872-73, similar offences in 1873-74; similar offences in 1874-75; the giving and receiving of gratifications to and by public servants in 1874-75; and, finally, the fabrication, and abetment of fabrication, of false evidence in 1876. One of the accused was convicted on two heads of charge, and the rest acquitted. The convict appealed against his conviction and sentence; and the Government appealed against his acquittal on the other heads as well as against the acquittal of the rest. Held that the trial was irregular under s. 452 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; and so would be the hearing of the appeal. The High Court, however, heard the appeal in respect of offences in 1874-75 only, it appearing that this course did not prejudice the accused persons, who had been fully and fairly tried for those offences. Account-books containing entries not made by, nor at the dictation of, a person who had a personal knowledge of the truth of the facts stated, if regularly kept in course of business, are admissible as evidence under s. 34 of the Indian Evidence Act (I. of 1872), and semble under s. 32, cl. 2. Account-books, though proved not to have been regularly kept in course of business, but proved to have been kept on behalf of a firm of contractors by its servant or agent appointed for that purpose, are relevant as admissions against the firm. It is not competent to a Magistrate to convert an accused person into a witness except when a pardon has been lawfully granted under s. 347 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Evidence given by such person, who had received a pardon in the case of an offence not exclusively triable by the Court of Session, held not relevant, that person not having been acquitted or discharged or convicted. Possession of wood by a forest-inspector, who is a servant of Government, is possession of the Government itself, and a dishonest removal of it, without payment of necessary fees, from his possession, albeit with his actual consent, constitutes theft, within the meaning of s. 378 of the Indian Penal Code, if that consent was unauthorized or fraudulent.—REG. v. HANMANTA, I. L. R., 1 Bom. 610. [Melvill and Kemball, JJ. Feb. 26, 1877.]

35. An entry in any public or other official book, register, or record, stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty, specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register, or record is kept, is itself a relvevant fact.

Relevancy of entry in public record made in performance of duty.

Ruling.

S. 35 of the Evidence Act, which provides "that any entry in an official public book, which is duly made by a public servant in the execution of his duty, is, of itself, a relevant fact," does not make the public book evidence to show that a particular entry has not been made in it. S. 466 of the Penal Code is not intended to apply to cases where a public officer, or a person acting for a public officer, whose duty it is to make entries in a public book, knowingly makes a false entry, but to cases where a certificate or other document is forged by some unauthorized person with a view to make it appear that it was duly issued by a public officer. The accused, in order to save an estate from forfeiture, made a false entry of rent received in a public book kept by him for the purpose of informing the Collector as to the rents which had been paid into the Collectorate, and as to what estates the rents were in arrear, so that he might take steps to enforce payment, and was convicted by the Sessions Judge of an offence under s. 465 of the Penal Code. Held, on appeal, that the accused ought properly to have been convicted under s. 192 of the Code, the provisions of that section not being confined to false evidence to be used in judicial proceedings.—IN THE MATTER OF JUGGUN LALL, 7 C. L. R. 356. [Garth, C.J., and Field, J. Nov. 17, 1880.]

Relevancy of statements in maps, charts, and plans.

36. Statements of facts in issue or relevant facts, made in published maps or charts generally offered for public sale, or in maps or plans made under the authority of Government, as to matters usually represented or stated in such maps, charts, or plans, are themselves relevant facts.

Relevancy of statement as to fact of public nature contained in certain Acts or notifications.

37. When the Court has to form an opinion as to existence of any fact of a public nature, any statement of it, made in a recital contained in any Act of Parliament or in any Act of the Governor-General of India in Council, or of the Governors in Council of Madras or Bombay, or of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council of Bengal, or in a notification of the Government appearing in the Gazette of India, or in the gazette of any Local Government, or in any printed paper purporting to be the London Gazette or the Government Gazette of any colony or possession of the Queen, is a relevant fact.

*This section also applies to any Act of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab, or Burmah.

Relevancy of statements as to any law contained in law-books.

38. When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country, any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country, and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings, is relevant.

How much of a Statement is to be proved.

What evidence to be given when statement forms part of a conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers.

39. When any statement of which evidence is given forms part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or is contained in a document which forms part of a book, or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much, and no more, of the statement, conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made.

Judgments of Courts of Justice when relevant.

Previous judgments relevant to bar a second suit or trial.

40. The existence of any judgment, order, or decree, which, by law, prevents any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or holding a trial, is a relevant fact, when the question is whether such Court ought to take cognizance of such suit, or to hold such trial.

Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, &c., jurisdiction.

41. A final judgment, order, or decree of a competent Court in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty, or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon, or takes away from, any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person, but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order, or decree, is conclusive proof—that any legal character which it confers accrued at the time when such judgment, order, or decree came into operation; that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, "order, or decree"* declares it to have accrued to that person; that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, "order, or decree"* declared that it had ceased or should cease; and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, "order, or decree"* declares that it had been or should be his property.

Relevancy and effect of judgments, orders, or decrees, other than those mentioned in section 41.

42. Judgments, orders, or decrees, other than those mentioned in section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the enquiry; but such judgments, orders, or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which they state.†

1. In giving evidence a police-officer may refresh his memory by referring to documents in which he has, under s. 119 of Act X. of 1872, reduced into writing statements of persons examined by him during an investigation, but the documents themselves cannot be used as evidence, and a Judge should not read such documents to a jury in order to point out discrepancies between the evidence and previous statements of the witnesses. The evidence of a medical man who has seen, and has made a post-mortem examination of the corpse of the person touching whose death the inquiry is, is admissible, firstly, to prove the nature of injuries which he observed; and, secondly, as evidence of the opinion of an expert as to the manner in which those injuries were inflicted, and as to the cause of death. A medical man who has not seen the corpse is only in a position to give evidence of his opinion as an expert. The proper mode of eliciting such evidence is to put to the witness hypothetically the facts which the evidence of the other witnesses attempts to prove, and to ask the witness's opinion on those facts. S. 323 of Act X. of 1872 does not in any way preclude the Judge at a Sessions trial from calling and examining the medical witness who has been examined before the Magistrate, and in every case in which the deposition taken by the Magistrate is essentially deficient, or requires further elucidation, such witness should be called and examined by the Sessions Judge. A medical man in giving evidence may refresh his memory by referring to a report which he has made of his post-mortem examination, but the report itself cannot be treated as evidence, and no facts can be taken therefrom.—ROGHUNJ SINGH v. THE EMPRESS, I. When the document was presented, a witness was called to prove the identity of the thumb-mark of the person, who alleged that he was the executant of the document, taken at the Registration Office with an admitted thumb-mark of the accused F. Held that, though a comparison of thumb marks is admissible in law, it can be made only by the Court; no evidence as to the identity of thumb-marks can be given by a witness.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. FAKIR MAHOMED SHEIKH, I. Opinion as to handwriting when relevant.

47. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed, that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact.

Explanation.—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write, or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority, and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him.

D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising with him thereon.

The opinions of B, C, and D on the question whether the letter is in the handwriting of A, are relevant, though neither B, C, nor D ever saw A write.

Opinion as to existence of right or custom when relevant.

48. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right, the opinions, as to the existence of such custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, are relevant.

Explanation.—The expression, "general custom or right," includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons.

Illustration.

The right of the villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well is a general right within the meaning of this section.

Opinion as to usages, tenets, &c., when relevant.

49. When the Court has to form an opinion as to—the usages and tenets of any body of men or family, the constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of words or terms used in particular districts, or by particular classes of people, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon are relevant facts.

Opinion on relationship when relevant.

50. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact:

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act,* or in prosecutions under section 494, 495, 497, or 498 of the Indian Penal Code.†

Illustrations.

(a.) The question is, whether A and B were married. The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife is relevant.

(b.) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B. The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family is relevant.

Ruling.

The provisions of s. 50 of the Evidence Act show that, where marriage is an ingredient in an offence, as in bigamy, adultery, and the enticing of married women, the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved. Queen v. Wasira (8 B. Grounds of opinion when relevant.

51. Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.

An expert may give an account of experiments performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.

In civil cases character to prove conduct imputed, irrelevant.

52. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person concerned is such as to render probable or improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

In criminal cases, previous good character relevant.

53. In criminal proceedings the fact that the person accused is of a good character is relevant.

Previous bad character not relevant, except in reply.

54 * In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

Explanation 1.—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.

Explanation 2.—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.

Rulings.

1. S. 54, as printed above, has been substituted for the original by Act III. of 1891, s. 6. The original section ran as follows:—

"S. 54.—In criminal proceedings, previous conviction relevant, but not previous bad character, except in reply.] In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has been previously convicted of any offence is relevant, but the fact that he has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

"Explanation.—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue."

The occasion of amending the section was the decision of the Full Bench in Emp. v. Kartic Chunder Das (I. L. R., 14 Cal. 721) on a question of admissibility of the evidence of a previous conviction. On a full consideration of the question, the Court felt constrained to lay down that, under s. 54, a previous conviction was in all cases admissible in evidence against an accused person. Their Lordships said: "That must be the law so long as this section remains unaltered We own that, could we come to any other conclusion, we should have done so; but it is our duty to carry out the intentions of the Legislature."

But, under the new section, a previous conviction is not, in all cases, admissible as evidence against an accused person. The section should be read along with s. 310 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898).

S. 75 of the Penal Code (as amended by Act VIII. of 1882) runs as follows: "Whoever, having been convicted of an offence punishable under Ch XII. or Ch. XVII. of this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, shall be guilty of any offence punishable under either of those chapters with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, shall be subject for every such subsequent offence to transportation for life, or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years."

With s. 54 of the Evidence Act as substituted for the original by Act III. of 1891 should be read s. 310 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as amended by Act III. of 1891. The section (310) runs as follows:—

"S. 310.—Procedure in case of previous conviction.] In the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, where the accused is charged with an offence, committed after a previous conviction for any offence,

* The present s. 54 has been substituted for the original by the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act (III. of 1891), s. 6.

the procedure laid down in ss. 271, 286, 305, 306, and 309, shall be modified as follows :—

"(a) The part of the charge stating the previous conviction shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge, unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of the subsequent offence.

"(b) If he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge.

"(c) If he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly; but if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the jury, or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be), shall then inquire concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again.

"Notwithstanding anything in this section, evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872." [This last clause has been added by Act III. of 1891, s. 9.]

2. In charging the jury upon the trial of a prisoner for being dishonestly in the possession of stolen goods, the Judge directed the jury to consider the proof of previous convictions for theft as evidence from which inference might fairly be drawn as to the character of the accused. Held that this amounted to a misdirection; for, though s. 54 of the Evidence Act declares that "the fact that the accused person has been previously convicted of an offence is relevant," yet the same section also declares that "the fact that he has a bad character is irrelevant," and that the evidence was irrelevant and inadmissible. Except under very special circumstances, the proper object of using previous convictions is to determine the amount of punishment to be awarded, should the prisoner be convicted of the offence charged.—ROSHUN DOOSADH v. EMPRESS, I. L. R., 5 Cal 768; 6 C. L. R. 219. [Morris and Prinsep, JJ. Feb. 10, 1880.]

3. In trials before a jury or assessors, the record should invariably show that reference to a previous conviction was not made until the accused had been convicted of the subsequent offence.—KRISTO BEHARI DASS v. EMPRESS, 1 C. L. R. 555 [Cunningham and Maclean, JJ. Mar 13, 1883.]

See REG v. PARBHUDAS AMBARAM, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 90, ruling under s. 11, p. 11.

The character of the accused not being a fact in issue in the offence of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft punishable under s. 401 of the Indian Penal Code, evidence of bad character or reputation of the accused is inadmissible for the purpose of proving the commission of that offence.

Where it was proved that certain persons were found together at some distance from their houses, that they were all intimately connected with one another and were in the habit of visiting melas together, that one of them was arrested in the act of picking a pocket, and that when they were arrested many of them gave false names and false addresses, held, they could not be convicted under s 401 of the Indian Penal Code, there being no proof that they belonged to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft.—MANKURA PASI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 27 Cal. 139. [Prinsep and Hill, JJ. Aug. 7, 1899.]

55. In civil cases, the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive is relevant.

Character as affecting damages.

Explanation.—In sections 52, 53, 54, and 55, the word "character" includes both reputation and disposition: but, except as provided in section 54,* evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

PART II.—ON PROOF.

CHAPTER III.—FACTS WHICH NEED NOT BE PROVED.

Fact judicially noticeable need not be proved.

56. No fact of which the Court will take judicial notice need be proved.

Facts of which Court must take judicial notice.

57. The Court shall take judicial notice of the following facts—

(1) all laws or rules having the force of law, now or heretofore in force, or hereafter to be in force, in any part of British India;

(2) all public Acts passed or hereafter to be passed by Parliament, and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament to be judicially noticed:

(3) Articles of War for Her Majesty's Army or Navy;

(4) the course of proceeding of Parliament and of the Councils for the purposes of making Laws and Regulations established under the Indian Councils Act* or any other law for the time being relating thereto:

Explanation.—The word "Parliament" in clauses (2) and (4) includes—

(1) the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland;

(2) the Parliament of Great Britain:

(3) the Parliament of England:

(4) the Parliament of Scotland; and

(5) the Parliament of Ireland;

(5) the accession and the sign manual of the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland;

(6) all seals of which English Courts take judicial notice; the seals of all the Courts of British India, and of all Courts out of British India, established by the authority of the Governor-General† or any Local Government in Council; the seals of Courts of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction and of Notaries Public; and all seals which any person is authorized to use by any Act of Parliament or other Act or Regulation having the force of law in British India;

(7) the accession to office, names, titles, functions, and signatures of the persons filling, for the time being, any public office in any part of British India if the fact of their appointment to such office is notified in the Gazette of India, or in the official gazette of any Local Government;

(8) the existence, title, and national flag of every State or Sovereign recognized by the British Crown;

(9) the divisions of time, the geographical divisions of the world, and public festivals, fasts, and holidays notified in the official gazette;

(10) the territories under the dominion of the British Crown;

(11) the commencement, continuance, and termination of hostilities between the British Crown and any other State or body of persons;

(12) the names of the members and officers of the Court, and of their deputies and subordinate officers and assistants, and also of all officers acting in execution of its process, and of all advocates, attorneys, proctors, vakils, pleaders, and other persons authorized by law to appear or act before it;

† For lists of such Courts, see the notifications printed on pp. 372 to 374 of the Western India Volume of the Lists of British Enactments in force in Native States.

(13) the rule of the road "on land or at sea."*

In all these cases,† and also on all matters of public history, literature, science, or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference.

If the Court is called upon by any person to take judicial notice of any fact, it may refuse to do so, unless and until such person produces any such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so.

Rulings.

1. Under the provisions of the penultimate paragraph of s. 57, and of the first proviso of s. 60, of the Evidence Act, the Court referred to Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence with reference to the effect likely to be caused by a sudden blow on the abdomen.—IN THE MATTER OF HATIM, 12 C. L. R. 86 [McDonell and Field, JJ. April 21, 1882.]

2. At the close of the evidence for the prosecution, the attorney for the defence, in answer to the Judge, stated that he meant to call witnesses. The Court then adjourned, and on the following day the attorney stated that, on re-consideration, he did not intend to call witnesses. The Judge allowed the prosecutor to reply. Held that, though the strict interpretation of ss. 289 and 292 of the Criminal Procedure Code would warrant this course, it was never meant by the Legislature that the prosecutor should have a reply when no witnesses are called for the defence, the object of the law being evidently to let each side have an opportunity of commenting on the evidence of the other, and not to give an additional advantage to the prosecutor in such a case as the present. A well-known treatise, such as Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence, may be referred to in the course of trial. Hatim v. The Empress (12 C. L. R. 86) followed. It is improper on the part of a Judge, when examining a prisoner under s. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to cross-examine him. The only questions which are permissible are such as will enable the prisoner to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him. Although s. 303 of the Criminal Procedure Code empowers a Judge to ask the jury such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is, it was never contemplated that, on ascertaining that the jury are not unanimous, the Judge should make minute enquiries to learn the nature of the majority and its opinion, so that he should have the opportunity of accepting or refusing that opinion as a verdict according as it coincides with his own opinion or not. Whatever may be the opinion of the Judge, if he goes so far as to ask the jury what is the exact majority, and what is the opinion of the majority, he ought to receive that verdict without hesitation, and, if he differs from it, he should proceed as directed by s. 307. A prisoner or his Counsel is at liberty to offer evidence or not, as he thinks proper, and no inference unfavourable to him can be drawn, because he takes one course rather than another.—HURRY CHURN CHUCKERBUTTY v. EMPRESS, I. L. R., 10 Cal. 140. Prinsep and Tottenham, JJ. Aug. 22, 1883.

3. A masjid was used by the members of a sect of Muhammadans called the Hanifis, according to whose tenets the word "amen" should be spoken in a low tone of voice. While the Hanifis were at prayers, R, a Muhammadan of another sect, entered the masjid, and, in the course of the prayers, according to the tenets of his sect, called out "amen" in a loud tone of voice. For this act he was convicted of voluntarily disturbing an assembly engaged in religious worship, an offence punishable under s. 296 of the Penal Code. The Full Bench (Mahmood, J. dissenting) ordered the case to be re-tried, and that, in re-trying it, the Magistrate should have regard to the following questions, namely, (1) Was there an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship? (2) Was such assembly, in fact, disturbed by the accused? (3) Was such disturbance caused by acts and conduct on the part of the accused by which he intended to cause such disturbance, or which acts and conduct, at the time of such acts and conduct, he knew or believed to be likely to cause disturbance? Held by Mahmood, J., that the discussion occasioned by the act of the accused having presumably taken place during the interval when the prayers were not going on, the assembly was not at that time "engaged in the performance of religious worship," and was not "disturbed" within the meaning of s. 296 of the Penal Code; that, in reference to the terms of s. 39 of the Code, the accused did not disturb the assembly "voluntarily;" that he was justified by the Muhammadan Ecclesiastical Law in entering the mosque, and joining the congregation in saying the word "amen" loudly if he thought fit, and his conduct fell within the purview of s. 79 of the Penal Code, and was therefore not an offence under s. 296. Beatty v. Gillbanks (L. R., 9 Q. B. D. 308) referred to. Also per Mahmood, J., that, having regard to the guarantee given by the Legislature in s. 24 of Act VI. of 1871 (Bengal Civil Courts Act), that the Muhammadan Law shall be administered in all questions regarding "any religious usage or institution," the Court was bound, by s. 57 (1) of Act I. of 1872 (Evidence Act), to take judicial notice of the Muhammadan Ecclesiastical Law, and the rules of that law need not be proved by specific evidence.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAMZAN, I. L. R., 7 All. 461. [Petheram, C.J., and Straight, Oldfield, Brodhurst, and Mahmood, JJ. Mar. 7, 1885.]

Facts admitted need not be proved.

58. No fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing, or which, before the hearing, they agree to admit by any writing under their hands, or which, by any rule of pleading in force at the time, they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings:

Provided that the Court may, in its discretion, require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.

CHAPTER IV.—OF ORAL EVIDENCE.

Proof of facts by oral evidence.

59. All facts, except the contents of documents, may be proved by oral evidence.

Oral evidence must be direct.

60. Oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct; that is to say,— if it refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it; if it refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it;

if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense, or in that manner;

if it refers to an opinion, or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds:

Provided that the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved by the production of such treatises, if the author is dead, or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable:

Provided, also, that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

Ruling.

See IN THE MATTER OF HATIM, 12 C. L. R. 1, ruling 1, under s. 57, p. 53.

CHAPTER V.—OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Proof of contents of documents.

61. The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence.

Primary evidence.

62. Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court.

Explanation 1.—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document. Ss. 4, 5.

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it.

Explanation 2.—Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography, or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but, where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Illustration.

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other, but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Secondary evidence.

63. Secondary evidence means and includes—

(1) certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained; *

(2) copies made from the original by mechanical processes which, in themselves, insure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies;

(3) copies made from or compared with the original;

(4) counterparts of document as against the parties who did not execute them;

(5) oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

Illustrations.

(a.) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

(b) A copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original.

(c.) A copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original, is secondary evidence; but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine-copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

Proof of documents by primary evidence.

64. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned.

Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given.

65. Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition, or contents of a document in the following cases:—

(a) when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66, such person does not produce it;

* See s. 76, infra.

(b) when the existence, condition, or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved, or by his representative in interest;

(c) when the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time;

(d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily moveable;

(e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74;

(f) when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act, or by any other law in force in British India, to be given in evidence;

(g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection.

In cases (a), (c), and (d), any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible.

In case (b), the written admission is admissible.

In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible.

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

Ruling.

The Deputy Magistrate of Malabar, purporting to act under the provisions of the Mapilla Act (Mad. Act XX. of 1859), recorded a statement in the nature of a confession made by V, who was under arrest on suspicion of being concerned in a Mapilla outrage. This statement, which was made in Malayalam, was recorded in English in the form of a narrative, and was signed by the Magistrate only. The same Magistrate shortly afterwards, purporting to act under the Code of Criminal Procedure, before any evidence was recorded against V, examined him as to this statement, which was read over and translated to him. In answer to questions, V admitted that he had made it voluntarily. This examination was recorded according to the provisions of s 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. After other evidence was recorded, V retracted his statement. He was committed to the Sessions, tried, and convicted mainly on his own recorded statement and examination. The Deputy Magistrate was examined as a witness, and stated that the statement recorded by him was made by V, and was correctly recorded, and was made voluntarily. Held that the record of the statement made by V to the Deputy Magistrate was not admissible in evidence against V. Per Parker, J. The provisions of s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are imperative, and s. 533 will not render a confession admissible where no attempt has been made to conform to the provisions of the former section. If the confessional statement of V was recorded by the Magistrate in his executive capacity, it was not receivable in evidence under s. 80 of the Evidence Act. The action of the Magistrate in examining V as to his confessional statement before there was any legal evidence on the record against him was illegal, and therefore the record of such examination could not be used in evidence against V. Inasmuch as the record of the statement of V was not admissible, secondary evidence thereof could not be given. —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. VIRAN, I. L. R., 9 Mad. 224. [Brandt and Parker, JJ. Feb. 12, 17, 1886.]

Rules as to notice to produce.

66. Secondary evidence of the contents of the documents referred to in section 65, clause (a), shall not be given unless the party proposing to give such secondary evidence has previously given to the party in whose possession or power the document is, "or to his attorney or pleader,"* such notice to produce it as is prescribed by law; and, if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case: Ss. 67-73.

Provided that such notice shall not be required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in any of the following cases, or in any other case in which the Court thinks fit to dispense with it:—

(1) when the document to be proved is itself a notice;

(2) when, from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it;

(3) when it appears or is proved that the adverse party has obtained possession of the original by fraud or force:

(4) when the adverse party or his agent has the original in Court;

(5) when the adverse party or his agent has admitted the loss of the document;

(6) when the person in possession of the document is out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court.

Proof of signature and handwriting of person alleged to have signed or written document produced.

67. If a document is alleged to be signed or to have been written, wholly or in part, by any person, the signature or the handwriting of so much of the document as is alleged to be in that person's handwriting must be proved to be in his handwriting.

Proof of execution of document required by law to be attested.

68. If a document is required by law to be attested, it shall not be used as evidence until one attesting witness at least has been called for the purpose of proving its execution, if there be an attesting witness alive and subject to the process of the Court, and capable of giving evidence.

Proof where no attesting witness found.

69. If no such attesting witness can be found, or if the document purports to have been executed in the United Kingdom, it must be proved that the attestation of one attesting witness at least is in his handwriting, and that the signature of the person executing the document is in the handwriting of that person.

Admission of execution by party to attested document.

70. The admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested.

Proof when attesting witness denies the execution.

71. If the attesting witness denies or does not recollect the execution of the document, its execution may be proved by other evidence.

Proof of document not required by law to be attested.

72. An attested document not required by law to be attested may be proved as if it was unattested.

Comparison of signature, writing, or seal, with others admitted or proved.

73. In order to ascertain whether a signature, writing, or seal is that of the person by whom it purports to have been written or made, any signature, writing, or seal admitted or proved to the satisfaction of the Court to have been written or made by that person, may be compared with the one which is to be proved,

* In s. 66, the words quoted have been inserted by Act XVIII. of 1872, s. 6.

Ss. 74-76. although that signature, writing, or seal has not been produced or proved for any other purpose.

The Court may direct any person present in Court to write any words or figures for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the words or figures so written with any words or figures alleged to have been written by such person.

*This section applies also, with any necessary modifications, to finger-impressions.

Public Documents.

Public documents.

74. The following documents are public documents:—

1. Documents forming the Acts, or records of the Acts—

(i) of the sovereign authority,

(ii) of official bodies and tribunals, and

(iii) of public officers, legislative, judicial, and executive, whether of British India, or of any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, or of a foreign country.

2. Public records kept in British India of private documents.

Rulings.

Certain persons charged with a dakaiti committed at Chawripura, a village on the borders of Gwalior, having gone over into Gwalior territory, were arrested and brought before the Magistrate of Bhind in Gwalior. That officer recorded their statements, attesting each statement in the following words: "I believe that this confession was made without threat or coercion, and it was made in my presence, and to my hearing. The person making it, having heard it read out to him, stated it as correct. It contains a full and true account of the statement made by him." Each statement also bore the mark (by way of signature) of the person by whom it purported to have been made. Subsequently these persons were handed over to the British authorities, and were tried by the Court of Session, who rejected the confessions above referred to as inadmissible in evidence. The accused having appealed to the High Court, it was held that each of the confessions recorded in the manner above described was admissible in evidence, certainly under s. 80 of the Evidence Act, and probably under s. 74 of that Act, as against the person by whom it was made —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SUNDAR SINGH, I. L. R., 12 All. 595. [Edge, C.J., and Young, J. July 26, 1890.]

Held by the Full Bench (Subramania Ayyar, J, dissentiente).—Reports made by a police-officer in compliance with ss. 157 and 168 of the Criminal Procedure Code are not public documents within the meaning of s. 74 of the Indian Evidence Act, and consequently an accused person is not entitled, before trial, to have copies of such reports. Held by Collins, C.J., and Benson, J —The same rule applies to reports made by a police-officer in compliance with s. 173 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held by Shephard and Subramania Ayyar, JJ.—Reports made by a police-officer in compliance with s. 173 of the Criminal Procedure Code are public documents within the meaning of s. 74 of the Indian Evidence Act, and consequently an accused person, being a person interested in such documents, is entitled, by virtue of s. 76 of the Indian Evidence Act, to have copies of such reports before trial —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ARUMUGAM, I. L. R., 20 Mad. 189. [Collins, C J., and Shephard, Subramania Ayyar, and Benson, JJ. Sep. 17, Oct 7, 1896; Feb. 23, April 30, 1897 ]

Private documents.

Certified copies of public documents.

76. Every public officer having the custody of a public document which any person has a right to inspect shall give that person, on demand, a copy of it, on payment of the legal fees therefor, together with a certificate written at the foot of such copy

* In s. 73, the last paragraph has been added by the Indian Evidence Act (V. of 1899), s. 3 (2).

that it is a true copy of such document or part thereof, as the case may be, and such certificate shall be dated and subscribed by such officer with his name and his official title, and shall be sealed, whenever such officer is authorized by law to make use of a seal; and such copies so certified shall be called certified copies. Ss. 77-79.

Explanation.—Any officer who, by the ordinary course of official duty, is authorized to deliver such copies, shall be deemed to have the custody of such documents within the meaning of this section.

77. Such certified copies may be produced in proof of the contents of the public documents or parts of the public documents of which they purport to be copies.

Proof of documents by production of certified copies.

Proof of other official documents.

78. The following public documents may be proved as follows:—

(1) Acts, orders, or notifications of the Executive Government of British India in any of its departments, or of any Local Government or any department of any Local Government,— by the records of the departments, certified by the heads of those departments respectively, or by any document purporting to be printed by order of any such Government:

(2) The proceedings of the Legislatures—

by the journals of those bodies respectively, or by published Acts or abstracts, or by copies purporting to be printed by order of Government:

(3) Proclamations, orders, or regulations issued by Her Majesty, or by the Privy Council, or by any department of Her Majesty's Government—by copies or extracts contained in the London Gazette, or purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer:

(4) The acts of the Executive or the proceedings of the Legislature of a foreign country—by journals published by their authority, or commonly received in that country as such, or by a copy certified under the seal of the country or sovereign, or by a recognition thereof in some public Act of the Governor-General of India in Council:

(5) The proceedings of a municipal body in British India—

by a copy of such proceedings certified by the legal keeper thereof, or by a printed book purporting to be published by the authority of such body:

(6) Public documents of any other class in a foreign country—

by the original, or by a copy certified by the legal keeper thereof, with a certificate under the seal of a Notary Public, or of a British Consul or Diplomatic Agent, that the copy is duly certified by the officer having the legal custody of the original, and upon proof of the character of the document according to the law of the foreign country.

Presumptions as to Documents.

79. The Court shall presume every document purporting to be a certificate, certified copy, or other document which is by law declared to be admissible as evidence of any particular fact, and which purports to be duly certified by any officer in British India, or Presumption as to genuineness of certified copies.

S. 80. by any officer in any Native State in alliance with Her Majesty, who is duly authorized thereto by the Governor-General in Council, to be genuine:

Provided that such document is substantially in the form, and purports to be executed in the manner, directed by law in that behalf.

The Court shall also presume that any officer by whom any such document purports to be signed or certified held, when he signed it, the official character which he claims in such paper.

80. Whenever any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a record or memorandum of the evidence, or of any part of the evidence, given by a witness in a judicial proceeding or before any officer authorized by law to take such evidence, or to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person, taken in accordance with law, and purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, or by any such officer as aforesaid, the Court shall presume—that the document is genuine; that any statements as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true; and that such evidence, statement, or confession, was duly taken.

Presumption as to documents produced as record of evidence.

1. The confession of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can be used as evidence against the prisoner only on the condition prescribed by s 249, Code of Criminal Procedure, that is, it must have been duly taken by the committing officer in the presence of the person against whom it is to be used. The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession, in order to afford primâ-facie evidence, under s. 80 of the Evidence Act of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement, ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under s 249.—QUEEN v. NUSSURUDDIN, 21 W. R. 5 [Phear and Morris, JJ Nov 28, 1873.]

2. To support a finding upon an alternative charge of perjury, there must be legal evidence of the truth of each branch of the charge The deposition of the prisoner given in Hindustani, but taken in English by the Magistrate, and the memorandum at the foot of the deposition that it was read to the witness, and was by him acknowledged to be correct, though held not to be quite satisfactory (as the person who took down in English what the prisoner had said in Hindustani was not examined as a witness, and the prisoner had no opportunity of cross-examining him), was admitted as a proper deposition within the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the memorandum was taken, under s. 80 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), as evidence of the facts stated in it, and as affording some evidence that the translation was correct.—QUEEN v. GONOWRI, 22 W. R. 2. [Phear and Morris, JJ. April 21, 1874.]

3. A deposition given by a person is not admissible in evidence against him in a subsequent proceeding without its being first proved that he was the person who was examined and gave the deposition. A pardon was tendered to an accused, and his evidence was recorded by the Magistrate. Subsequently the pardon was revoked, and he was put on his trial before the Sessions Judge along with the other accused. At the trial the deposition given by him before the Magistrate was put in and used in evidence against him without any proof being given that he was the person who was examined as a witness before the Magistrate. Held that the deposition was inadmissible without proof being given as to the identity of the accused with the person who was examined as a witness before the Magistrate. —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DURGA SONAR, I. L. R. 11 Cal. 580. [Mitter and Norris, JJ. May, 26, 1885.]

4. Although all depositions of witnesses in criminal cases should be taken and attested in the presence of the accused, and a few apt words should be used on the face of the deposition to make it apparent that this has been done, there is no provision of the law which makes the attestation of the deposition by the Court in the presence of the accused obligatory. S. 80 of the Evidence Act, therefore, does not warrant the presumption that the deposition of a medical witness taken by a committing Magistrate has been taken and attested in the accused's presence, so as to make such deposition admissible in evidence at the trial before the Court of Session under s. 509 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Queen-Empress

v. Riding (I. L. R., 9 All. 720) referred to. —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. POHP SINGH, I. L. R., 10 All. 174. [Edge, C.J., and Tyrrell, J. Dec. 19, 1887.]

5. Before the deposition of a medical witness taken by a committing Magistrate can, under s. 509 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be given in evidence at the trial before the Court of Session, it must either appear from the Magistrate's record, or be proved by the evidence of witnesses, to have been taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused. The Court is neither bound to presume under s. 80 nor ought it to presume under either s 80 or s. 114 (ill e) of the Evidence Act that the deposition was so taken and attested Queen-Empress v. Riding (I. L. R. 9 All. 720) and Queen-Empress v. Pohp Singh (I. L. R., 10 All. 174) approved —KACHALI HARI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS. I. L. R. 18 Cal. 129. [Norris and Gordon, JJ. Aug 28, 1890.]

6. A revenue-official was charged with the offence of attempting to receive a bribe from certain raiyats, who gave evidence for the prosecution, and he was convicted. He subsequently charged the raiyats with having conspired to bribe him, and in their trial their depositions in the previous case were tendered in evidence for the prosecution. Held that the depositions should have been admitted in evidence.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SAMIAPPA, I. L. R., 15 Mad. 63. [Muttusami Ayyar and Parker, JJ. Mar. 31 and Sep 9, 1891.] Ss. 81-84.

See QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SUNDAR SINGH, I. L. R., 12 All. 595, under s. 74, p. 58.

81. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every document purporting to be the London Gazette, or the Gazette of India, or the Government Gazette of any Local Government, or of any colony, dependency, or possession of the British Crown, or to be a newspaper or journal, or to be a copy of a private Act of Parliament printed by the Queen's Printer, and of every document purporting to be a document directed by any law to be kept by any person if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law, and is produced from proper custody.

Presumption as to gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament, and other documents.

82. When any document is produced before any Court, purporting to be a document which, by the law in force for the time being in England or Ireland, would be admissible in proof of any particular in any Court of Justice in England or Ireland, without proof of the seal or stamp or signature authenticating it, or of the judicial or official character claimed by the person by whom it purports to be signed, the Court shall presume that such seal, stamp, or signature is genuine, and that the person signing it held, at the time when he signed it, the judicial or official character which he claims, and the document shall be admissible for the same purpose for which it would be admissible in England or Ireland.

Presumption as to document admissible in England without proof of seal or signature.

83. The Court shall presume that maps or plans purporting to be made by the authority of Government were so made and are accurate; but maps or plans made for the purposes of any cause must be proved to be accurate.

Presumption as to maps or plans made by authority of Government.

84. The Court shall presume the genuineness of every book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of any country, and to contain any of the laws of that country, and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the Courts of such country.

Presumption as to collections of laws and reports of decisions.

Ss. 85-90.

Presumption as to powers-of-attorney.

85. The Court shall presume that every document purporting to be a power-of-attorney, and to have been executed before, and authenticated by, a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice-Consul, or representative of Her Majesty, or of the Government of India, was so executed and authenticated.

Presumption as to certified copies of foreign judicial records.

86. The Court may presume that any document purporting to be a certified copy of any judicial record of any country not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions is genuine and accurate, if the document purports to be certified in any manner which is certified by any representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India "in or for"* such country to be the manner commonly in use in that country for the certification of copies of judicial records.

An officer who, with respect to any territory or place not forming part of Her Majesty's dominions, is a Political Agent therefor, as defined in section 3, clause (40), of the General Clauses Act, 1897, shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a representative of the Government of India in and for the country comprising that territory or place.†

Presumption as to books, maps, and charts.

87. The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest, and that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts, and which is produced for its inspection, was written and published by the person, and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published.

Presumption as to telegraphic messages.

88. The Court may presume that a message forwarded from a telegraph office to the person to whom such message purports to be addressed corresponds with a message delivered for transmission at the office from which the message purports to be sent; but the Court shall not make any presumption as to the person by whom such message was delivered for transmission.

Presumption as to due execution, &c., of documents not produced.

89. The Court shall presume that every document called for, and not produced after notice to produce, was attested, stamped, and executed in the manner required by law.

Presumption as to documents thirty years old.

90. Where any document, purporting or proved to be thirty years old, is produced from any custody which the Court in the particular case considers proper, the Court may presume that the signature and every other part of such document, which purports to be in the handwriting of any particular person, is in that person's handwriting, and, in the case of a document executed or attested, that it was duly executed and attested by the persons by whom it purports to be executed and attested.

Explanation.—Documents are said to be in proper custody if they are in the place in which, and under the care of the person with whom, they would naturally be; but no custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable.

This explanation applies also to section 81.

CHAPTER VI.—OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Evidence of terms of contracts, grants, and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document.

91. When the terms of a contract, or of a grant, or of any other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence* shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant, or other disposition of property, or of such matter, except the document itself, or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

Exception 1.—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved.

Exception 2.—Wills "admited to probate in British India"† may be proved by the probate.

Explanation 1.—This section applies equally to cases in which the contracts, grants, or dispositions of property referred to, are contained in one document, and to cases in which they are contained in more documents than one.

Explanation 2.—Where there are more originals than one, one original only need be proved.

Explanation 3.—The statement, in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact.

Illustrations.

(a.) If a contract be contained in several letters, all the letters in which it is contained must be proved

(b.) If a contract is contained in a bill of exchange, the bill of exchange must be proved.

(c.) If a bill of exchange is drawn in a set of three, one only need be proved.

(d.) A contracts in writing, with B, for the delivery of indigo upon certain terms.

The contract mentions the fact that B had paid A the price of other indigo contracted for verbally on another occasion.

Oral evidence is offered that no payment was made for the other indigo. The evidence is admissible.

* Evidence may, however, be taken where a Criminal Court finds that a confession or other statement of an accused person has not been recorded in manner prescribed.—See the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V. of 1898), s. 533.

† These words in s. 91, exception 2, have been substituted, for the words "under the Indian Succession Act," by the Indian Evidence Act Amendment Act (XVIII. of 1872), s. 7.

S. 91. (e.) A gives B a receipt for money paid by B.
Oral evidence is offered of the payment.

1. The confession of an accused person, taken by a Magistrate having no jurisdiction to commit or try him, is imperfect, if not signed by the accused person or attested by his mark, and is inadmissible in evidence (ss. 122 and 346, Criminal Procedure Code). The term "preliminary inquiry" in the final clause of s. 346 means such inquiries as are the subject of Chapters XIV. (Of Inquiries and Trials) and XV. (Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or the High Court); and, therefore, that clause does not apply to confessions recorded under s. 122, which refers to an inquiry, not during a trial, or one held with a view to committal, but an inquiry for the purpose of forwarding confessions, when recorded, to the Magistrate by whom the case of the accused person is inquired into or tried. Consequently, when a confession taken under s. 122 is inadmissible in evidence, oral evidence to prove that such a confession was made, or what the terms of that confession were, is inadmissible also (s. 91 of the Evidence Act).—REG. v. BAI RATAN, 10 Bom. H. C. R. 166. [Westropp, C.J., and Melvill, West, Pinhey, and Nanabhai Haridas, JJ. Sep. 25, 1873.]

2. S 119 of the Code of Criminal Procedure not making it obligatory upon a police-officer to reduce to writing any statements made to him during an investigation, neither that section, nor s. 91 of the Evidence Act, renders oral evidence of such statements inadmissible. If the statement be actually reduced to writing, the writing itself cannot be treated as part of the record, or used as evidence, but may be used for the purpose of refreshing memory under s. 159 of the Evidence Act. Consequently, the person making the statements may properly be questioned about them, and, with a view to impeach his credit, the police-officer himself, or any other person in whose hearing the statements were made, can be examined on the point under s. 155 of the Evidence Act.—REG. v. UTTAMCHAND KAPURCHAND, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 120. [Nanabhai Haridas and Larpent, JJ. June 25, 1874.]

3. In a case of giving false evidence, the English record written by the Magistrate was put in to prove what the accused had stated before him. The document was not interpreted to the accused in the language in which it was given, or which he understood; nor was it read over in accordance with the requirements of s. 339, Code of Criminal Procedure, in the presence of the person then accused. Held that the English record of the Magistrate was not legal evidence under the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), s. 91, of what the prisoner said before the Magistrate. Charges of perjury ought to be based strictly upon the exact words which are used by the person who is charged; and no evidence which does not profess to give those exact words can alone be a safe foundation for a conviction.—QUEEN v. MUNGUL DASS 23 W. R. 28. [Phear and Morris, JJ. Jan. 28, 1875.]

4. Failure to comply with the provisions of ss. 182 and 183 of Act X. of 1877 (Civil Procedure Code) in a judicial proceeding is an informality which renders the deposition of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence based on such deposition, and, under s. 91 of Act I. of 1872 (Evidence Act), no other evidence of such deposition is admissible.—IN THE MATTER OF MAYADEB GOSSAMI, EMPRESS v. MAYADEB GOSSAMI, I. L. R. 6 Cal. 762; 8 C. L. R. 292 [Cunningham and Maclean, JJ. Feb. 22, 1881.]

5. A Sessions Judge, after hearing a general statement made by a mukhtar engaged in the case, considered that the depositions of certain witnesses taken in the Magistrate's Court did not conform with the requirements of s 360 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and refused to admit the depositions as evidence, and also refused to allow oral evidence to be given as to the statements made by these witnesses. No objection was taken to the admission of these depositions on behalf of the Crown. The accused were eventually convicted and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment. Held, on appeal, that the conviction and sentence must be set aside.—ADYAN SINGH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 13 Cal. 121. [O'Kinealy and Agnew, JJ. June 30, 1886.]

6. An accused, when in custody, made a confession to a Deputy Magistrate, in the presence of a Sub-Inspector, and during an investigation being held into a case of murder, under the provisions of Ch. XIV. of the Criminal Procedure Code. The confession was recorded by the Deputy Magistrate in English, though made in Hindi, which the Deputy Magistrate perfectly well understood and could write. It purported to have been recorded under the provisions of s. 164, and was in reply to one question which was set out. The record bore the signatures of the accused and of the Deputy Magistrate, as well as the certificate as required by the section. It occupied about five pages of foolscap. At the trial the Sessions Judge excluded this confession on the ground that, not having been recorded in the language in which it was made, and there being no reason why it should not have been so recorded, the document was inadmissible in evidence. He, however, called the Deputy Magistrate as a witness, and admitted in evidence his statement as to what the accused told him. This evidence, which occupied only a few lines, was to the effect that the accused told him he had committed the murder, and on this evidence alone the accused was convicted. On appeal, held that the provisions of s. 164, read with s. 364, are imperative as to the language in which a confession is to be recorded, and that s. 533 does not contemplate or provide for any non-compliance with the law in this respect, and that, therefore, as it was not impracticable to record the confession in Hindi, the Sessions Judge was right in refusing to admit the document in evidence Held, further, that the Sessions Judge erred in admitting the oral evidence of the Deputy Magistrate as to what the accused told him, as, seeing that he was acting under the provisions of s. 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the confession was matter which was required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, and therefore, under s. 91 of the Evidence Act, no evidence could be given in proof of such matter except the document, where, as in this case, it was in existence and forthcoming. Held also that, as the defects in the record could not be cured under s. 533 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and no secondary evidence could be given, no proof of the confession could be given, and the accused must be acquitted.—[AI NARAYAN RAI v. THE QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 17 Cal. 862. [Macpherson and Hill, JJ. April 22, 1890.] S. 91.

92. When the terms of any such contract, grant, or other disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, have been proved according to the last section, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying, adding to, or subtracting from, its terms:

Exclusion of evidence of oral agreement.

Proviso 1.—Any fact may be proved which would invalidate any document, or which would entitle any person to any decree or order relating thereto; such as fraud, intimidation, illegality, want of due execution, want of capacity in any contracting party, want *or failure of consideration, or mistake in fact or law.

Proviso 2.—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved. In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document.

Proviso 3.—The existence of any separate oral agreement, constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant, or disposition of property, may be proved.

Proviso 4.—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant, or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant, or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according to the law in force for the time being as to the registration of documents.

Proviso 5.—Any usage or custom, by which incidents not expressly mentioned in any contract are usually annexed to contracts of that description, may be proved: Provided that the annexing of such incident would not be repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract.

Proviso 6.—Any fact may be proved which shows in what manner the language of a document is related to existing facts.

* In s. 92, prov. 1, the italicized word "or" has been sub-tituted for the word "of" by s. 8 of the Indian Evidence Act (1872) Amendment Act (XVIII. of 1872).

s. 92-95.

(a.) A policy of insurance is effected on goods "in ships from Calcutta to London." The goods are shipped in a particular ship which is lost. The fact that that particular ship was orally excepted from the policy cannot be proved.

(b.) A agrees absolutely in writing to pay B Rs. 1,000 on the first March 1873. The fact that, at the same time, an oral agreement was made that the money should not be paid till the thirty-first March cannot be proved.

(c.) An estate, called "the Rampur tea estate," is sold by a deed which contains a map of the property sold. The fact that land not included in the map had always been regarded as part of the estate, and was meant to pass by the deed, cannot be proved.

(d.) A enters into a written contract with B to work certain mines, the property of B, upon certain terms. A was induced to do so by a misrepresentation of B's as to their value. This fact may be proved.

(e.) A institutes a suit against B for the specific performance of a contract, and also prays that the contract may be reformed as to one of its provisions, as that provision was inserted in it by mistake. A may prove that such a mistake was made as would by law entitle him to have the contract reformed.

(f.) A orders goods of B by a letter in which nothing is said as to the time of payment, and accepts the goods on delivery. B sues A for the price. A may show that the goods were supplied on credit for a term still unexpired.

(g.) A sells B a horse, and verbally warrants him sound. A gives B a paper in these words: "Bought of A a horse for Rs. 500." B may prove the verbal warranty.

(h.) A hires lodgings of B, and gives B a card on which is written—'Rooms, Rs. 200 a month.' A may prove a verbal agreement that these terms were to include partial board.

A hires lodgings of B for a year, and a regularly stamped agreement, drawn up by an attorney, is made between them. It is silent on the subject of board. A may not prove that board was included in the terms verbally.

(i.) A applies to B for a debt due to A by sending a receipt for the money. B keeps the receipt and does not send the money. In a suit for the amount, A may prove this.

(j.) A and B make a contract in writing to take effect upon the happening of a certain contingency. The writing is left with B, who sues A upon it. A may show the circumstances under which it was delivered.

Exclusion of evidence to explain or amend ambiguous document.

93. When the language used in a document is, on its face, ambiguous or defective, evidence may not be given of facts which would show its meaning, or supply its defects.

Illustration.

(a.) A agrees, in writing, to sell a horse to B for "Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,500." Evidence cannot be given to show which price was to be given.

(b.) A deed contains blanks. Evidence cannot be given of facts which would show how they were meant to be filled.

Exclusion of evidence against application of document to existing facts.

94. When language used in a document is plain in itself, and when it applies accurately to existing facts, evidence may not be given to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts.

Illustration.

A sells to B, by deed, "my estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas." A has an estate at Rampur containing 100 bighas. Evidence may not be given of the fact that the estate meant to be sold was one situated at a different place, and of a different size.

Evidence as to document unmeaning in reference to existing facts.

95. When language used in a document is plain in itself, but is unmeaning in reference to existing facts, evidence may be given to show that it was used in a peculiar sense.

Illustration. Sec. 96-100.

A sells to B, by deed, "my house in Calcutta."

A had no house in Calcutta but it appears that he had a house at Howrah, of which B had been in possession since the execution of the deed.

These facts may be proved to show that the deed related to the house at Howrah.

Evidence as to application of language which can apply to one only of several persons.

96. When the facts are such that the language used might have been meant to apply to any one, and could not have been meant to apply to more than one, of several persons or things, evidence may be given of facts which show which of those persons or things it was intended to apply to.

Illustrations.

(a.) A agrees to sell to B, for Rs. 1 000, "my white horse." A has two white horses. Evidence may be given of facts which show which of them was meant.

(b.) A agrees to accompany B to Haid rabad Evidence may be given of facts showing whether Haiderabad in the Deccan or Haiderabad in Sindh was meant.

Evidence as to application of language to one of two sets of facts, to neither of which the whole correctly applies

97. When the language used applies partly to one set of existing facts and partly to another set of existing facts, but the whole of it does not apply correctly to either, evidence may be given to show to which of the two it was meant to apply.

Illustration.

A agrees to sell to B "my land at X in the occupation of Y." A has land at X but not in the occupation of Y, and he has land in the occupation of Y, but it is not at X. Evidence may be given of facts showing which he meant to sell.

Evidence as to meaning of illegible characters, &c.

98. Evidence may be given to show the meaning of illegible or not commonly intelligible characters or foreign, obsolete, technical, local, and provincial expressions, of abbreviations, and of words used in a peculiar sense.

Illustration

A, a sculptor, agrees to sell to B 'all my mods' A has both models and modelling tools. Evidence may be given to show which he meant to sell.

Who may give evidence of agreement varying terms of document.

99. Persons, who are not parties to a document or their representatives in interest, may give evidence of any facts tending to show a contemporaneous agreement varying the terms of the document.

Illustration.

A and B make a contract in writing that B shall sell A certain cotton, to be paid for on delivery. At the same time they make an oral agreement that three months' credit shall be given to A. This could not be shown as between A and B, but it might be shown by C, if it affected his interests.

Saving of provisions of Indian Succession Act relating to wills.

100. Nothing in this chapter contained shall be taken to affect any of the provisions of the Indian Succession Act (X. of 1865) as to the construction of wills.

Ss. 101-5.

PART III.—PRODUCTION AND EFFECT OF EVIDENCE.

CHAPTER VII.—OF THE BURDEN OF PROOF.

Burden of proof.

101. Whoever desires any Court to give judgment as to any legal right or liability dependent on the existence of facts which he asserts must prove that those facts exist.

When a person is bound to prove the existence of any fact, it is said that the burden of proof lies on that person.

Illustrations.

(a.) A desires a Court to give judgment that B shall be punished for a crime which A says B has committed :

A must prov that B has committed the crime.

(b.) A desires a Court to give judgment that he is entitled to certain land in the possession of B by reason of facts which he asserts, and which B denies, to be true :

A must prove the existence of those facts.

On whom burden of proof lies.

102 The burden of proof in a suit or proceeding lies on that person who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side.

Illustrations.

(a.) A sues B for land of which B is in possession, and which, as A asserts, was left to A by the will of C, B's father.

If no evidence were given on either side, B would be entitled to retain his possession.

Therefore the burden of proof is on A

(b.) A sues B for money due on a bond.

The execution of the bond is admitted, but B says that it was obtained by fraud, which A denies.

If no evidence were given on either side, A would succeed, as the bond is not disputed: and the fraud is not proved.

Therefore the burden of proof is on B.

Burden of proof as to particular fact.

103. The burden of proof as to any particular fact lies on that person who wishes the Court to believe in its existence, unless it is provided by any law that the proof of that fact shall lie on any particular person.

Illustration

A prosecutes B for theft, and wishes the Court to believe that B admitted the theft to C. A must prove the admission.

B wishes the Court to believe that, at the time in question, he was elsewhere. He must prove it.

Burden of proving fact to be proved to make evidence admissible.

104. The burden of proving any fact necessary to be proved in order to enable any person to give evidence of any other fact is on the person who wishes to give such evidence.

Illustrations.

(a.) A wishes to prove a dying declaration by B. A must prove B's death.

(b.) A wishes to prove, by secondary evidence, the contents of a lost document: A must prove that the document has been lost.

Burden of proving that case of accused comes within exceptions.

105. When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Indian Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances. S. 105.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, accused of murder, alleges that, by reason of unsoundness of mind, he did not know the nature of the act.

The burden of proof is on A.

(b.) A, accused of murder, alleges that, by grave and sudden provocation, he was deprived of the power of self-control.

The burden of proof is on A.

(c.) Section 325 of the Indian Penal Code provides that whoever, except in the case provided for by section 335, voluntarily causes grievous hurt, shall be subject to certain punishments.

A is charged with voluntarily causing grievous hurt under section 325:

The burden of proving the circumstances bringing the case under section 335 lies on A.

Rulings.

1. A Sessions Judge, holding a second trial, should not comment on the conduct of a previous trial. It is for those who raise the plea of private defence to prove it. The act charged cannot be denied, and the plea of private defence raised as an alternative. If raised, a full account of the occurrence must be given in evidence.—IN THE MATTER OF JANSHEER SIRDAR, 1 C. L. R. 62. [Ainslie and McDonell, JJ. July 24, 1877.]

2. In all criminal cases tried in the Mofussil it is incumbent on the accused, since the passing of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), to prove the existence (if any) of circumstances which bring the offence charged within the general or special exceptions or provisos contained in any part of the Penal Code or in any law defining such offence. Quære.—As to the state of the law in this respect in the presidency-towns. In dealing with the question of good faith, the proper point to be decided is, not whether the allegations put forward by the accused in support of the defamation are in substance true, but whether he was informed, and had good reason, after due care and attention, to believe, that such allegations were true. Markby, J.—Although ss. 235 and 237 of Act XXV. of 1861 have been repealed, it may still be inferred from ill. (a), s. 439 of the present Criminal Procedure Code, that it is unnecessary specifically to allege in a charge the absence of all general and some at least of the other exceptions mentioned in the Penal Code. The operation of the illustration, however, is strictly confined to the statement of the offence in the charge.—IN THE MATTER OF SHIBOO PROSHAD PANDAH, I. L. R., 4 Cal. 124; 3 C. L. R. 122. [Markby and Prinsep, JJ. June 13, 1878.]

3. Where the accused had been convicted of riot under s. 148, and of grievous hurt under s. 325, of the Penal Code, the Sessions Judge on appeal held that the complainants had themselves been the aggressors, and that the accused had merely exercised the right of private defence; but, inasmuch as they had not set up the plea of private defence, he considered it was not competent to him to set aside the conviction. Held that, on the finding of the Sessions Judge, the accused were entitled to an acquittal.—IN THE MATTER OF KALI CHURN MOOKERJEE, 11 C. L. R. 232. [Prinsep and O'Kinealy, JJ. May 22, 1882.]

Held that an accused person who at his trial has not pleaded the right of private defence, but has raised other pleas inconsistent with such a defence, cannot, in appeal, set up a case, founded upon the evidence taken at his trial, that he acted in the exercise of the right of private defence; neither is the Court competent to raise such a plea on behalf of the appellant. Queen-Empress v. Prag Dat (I. L. R., 20 All. 459) referred to.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TIMMAL, I. L. R., 21 All 122. [Knox and Banerjee, JJ. Nov. 18, 1898.]

Burden of proving fact specially within knowledge.

106. When any fact is specially within the knowledge of any person, the burden of proving that fact is upon him.

Illustrations.

(a.) When a person does an act with some intention other than that which the character and circumstances of the act suggest, the burden of proving that intention is upon him.

Ss. 107-12. (b.) A is charged with travelling on a railway without a ticket: The burden of proving that he had a ticket is on him.

Ruling.

See DEPUTY LEGAL REMEMBRANCER v. KARUNA BAISTOBI, I. L. R., 22 Cal. 164, ruling 37, under s. 30 at p. 38.

Burden of proving death of person known to have been alive within thirty years.

107. When the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is shown that he was alive within thirty years, the burden of proving that he is dead is on the person who affirms it.

Burden of proving that person is alive who has not been heard of for seven years.

108. "Provided that,"* when the question is whether a man is alive or dead, and it is proved that he has not been heard of for seven years by those who would naturally have heard of him if he had been alive, the burden of proving that he is alive is shifted to† the person who affirms it.

Burden of proof as to relationship in the cases of partners, landlord and tenant, principal and agent.

109. When the question is whether persons are partners, landlord and tenant, or principal and agent, and it has been shown that they have been acting as such, the burden of proving that they do not stand, or have ceased to stand, to each other in those relationships, respectively, is on the person who affirms it.

Burden of proof as to ownership.

110. When the question is whether any person is owner of anything of which he is shown to be in possession, the burden of proving that he is not the owner is on the person who affirms that he is not the owner.

Proof of good faith in transactions where one party is in relation of active confidence.

111. Where there is a question as to the good faith of a transaction between parties, one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence.

Illustrations.

(a.) The good faith of a sale by a client to an attorney is in question in a suit brought by the client: The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the attorney.

(b.) The good faith of a sale by a son just come of age to a father is in question in a suit brought by the son: The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the father.

Birth during marriage conclusive proof of legitimacy.

112. The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten.

Ruling.

A married woman is entitled, under s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882), to claim maintenance for her illegitimate children from the putative father. A wife can be examined as to non-access of her husband during her married life, without independent evidence being first offered to prove the illegitimacy of her children.—ROZARIO v. INGLES, I. L. R., 18 Bom. 468. [Candy and Fulton, JJ. Oct. 16, 1893.]

* In s. 108, the words quoted have been inserted by s. 9, Act XVIII., 1872.

† In s. 108, the italicized words have been substituted for the word "on," by s. 9, Act XVIII., 1872.

118. A notification in the Gazette of India that any portion of British territory has been ceded to any Native State, Prince, or Ruler,* shall be conclusive proof that a valid cession of such territory took place at the date mentioned in such notification. Ss. 112, 114.

Proof of cession of territory.

114. The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct, and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case.

Court may presume existence of certain facts.

Illustrations.

The Court may presume—

(a.) that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief, or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen, unless he can account for his possession;

(b.) that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars;

(c.) that a bill of exchange, accepted or endorsed, was accepted or endorsed for good consideration;

(d.) that a thing or state of things which has been shown to be in existence within a period shorter than that within which such things or states of things usually cease to exist, is still in existence;

(e.) that judicial and official acts have been regularly performed;

(f.) that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases;

(g.) that evidence which could be and is not produced would, if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it;

(h.) that, if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him;

(i.) that, when a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the obligor, the obligation has been discharged.

But the Court shall also have regard to such facts as the following in considering whether such maxims do or do not apply to the particular case before it—as to illustration (a)—a shopkeeper has in his till a marked rupee soon after it was stolen, and cannot account for its possession specifically, but is continually receiving rupees in the course of his business; as to illustration (b)—A, a person of the highest character, is tried for causing a man's death by an act of negligence in arranging certain machinery. B, a person of equally good character, who also took part in the arrangement, describes precisely what was done, and admits and explains the common carelessness of A and himself; as to illustration (b)—a crime is committed by several persons: A, B, and C, three of the criminals are captured on the spot, and kept apart from each other. Each gives an account of the crime implicating D, and the accounts corroborate each other in such a manner as to render previous concert highly improbable; as to illustration (c)—A, the drawer of a bill of exchange, was a man of business. B, the acceptor, was a young and ignorant person, completely under A's influence; as to illustration (d)—it is proved that a river ran in a certain course five years ago, but it is known that there have been floods since that time which might change its course; as to illustration (e)—a judicial act, the regularity of which is in question, was performed under exceptional circumstances;

as to illustration (f)—the question is, whether a letter was received: It is shown to have been posted, but the usual course of the post was interrupted by disturbances;

* See, for example, Gazette of India, Jan. 4, 1873, Pt. I., p. 2.

S. 114. as to illustration (g)—a man refuses to produce a document which would bear on a contract of small importance on which he is sued, but which might also injure the feelings and reputation of his family;

as to illustration (h)—a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled by law to answer, but the answer to it might cause loss to him in matters unconnected with the matter in relation to which it is asked;

as to illustration (i)—a bond is in possession of the obligor, but the circumstances of the case are such that he may have stolen it.

Rulings.

1. The evidence requisite for the corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice must proceed from an independent and reliable source, and previous statements made by the accomplice himself, though consistent with the evidence given by him at the trial, are insufficient for such corroboration. The confession of one of the prisoners cannot be used to corroborate the evidence of an accomplice against the others—REG. v. MALAPA BIN KAPANA, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 196. [Nanabhai Haridas and Larpent, JJ. July 15, 1874.]

2. The law in India, as expressed in s. 133 and s. 114 of the Evidence Act, and which is in no respect different from the law of England on the subject, is that a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal, that is, not unlawful; but experience shows that it is unsafe, and hence it is the practice of the Judges, both in England and in India when sitting alone, to guard their minds carefully against acting upon such evidence when uncorroborated, and, when trying a case with a jury, to warn the jury that such a course is unsafe. There must be some corroboration independent of the accomplice, or of a co-confessing prisoner, to show that the party accused was actually engaged directly in the commission of the crime charged against him. A second accomplice does not improve the position of the first; and if there are two, it is necessary that both should be corroborated. The accomplice must be corroborated, not only as to one, but as to all, of the persons affected by the evidence, and corroboration of his evidence as to one prisoner does not entitle his evidence against another to be accepted without corroboration R. v. Webb (6 C. and P. 595), R v. Dyke (8 C and P. 261), R. v. Addis (6 C. and P. 388), and R. v. Wilkes (7 C. and P. 272) referred to. The possession of property taken from a murdered person is not adequate corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice charging such person in possession with participation in the murder, though it would, no doubt, be corroboration of evidence that the prisoner participated in a robbery, or that he had dishonestly received stolen property. In the trial of R, S, and M, upon a charge of murder, the evidence for the prosecution consisted of (i) the confession of P, who was jointly tried with them for the same offence, (ii) the evidence of an accomplice, (iii) the evidence of witnesses who deposed to the discovery in R's house of property belonging to the deceased, and (iv) the evidence of witnesses who deposed that, on the day when the deceased was last seen alive, all the prisoners were seen together near the place where the body was afterwards found. Held that there was no sufficient corroboration of the statements of the accomplice or of the co-confessing prisoner, P.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAM SARAN, I. L. R., 8 All. 306. [Straight and Tyrrell, JJ. Nov. 11, 1885.]

3 Before the deposition of a medical witness taken by a committing Magistrate can, under s. 509 of the Criminal Procedure Code, be given in evidence at the trial before the Court of Session, it must either appear from the Magistrate's record, or be proved by the evidence of witnesses, to have been taken and attested in the accused's presence. It should not merely be presumed, under s. 114, ill (e), of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), to have been so taken and attested.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RIDING, I. L. R., 9 All. 720. [Edge, C.J. Aug. 5, 1887.]

4. Case in which, upon review, a certificate having been granted by the Advocate-General under s. 26 of the Letters Patent, a conviction was quashed on the ground of improper reception of evidence and misdirection. The accused being upon his trial at the Sessions for murder, the two principal witnesses for the prosecution were G and M, to whom pardons were tendered by the committing Magistrate under s 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and who had accepted the pardons. The Judge read to the jury statements (which had not been admitted in evidence) by G and M purporting to have been taken under s. 364. Held that the improper reception of such evidence constituted a decision erroneous in point of law calculated to prejudice the prisoner. The Judge further charged the jury that they were not to convict upon the evidence of G if satisfied that he was an accomplice and uncorroborated, but coupled the direction with a strong expression of opinion that G was not an accomplice. Held that this constituted a misdirection in fact, though not in form, calculated seriously to prejudice the prisoner's case.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. O'HARA, I. L. R., 17 Cal. 642. [Petheram, C.J., and Prinsep, Pigot, Macpherson, and Norris, JJ. Mar. 10, 1890.]

5. A revenue-official was charged with the offence of attempting to receive a bribe from certain raiyats who gave evidence for the prosecution, and he was convicted. He subsequently charged the raiyat with having conspired to bribe him; and in their trial their depositions in the previous case were ordered in evidence for the prosecution. Held that the depositions should have been admitted in evidence.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SAMIAPPA, I. L. R., 15 Mad 63 [Muttusami Ayyar and Parker, JJ. Mar. 31, and Sep. 9, 1881.]

See QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KRISHNABHAT, I. L. R., 10 Bom. 319, ruling 32, under s. 30, p. 37. Ss. 115-117.

See KACHALI HARI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 18 Cal. 129, ruling 5, under s. 80, p. 61.

On the trial of more persons than one, jointly, for the same offence, where one of them pleads guilty, the person so pleading is no longer on his trial, and cannot be treated as being jointly tried with the others. A confession by that person affecting himself and others cannot, therefore, be taken into consideration as against such others under s. 30 of the Evidence Act.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v LAKSHMAYYA PANDARAM, I. L. R., 22 Mad. 491.

CHAPTER VIII.—ESTOPPEL.

Estoppel.

115. When one person has, by his declaration, act, or omission, intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true, and to act upon such belief, neither he nor his representative shall be allowed, in any suit or proceeding between himself and such person or his representative, to deny the truth of that thing.

Illustration.

A intentionally and falsely leads B to believe that certain land belongs to A, and thereby induces B to buy and pay for it.

The land afterwards becomes the property of A, and A seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that, at the time of the sale, he had no title: He must not be allowed to prove his want of title.

Estoppel of tenant; and of licensee of person in possession.

116. No tenant of immoveable property, or person claiming through such tenant, shall, during the continuance of the tenancy, be permitted to deny that the landlord of such tenant had, at the beginning of the tenancy, a title to such immoveable property; and no person who came upon any immoveable property by the license of the person in possession thereof shall be permitted to deny that such person had a title to such possession at the time when such license was given.

Estoppel of acceptor of bill of exchange, bailee, or licensee.

117. No acceptor of a bill of exchange shall be permitted to deny that the drawer had authority to draw such bill or to endorse it; nor shall any bailee or licensee be permitted to deny that his bailor or licensor had, at the time when the bailment or license commenced, authority to make such bailment, or grant such license.

Explanation 1.—The acceptor of a bill of exchange may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn.

Explanation 2.—If a bailee delivers the goods bailed to a person other than the bailor, he may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor.

S. 118.

Chapter IX.—Of Witnesses.

118. All persons shall be competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answers to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind.

Who may testify.

Explanation.—A lunatic is not incompetent to testify, unless he is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him, and giving rational answers to them.

Rulings.

1. The Court in this case declined to act on the evidence of a child, 9 years old, who had been examined without oath, although she was a competent witness under s. 118 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), inclining to the opinion that s. 13 of the Oaths Act, by which the evidence of a witness may be received in evidence, although no oath was administered did not render the deposition of a child of 9 years, whose deposition had been taken advisedly, and not by omission without oath or solemn affirmation, admissible as evidence. — QUEEN v ANUNTO CHUCKERBUTTY, 22 W. R. 1; 14 B. L. R. 295n. [Kemp and Birch, JJ. April 20, 1874.]

2 The evidence of a child of immature age—who, the Sessions Judge considered understood the questions which were put to her, and who was, therefore, a competent witness under s 118 of the Evidence Act—taken by the Sessions Judge on a simple affirmation, because she was not aware of the responsibility of an oath, was held to be admissible as evidence under s. 13 of the Oaths Act (X of 1873). Case of Dwarkanath Dutt (7 W R 15), which ruled that a Court, before which a second trial was held has nothing to do with the evidence given in the former trial except for the purpose of ascertaining whether the offence in the two trials is the same, followed A prisoner originally charged with an offence under one section (302), and acquitted of that charge, was committed, the day following that on which she was acquitted, for trial under another section (307) without any witnesses being examined on the charge under s. 307, and without having any opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses on the first charge with respect to the second charge. Held that the irregularity was one which was not covered by s 283, Code of Criminal Procedure, and that the prisoner had been prejudiced thereby in her defence. The trial under s. 307 was accordingly quashed, and a new trial ordered.—QUEEN v MUSSAMUT ITWARYA, 22 W. R 14, 14 B. L. R. 54, Ap. 1. [Kemp and Birch, JJ. May 9, 1874.]

3. K and B were accused of being concerned in the same offence. K was first apprehended, and the Magistrate inquired into the charge against him, and committed him for trial, but the Court of Session acquitted K. The Local Government preferred an appeal against his acquittal, and the Magistrate arrested him with a view to his detention in custody until such appeal was determined While K was so detained the Magistrate inquired into the charge against B, who had meanwhile been arrested, and made K a witness for the prosecution, and committed B for trial. K's evidence was taken on B's trial. Held, per Stuart, C.J. (Spankie J. doubting), that K's arrest was lawful, and that his evidence was admissible against B. Held, per Spankie, J., that, assuming that the Magistrate looked on K as an accused person, and his arrest was lawful the Magistrate should not have examined him as a witness against B, and that, assuming that K's arrest was unlawful, and that, when he made his statements, he was a free man, his evidence, if admissible, was not evidence on which a Court should place much reliance.—EMPRESS v. KARIM BUKHSH, I. L. R. 2 All. 386 (Stuart, C.J., and Spankie, J. June 6, 1879.]

4. S. 6 of the Oaths Act (X. of 1873) imperatively requires that no person shall testify as a witness except on oath or affirmation, and, notwithstanding s. 13 of the same Act, the evidence of a child of eight or nine years of age is inadmissible if it has been advisedly recorded without any oath or affirmation Queen v. Sewa Bhogta (14 B. L. R. 294) dissented from The nature of judicial oaths and affirmations and the history of Indian legislation on the subject discussed. —QUEEN-EMPRESS v MANU, I. L. R., 10 All. 207. [Mahmood, J. Jan. 16, 1888.]

5. The competency of a person to testify as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation, and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has affirmed. In determining the question of competency, the Court, under s. 118 of the Evidence Act, has not to enter into inquiries as to the witness's religious belief, or as to his knowledge of the consequences of falsehood in this world or the next. It has to ascertain, in the best way it can, whether, from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding, he is able to give a rational account of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion. If a person of tender years or of very advanced age can satisfy these requirements, his competency, as a witness, is established. Having regard to the language of the Oaths Act (X. of 1873), a Court has no option, when once it has elected to take the statements of a person as evidence, but to administer to such person either an oath or affirmation as the case may require. Queen-Empress v. Maru (I. L. R., 10 All. 207) referred to. In a trial for murder before the Court of Session, one of the witnesses was a boy of twelve years of age, and in answer to questions put by the Sessions Judge, he said that he worshipped Debi, and understood the difference between truth and falsehood; that he did not know what would be the consequences here or hereafter of telling lies, but that he would tell the truth. The Sessions Judge proceeded to record the boy's statement, but without administering to him any oath or affirmation. Held that there was nothing in the law to sanction this procedure on the part of the Judge. The High Court required the attendance of the boy and of the accused, and, having satisfied itself of the competency of the former to depose as a witness, examined him as to his account of what had occurred.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. LAL SAHAI, I. L. R., 11 All. 183. [Straight and Tyrrell, JJ. Oct. 24, 1888.] Ss. 119-121.

119. A witness, who is unable to speak, may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, as by writing, or by signs; but such writing must be written, and the signs made, in open Court. Evidence so given shall be deemed to be oral evidence.

Dumb witnesses.

120. In all civil proceedings the parties to the suit, and the husband or wife of any party to the suit, shall be competent witnesses. In criminal proceedings against any person, the husband or wife of such person, respectively, shall be a competent witness.

Parties to civil suit and their wives or husbands.

Ruling.

Bastardy proceedings under the provisions of s. 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code are in the nature of civil proceedings within the meaning of s. 120 of the Evidence Act, and the person sought to be charged is a competent witness on his own behalf. Upon a summons charging that the defendant, having sufficient means, had refused to maintain his child by his nikâ wife whom he had subsequently divorced, the Magistrate found that the marriage had not been proved, but that, upon the other evidence adduced, including the similarity of the features and the name of the child with those of the defendant, who did not appear before him during the proceedings, but with whom he stated that he was well acquainted the child was the illegitimate child of the defendant. He accordingly made an order for maintenance under the section. Held that, under the circumstances he was wrong in taking into account the similarity of the names and the features of the child and the defendant, but as there was ample evidence of the paternity he was justified in making the order he did, as it was immaterial for the purpose of determining the liability of the defendant to maintain the child, whether the mother had been married to the defendant or not.—NUR MAHOMED v. BISMILLA JAN, I. L. R., 16 Cal. 781. [Trevelyan and Beverley, JJ. July 9, 1889.]

121. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except upon the special order of some Court to which he is subordinate, be compelled to answer any questions as to his own conduct in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, or as to anything which came to his knowledge in Court as such Judge or Magistrate; but he may be examined as to other matters which occurred in his presence whilst he was so acting.

S. 122, 123. (b.) A is accused before the Court of Session of having given false evidence before B, a Magistrate. B cannot be asked what A said, except upon the special order of the superior Court.

1. A person having to exercise judicial functions may give evidence in a case pending before him when such evidence can and must be submitted to the independent judgment of other persons exercising similar judicial functions sitting with him at the same time. A Sessions Judge is a competent witness, and the giving of evidence by him does not preclude him from dealing judicially with the evidence of which his own forms a part. A prisoner has a right to ask to have the evidence of a Sessions Judge, who is trying him, taken on a point which he thinks makes in his favour. A Sessions Judge who makes a complaint before a Magistrate is not incompetent afterwards to try it without the aid of jury, if he has no personal or pecuniary interest in the subject of the charge —QUEEN v. MOOKTA SINGH, 13 W. R. 60; 4 B. L. R., A Cr., 15. [Norman and Mitter, JJ April 20, 1870.]

2. A Sessions Judge, finding in the course of a trial, as regards the examination of the accused person taken by the committing Subordinate Magistrate, that the provisions of s. 346 of Act X. of 1872 had not been fully complied with, summoned the committing Magistrate, and took his evidence that the accused person duly made the statement recorded. The Magistrate of the district objected to this proceeding of the Sessions Judge, contending that it was "contrary to law." The Sessions Judge referred the question, whether or not his proceeding was contrary to law, to the High Court. Per Stuart, C.J., and Pearson, Oldfield, and Straight, JJ.—That the privilege given by s. 121 of Act I. of 1872 is the privilege of the witness, i e. of the Judge or Magistrate of whom the question is asked; if he waives such privilege, or does not object to answer to such question, it does not lie in the mouth of any other person to assert the privilege; the reference, the objection not having been taken by the Subordinate Magistrate, but by the Magistrate of the district, should be answered accordingly. Per Spankie, J.—That a Sessions Judge, while trying a case, cannot compel a committing Magistrate to answer questions as to his own conduct in Court as such Magistrate.—EMPRESS v. CHIDDA KHAN, I. L. R., 3 All. 573. [Stuart, C.J., and Pearson, Spankie, Oldfield, and Straight, JJ. Mar. 14, 1881.]

122. No person who is or has been married shall be compelled to disclose any communication made to him during marriage by any person to whom he is or has been married; nor shall he be permitted to disclose any such communication, unless the person who made it, or his representative in interest, consents, except in suits between married persons or proceedings in which one married person is prosecuted for any crime committed against the other.

A married woman is entitled, under s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882), to claim maintenance for her illegitimate children from the putative father. A wife can be examined as to non-access of her husband during her married life, without independent evidence being first offered to prove the illegitimacy of her children.—ROZARIO v. INGLES, I. L. R., 18 Bom. 468. [Candy and Fulton, JJ. Oct. 16, 1893.]

On a trial for the offence of breach of trust by a public servant, a letter was tendered in evidence for the prosecution which had been sent by the accused to his wife at Pondicherry, and had been found on a search of her house made there by the police. Held that the letter was admissible in evidence against the accused.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DONAGHUE, I. L. R., 22 Mad. 1. [Subramania Ayyar and Boddam, JJ. July 31, Aug. 31, and Sep. 1, 1898.]

123. No one shall be permitted to give any evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of State, except with the permission of the officer at the head of the Department concerned, who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit.

Evidence as to affairs of State.

124. No public officer shall be compelled to disclose communications made to him in official confidence, when he considers that the public interests would suffer by the disclosure. Ss. 124-125

Official communications.

125. No Magistrate or police-officer† shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence, and no revenue-officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence against the public revenue.

Information as to commission of offences.

Explanation.—"Revenue-officer" in this section means any officer employed in or about the business of any branch of the public revenue.

126. No barrister, attorney, pleader, or vakil shall, at any time, be permitted, unless with his client's express consent, to disclose any communication made to him in the course, and for the purpose, of his employment as such barrister, pleader, attorney, or vakil, by or on behalf of his client, or to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course, and for the purpose, of his professional employment, or to disclose any advice given by him to his client in the course, and for the purpose, of such employment:

Professional communications.

Provided that nothing in this section shall protect from disclosure—

(1) any such communication made in furtherance of any illegal‡ purpose;

(2) any fact observed by any barrister, pleader, attorney, or vakil in the course of his employment as such, showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of his employment.

It is immaterial whether the attention of such barrister, pleader,§ attorney, or vakil, was or was not directed to such fact by or on behalf of his client.

Explanation.—The obligation stated in this section continues after the employment has ceased.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, a client, says to B, an attorney, "I have committed forgery, and I wish you to defend me:"

As the defence of a man known to be guilty is not a criminal purpose, this communication is protected from disclosure.

(b.) A, a client, says to B, an attorney, "I wish to obtain possession of property by the use of a forged deed on which I request you to sue"

This communication, being made in furtherance of a criminal purpose, is not protected from disclosure.

(c.) A, being charged with embezzlement, retains B, an attorney, to defend him. In the course of the proceedings, B observes that an entry has been made in A's account-book, charging A with the sum said to have been embezzled, which entry was not in the book at the commencement of his employment.

This being a fact observed by B in the course of his employment, showing that a fraud has been committed since the commencement of the proceedings, it is not protected from disclosure.

The law relating to professional communications between a solicitor and a client is the same in India as in England. It is not every communication made by a client to an attorney that is privileged from disclosure. The privilege extends only to communications made to him confidentially, and with a view to obtaining professional advice. Where a solicitor claims privilege under s 126 of the Indian Evidence Act (I. of 1872), he is bound to disclose the name of his client, on whose behalf he claims the privilege. The mere fact that the client's name had been communicated to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as solicitor by another client affords no excuse, unless it was communicated to him confidentially, on the express understanding that it was not to be disclosed. But a solicitor is not at liberty, without his client's express consent, to disclose the nature of his professional employment. S. 126 of the Indian Evidence Act protects from publicity not merely the details of the business, but also its general purport, unless it be known aliunde that such business falls within proviso 1 or 2 to the section. At an interview between a solicitor and a client, the solicitor took down a certain statement made by a person named A B, who was in his client's company, and whose name was communicated to him in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment. A B was afterwards tried for defamation, and the solicitor was examined by the prosecution with reference to the statement made to him by the accused at the above interview. The solicitor was asked whether the person who had made the statement had given his name as A B. The solicitor declined to answer the question on the ground of privilege. Held that the solicitor was bound to answer the question, unless A B's name was communicated to him by his client in confidence with a view to its not being disclosed.—FRAMJI BHICAJI v. MOHANSING DHANSING, I. L. R., 18 Bom. 263. [Candy and Fulton, JJ. April 4, 1893.]

127. The provisions of section 126 shall apply to interpreters, and the clerks or servants of barristers, pleaders, attorneys, and vakils.

Section 126 to apply to interpreters, &c.

128. If any party to a suit gives evidence therein at his own instance or otherwise, he shall not be deemed to have consented thereby to such disclosure as is mentioned in section 126, and, if any party to a suit or proceeding calls any such barrister, pleader,* attorney, or vakil as a witness, he shall be deemed to have consented to such disclosure only if he questions such barrister, attorney, or vakil on matters which, but for such question, he would not be at liberty to disclose.

Privilege not waived by volunteering evidence.

129. No one shall be compelled to disclose to the Court any confidential communication which has taken place between him and his legal professional adviser, unless he offers himself as a witness, in which case he may be compelled to disclose any such communications as may appear to the Court necessary to be known in order to explain any evidence which he has given, but no others.

Confidential communications with legal advisers.

If a person, while in custody as an accused, gives information to the police as complainant in another case, his statements as such informant cannot be used as evidence against him on his trial. The depositions of witnesses given in a counter-case may be used as evidence against them on their trial as accused persons, but such depositions could only be evidence against the persons making them. Queen v. Gopal Doss (I. L. R., 3 Mad. 271) and Queen-Empress v. Ganu Sonba (I. L. R., 12 Bom. 440) followed. The mere subpœnaing of a witness, or ordering him to go into the witness-box, does not compel him to give any particular answer, or to answer any particular question. The words, "shall be compelled to give," in s. 132, Evidence Act, apply to pressure put upon a witness after he is in the box, and when he asks to be excused from answering a question. The wording of ss. 129, 130, 131, 132 and 148, Evidence Act, compared and discussed. When a party is in possession for four or five days, though it may be in wrongful possession, another party, although claiming to be the rightful owner, is not entitled to go in force to turn him out, much less is he entitled to take armed men with him for that purpose. In an affray, specific evidence as to the acts of each fighter cannot be expected, but only general evidence as to the accused taking part in it and persons who, as in this case, punted the boats on which the fight took place, and in whose interests the fight on the boats took place, were held to be just as blameworthy as the men who struck the blows. — MOHER SHEIKH v. QUEEN EMPRESS, I. L. R., 21 Cal. 392. [Trevelyan and Rampini, JJ. Aug. 28, 1893.] Ss.130-32.

130. No witness who is not a party to a suit shall be compelled to produce his title-deeds to any property, or any document in virtue of which he holds any property as pledgee or mortgagee, or any document the production of which might tend to criminate him, unless he has agreed in writing to produce them with the person seeking the production of such deeds, or some person through whom he claims.

Production of title-deeds of witness not a party.

Ruling.

See MOHER SHEIKH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 21 Cal. 392, under s. 129, supra.

131. No one shall be compelled to produce documents in his possession, which any other person would be entitled to refuse to produce if they were in his possession, unless such last-mentioned person consents to their production.

Production of documents which another person, having possession, could refuse to produce.

Ruling.

See MOHER SHEIKH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 21 Cal. 392, under s. 129, supra.

132. A witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any suit or in any civil or criminal proceeding, upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate, or may tend, directly or indirectly, to criminate, such witness, or that it will expose, or tend, directly or indirectly, to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind:

Witness not excused from answering on ground that answer will criminate.

Provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give, shall subject him to any arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer.

Proviso.

Rulings.

1. Although a person under examination as a witness is bound by his affirmation to tell the truth, if he is examined on a point on which he is likely to criminate himself, his position should be explained to him by the Magistrate, as otherwise he may be induced, through ignorance of the state of the law, to deny the existence of the facts for fear of penal consequences. Although, without such a warning, he may make a false denial, and thereby become guilty of the offence of intentionally giving false evidence, his offence will not be deserving of severe punishment.—In re JADOONATH DUTT, 2 C. L. R. 181. [Markby and Prinsep, JJ. April 18, 1878.]

2. In a small-cause suit under ch 39 of the Code of Civil Procedure on a promissory note, which was alleged to have been executed jointly by G and his son V, V filed an affidavit in order to obtain leave to defend the suit, and, having obtained leave to defend, gave evidence at the trial on his own behalf On a subsequent trial of V for forgery of his father's signature to the same promissory note, the affidavit and deposition of V in the small cause suit were admitted as evidence against V. Held by Turner, C.J., and Innes and Kindersley, JJ., that both the affidavit and the deposition were properly admitted. By Kernan and Muttusami Ayyar, JJ., that the affidavit was properly admitted, but not the deposition. Per Turner, C.J., and Innes and Kindersley, JJ.. Where an accused person has made a statement on oath voluntarily and without compulsion on the part of the Court to which the statement is made, such a state-

S. 132. ment, if relevant, may be used against him on his trial on a criminal charge. If a witness does not desire to have his answer used against him on a subsequent criminal charge, he must object to answer, although he may know beforehand that such objection, if the answer is relevant, is perfectly futile, so far as his duty to answer is concerned, and must be overruled.—QUEEN v. GOPAL DOSS, I. L. R., 3 Mad. 271. [Turner, C.J., and Innes, Kernan, Kindersley, and Muttusami Ayyar, JJ. Feb. 14, 1881.]

3. S. 132 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872) makes a distinction between those cases in which a witness voluntarily answers a question and those in which he is compelled to answer, and gives him a protection in the latter of these cases only Protection is afforded only to answers which a witness has objected to give, or which he has asked to be excused from giving, and which then he has been compelled by the Court to give. Queen v. Gopal Doss (I. L. R., 3 Mad. 271) followed. Per Birdwood, J. (dissenting): S. 132 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), read with s. 14 of the Indian Oaths Act (X. of 1873), compels a witness to answer criminating questions, and he is protected by the proviso to s. 132 from a criminal prosecution for any offence of which he criminates himself directly or indirectly by his answer, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer. It is not only when a witness asks to be excused from answering a criminating question, and his request is refused, that he is "compelled to give" the answer within the meaning of the proviso. The compulsion is operative, whether he asks to be excused or gives the answer without so asking.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANU SONBA, I. L. R., 12 Bom. 440. The accused D, a European British subject, was charged together with others, who were natives of India, under ss. 384, 385, and 389 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), with conspiring to commit extortion. D claimed to be tried by a mixed jury under s. 450 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898) The other accused, who were natives of India, then claimed to be tried separately under s. 452. The trial of D then proceeded, and at the close of the case for the prosecution he proposed to call as his witnesses the persons who had been charged with him, and who were awaiting their trial. They objected to be called. Held that he was entitled to call them as witnesses, and to examine them on oath. The words "the accused" in cl. 4 of s. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V. of 1898) mean the accused then under trial and under examination by the Court.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v DURANT, I. L. R., 23 Bom. 213. [Candy, J. Oct. 6, 1898.]

133. An accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person; and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice.

Accomplice.

Rulings.

1. An approver's uncorroborated evidence is not sufficient as proof against other persons.—QUEEN v. ISSEN MUNDLE, 3 W. R. 8. [Jackson and Glover, JJ. May 4, 1865.]

2. A jury may convict upon the evidence of an accomplice, though not corroborated, so as to show the prisoner's actual participation in the offence. S. 28, Act II. of 1855, applied only to the old Supreme Courts and the rules and practice prevailing in them, and does not show that, in the Courts of the mofussil, corroborative evidence is legally requisite to support the testimony of an accomplice.—QUEEN v. GODAI RAOUT, 5 W. R. 11. [Seton-Karr and Macpherson, JJ Jan. 16, 1866.]

3. The testimony of an accomplice is not alone sufficient for a conviction The corroboration must be on matters directly connecting the prisoner with the offence of which he is accused, and the evidence of two or more accomplices requires confirmation equally with the testimony of one.—QUEEN v. DWARKA, 5 W. R. 18; 1 Ind. Jur, N. S., 100. [Kemp, Seton-Karr, and Jackson, JJ. Jan. 25, 1866.]

4. Case of murder where those prisoners, whose conviction depended on the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices and an accessary after the fact, were acquitted. In cases of view by assessors of the scene of the alleged offence, it was held that the Judge could not delegate his own function of examining the witnesses on the spot to the assessors, who cannot, under s. 348 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV. of 1861), speak to, or communicate with, any other person than the officer appointed to conduct them to the place.—QUEEN v. CHUTTERDHAREE SINGH, 5 W. R. 59. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. April 4, 1866.]

5. When evidence is given by an approver, it is not important to consider whether a story told by the accused to him tallies with that made to another person.—QUEEN v. MEETARAM MYTEE, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 171. [Norman, Jackson, and Campbell, JJ. April 10, 1866.]

6. The uncorroborated testimony of one or more accomplice or accomplices is sufficient in law to support a conviction (see Act I. of 1872, s. 133). The evidence of accomplices should not be left to the jury without such directions and observations from the Judge as the circumstances of the case may require, pointing out to them the danger of trusting to such evidence when it is not corroborated by other evidence. The omission to do so is an error in law in the summing-up by the Judge, and is, on appeal, a ground for setting aside the conviction, when the Appellate Court thinks that the prisoner has been prejudiced by such omission, and that there has been a failure of justice. The nature and extent of the corroboration requisite explained and illustrated. The word "reverse," in ss. 419 and 426, Code of Criminal Procedure, means to make void, to set aside or annul, and not merely to change or turn into the contrary.—QUEEN v. ELAHI BUX, 5 W. R. 80; B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 459. [Peacock, C.J., and Kemp, Seton-Karr, and Phear, JJ. May 29, 1866.]

7. A verdict of guilty of dacoity against certain of the prisoners set aside on the ground of misdirection, the Judge having omitted to point out to the jury the danger of relying upon the uncorroborated testimony of accomplices.—QUEEN v. KHOTUB SHEIKH, 6 W. R. 17. [Norman and Campbell, JJ. July 2, 1866.]

8. A person may call the woman with whom he is accused of having had sexual intercourse as a witness on his behalf. A person is not, by reason of being an accomplice, disqualified from giving evidence either for or against a prisoner.—REFERENCE IN THE CASE OF SHEIKH BECHOO, 6 W. R. 92. [Kemp and Markby, JJ. Dec. 19, 1866.]

9. Held that the English practice should be followed as to the amount of corroboration required to support the evidence of an accomplice, which is, that when he speaks as to two or more persons having been concerned in the same offence, his testimony should be confirmed, not only as to the circumstances of the case, but also as to the identity of the prisoners; and that any prisoner as to whom his testimony is not supported should be acquitted. [See the comments on this case in Reg. v. Ganu bin Dhareji (6 Bom. H. C. R., Cr. Ca., 57).]—REG. v. IMAM VALAD BABAN, 3 Bom. H. C. R. 57. [Couch, C.J., and Warden, J. April 15, 1867.]

10. Conviction and sentence set aside (Glover, J., dissenting) as to two of the prisoners, on the ground that there was a misdirection to the jury, because the Judge, in summing-up, omitted to advise the jury not to convict upon the uncorroborated evidence of an approver, and because he treated as corroborative that which was no corroboration in law.—QUEEN v. NAWAB JAN, 8 W. R. 19 [Kemp, Macpherson, and Glover, JJ. June 24, 1867.]

11. The evidence of an approver, for whose appearance at the trial there was not the slightest reason, and the mere fact that in the houses of each of the four prisoners only one article of the stolen property was found, was held insufficient, under the circumstances of this case, where the best witnesses were not examined to support a conviction of the prisoners on a charge of dacoity.—QUEEN v. RAM SAGOR, 8 W. R. 57. [Loch and Seton-Karr, JJ. Aug. 5, 1867.]

12. A prisoner should not be convicted on the sole and uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice who was made a witness after a pardon was granted to him.—QUEEN v. NUNHOO, 9 W. R. 28. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Mar. 8, 1868.]

13. There is no rule of law that the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is insufficient for a conviction. The proper form of the charge to the assessors in such cases stated.—PRO., Mar. 20, 1868, 4 Mad. H. C. R., Ap., 7.

14. In a case in which the principal evidence against an accused is the evidence of an approver, the Sessions Judge should carefully warn the jury of the infirmity which attaches to that evidence, and he should also tell them (if the fact be so) that the approver is speaking under the influence of an offer of conditional pardon. The corroboration of the evidence of an approver should arise from other evidence relative to facts which implicate the prisoner in the same way as the story of the approver does. Evidence of character and previous conduct of a prisoner, being matters of prejudice, and not direct evidence of facts relevant to the charge against the prisoner, ought not to be allowed to go to the jury.—QUEEN v. BYKUNT NATH BANERJEE, 10 W. R. 17; 3 B. L. R 30. [Phear and Hobhouse, JJ. July 14, 1868.]

15. Where the Magistrate erroneously treated a witness as an accomplice, and granted him a conditional pardon, held that his evidence did not require corroboration.—REG. v. FATTECHAND VASTACHAND, 5 Bom. H. C. R. 85. [Warden and Sargent, JJ. Sep. 2, 1868.]

S. 133. 16. A Sessions Judge should not permit the evidence of an approver, who was examined as a witness before the committing Magistrate, to be laid before the jury by whom the prisoners were tried.—PRO., Oct. 31, 1868, 5 Mad. H. C. R., Ap., 21.

17. Held that, where the prisoners were charged under s 148 of the Penal Code of rioting armed with deadly weapons, and also, under s 324, of voluntarily causing hurt by dangerous weapons, they should have been sentenced only under one or other of these sections, the charges being, properly speaking, only alternative charges. The High Court refused to interfere with the reception by the Sessions Judge of the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices.—QUEEN v. DINA SHEIKH, 10 W. R. 63; 3 B. L. R. 15n. [Phear and Hobhouse, JJ. Dec. 15, 1868.]

18. Rule as to corroboration of the evidence of approvers laid down generally, and in a case where the charge is one of belonging to a gang of dacoits under s. 400 of the Penal Code.—QUEEN v. KALA CHAND DAS, 11 W. R. 21. [Norman and Jackson, JJ. Mar. 10, 1869.]

19. The unsupported evidence of an approver (especially if in itself unsatisfactory) is not sufficient to support a conviction.—QUEEN v. CHIRAG ALI, 12 W. R. 5. [Macpherson and Jackson, JJ. June 14, 1869.]

20. Held that where the evidence of an accomplice is uncorroborated, the correct practice requires a Sessions Judge, not merely to tell the jury that it is unusual to convict on such evidence, but that he should also tell them that it is unsafe, and contrary both to prudence and practice to do so, yet that his omission to state this does not amount to an error in law. Reg v Imam salad Baban (3 Bom. H. C. R., Cr. Ca., 57) commented on.—REG. v. GANU BIN DHAROJI, 6 Bom. H. C. R. 57. [Couch, C.J., and Warden, J. Sep. 22, 1869.]

21. Where a Sessions Judge, in his charge to the jury in a case in which an approver-accomplice gave his evidence, drew the attention of the jury to the necessity for requiring corroboration to the approver's evidence before they could convict upon it, and the jury, notwithstanding his charge, convicted upon the uncorroborated evidence of the accomplice, it was held, following a Full Bench case cited that the High Court could not interfere with such conviction. Where a Sessions Judge omitted in his charge to the jury to comment on different parts of the evidence for the defence, to which he simply alluded as being unimportant, and allowed evidence as to character and hearsay evidence to go to the jury, the High Court acquitted the prisoner, the other evidence in the case being insufficient for conviction. Evidence as to character ought not to be laid before a jury, but should only be taken and considered by the Sessions Judge in awarding punishment.—QUEEN v. MOHIMA CHUNDER DASS, 15 W. R. 37; 6 B. L. R., Ap., 108. [Jackson and Mookerjee, JJ. Mar. 8, 1871.]

22. Where, although the Judge thought that the evidence of two witnesses was inadmissible against the prisoner as being the evidence of accomplices, yet he did not think the evidence in the case legally sufficient to justify the conviction of the prisoner, the High Court declined to interfere under s. 404, Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV of 1861), considering that the question of admissibility was a quite different matter from that of credibility.—GOVT. OF BENGAL v. KAZIMUDDIN, 18 W. R. 3. [Bayley and Mitter, JJ. May 15, 1872.]

23. The corroboration which is needed in order to make the testimony of an approver-witness trustworthy should be corroboration derived from evidence which is independent of accomplices, and not vitiated by the accomplice-character of the witness, and, further, should be such as to support that portion of the accomplice's testimony which makes out that the prisoner was present at the time when the crime was committed, and participated in the acts of commission. The statement must not merely be generally true, but true in the particular points which affect the persons accused.—QUEEN v. MOHESH BISWAS, 19 W. R 16, 10 B L. R 455n [Phear and Amslie, JJ. Jan. 23, 1873.]

24. Although, under s. 133 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), the conviction of a prisoner, on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, is not illegal, the Court, having reference to ill. (b), s. 114 of that Act, considered in this case that the accomplice was unworthy of credit.—QUEEN v. LUCHMEE PERSHAD, 19 W. R. 43. [Kemp and Pontifex, JJ. Mar. 5, 1873.]

25. Under s. 133 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), a conviction is not illegal, merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice.—QUEEN v. KOA, 19 W. R. 48. [Kemp, J. Mar. 22, 1873.]

26 Although, by s. 133, Act I. of 1872, an accomplice is a competent witness against an accused person, and a conviction would not be illegal, merely because it proceeded upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, yet it would be unsafe, where the testimony of the accomplice is not corroborated in any material point, except by the confession of a fellow-prisoner whose testimony likewise requires corroboration to convict the accused.—QUEEN v. UDHAN BIND, 19 W. R. 68. [Kemp and Phear, JJ. April 28, 1873.]

27. The Court (Mitter and Pontifex, JJ. Glover, J., dissenting) refused to convict in this case on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, who had previously been convicted of the same offence on her own confession. Per Glover, J.—In a case triable by the Sessions Court, a Magistrate has power to commit the accused to the Sessions after he has once discharged him. Quære.—If the jury in a Sessions trial are not sworn, is the omission one which could be covered by s. 13 of the Oaths Act (X. of 1873)?—QUEEN v. RAMSODOY CHUCKERBUTTY, 20 W. R. 19. [Glover, Mitter, and Pontifex, JJ. June 9, 1873.]

28. An accused person cannot be convicted solely upon the evidence of persons who are more or less participators in the crime of which he is accused. Where a witness admits that he was cognizant of the crime as to which he testifies and took no means to prevent or disclose it, his evidence must be considered as no better than that of an accomplice—QUEEN v. CHANDO CHANDALINEE, 24 W. R. 55. [Markby and McDonell, JJ. Sep. 13, 1875.]

29. A conviction based on the testimony of approvers, uncorroborated as to the identity of the accused person, cannot be sustained, and confessions of co-prisoners implicating him cannot be accepted as sufficient corroboration of such testimony.—REG. v. BUDHU NANKU, I. L. R., 1 Bom 475 [Westropp, C.J., and Nanabhai Haridas, J. 1876.]

30. S. 133 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), in unmistakable terms, lays it down that a conviction is not illegal, merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, and to hold that corroboration is necessary is to refuse to give effect to this provision. The rule in s. 114 of the Evidence Act coincides with the rule observed in England, that though the evidence of an accomplice should be carefully examined and received with caution, and may be treated as unworthy of credit, yet, if the jury or the Court credits the evidence, a conviction proceeding upon it is not illegal. —REG. v. RAMASAMI PADAYACHI, I. L. R., 1 Mad. 394. [Morgan, C.J., and Kindersley, J. Mar. 15, 1878.]

31. Per Field, J.—That there is a grave doubt whether the deposition of an approver, taken before the committing Magistrate, may be used as evidence against his accomplices on their trial before the Sessions Court, the conditional pardon of the approver having been withdrawn. Where a conditional pardon, granted to an approver, is withdrawn under s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the Sessions Court, the Judge ought to wait till the conclusion of the trial of the accomplices, and then, before passing judgment on them, if found guilty, proceed against the approver.—IN THE MATTER OF JOYUDDEE PARAMANICK, 7 C. L. R. 66. [White and Field, JJ. 1880.] S. 133

32. Quære.—Whether the deposition of an approver taken before the committing Magistrate may be used in the Sessions Court as evidence against accomplices, the approver having retracted his former statement, and the conditional pardon having, in consequence, been withdrawn. See Joyuddee Paramanick, 7 C. L. R. 66.—NANHA MALLA v. EMPRESS, 13 C. L. R. 326. [Prinsep and Tottenham, JJ. Aug. 31, 1883.]

33. It is open to a Judge, in charging the jury, to express his opinion as to the effect of a certain portion of the evidence; but he should always be careful to add that it is for the jury to form their own opinion. Exact correspondence in details of several statements made by an approver in the course of a trial is not corroborative evidence such as is ordinarily required to make it safe to convict a particular prisoner. Confessions of prisoners are not, as against their fellow-prisoners, who were not present when the confessions were made, such corroborative evidence of the statement of an approver as would justify the conviction of the other prisoners thereon. Confessions of two of several accused persons made in the absence of the others are of no weight against the latter. Such confessions, as well as the statements of approvers, are always regarded as tainted; because, from the position occupied by the person making them, they are not entitled to the same weight as the evidence of ordinary witnesses. An accused person is not bound to account for his movements at or about the time an offence was committed, unless there has been given legal evidence sufficient, primâ facie, to convict him of the offence. —QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BEPIN BISWAS, I. L. R., 10 Cal 970. [Prinsep and Macpherson, JJ. June 26, 1884.]

34. A Court of Session, under s. 338 of the Criminal Procedure Code, tendered a pardon to an accused person charged jointly with two others for the same offence, who had pleaded guilty. The tender was accepted, and such person was examined as a witness against the other accused. Held that the tender of pardon was not improperly made, and the evidence of the approver was admissible. Per Duthoit, J.—The word "supposed" in s. 338 must be taken merely as intended to exclude the

S. 133. case of a man who has actually been convicted of the crime, and not the case of a man who, although admitted to be a party to the crime, is unconvicted.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KALLU, I. L. R., 7 All. 160. [Petheram, C.J., and Duthoit, J. Nov. 14, 1884.]

35. Criminal Courts dealing with an approver's evidence in a case where several persons are charged should require corroboration of his statements in respect of the identity of each of the individuals accused. Queen-Empress v. Ram Saran (I. L. R., 8 All. 306), Queen-Empress v. Kure (2 Weekly Notes, 1886, p. 65), and Reg. v Mullins (3 Cox C. C. 526) referred to. A, B, M, R, and N, were tried together on a charge under s. 460 of the Penal Code. The principal evidence against all of them was that of an approver. Against A, B, and M, there was the further evidence that they produced certain portions of the property stolen on the night of the crime from the house where the crime was committed. With regard to R, it was proved that he was present when B pointed out the place where some of the property was dug up, but he did not appear to have said anything, or give any directions about it. Held, with reference to A, B, and M, that it could not be said that their recent possession of part of the stolen property, so soon after it had been stolen, was not such corroboration of the approver's evidence of their participation in the crime as entitled the Court to act upon his story in regard to those particular persons. Held that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient material to warrant the inference of guilty knowledge on R's part, and, with regard to N, no property was found with him, or produced through his instrumentality, both R and N ought to have been acquitted—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BALDEO, I. L. R., 8 All. 509. [Straight, Offg. C J. June 28, 1886.]

36. Per Edge, C.J.: Although, as a general rule it would be most unsafe to convict an accused person on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, such evidence must, like that of any other witness, be considered and weighed by the Judge, who, in doing so, should not overlook the position in which the accomplice, at the time of giving his evidence, may stand, and the motives which he may have for stating what is false. If the Judge, after making due allowance for these considerations and the probabilities of the story, comes to the conclusion that the evidence of the accomplice, although uncorroborated, is true, and the evidence, if believed, establishes the guilt of the prisoner, it is his duty to convict. Reg. v. Ramasami Padayachi (I. L. R., 1 Mad. 394), Empress v. Hardeo Das (Weekly Notes, 1884, p. 286), and Queen-Empress v. Ram Saran (I. L. R., 8 All. 306) referred to. Queen-Empress v. Ram Saran (I. L. R., 8 All. 306) explained and distinguished by Straight, J. Per Brodhurst, J., contra: Observations as to the necessity of corroboration in material particulars of the evidence of accomplice-witnesses. Queen-Empress v. Ram Saran (I. L. R., 8 All. 306), Queen v. Ramsodoy Chuckerbutty (20 W. R. Cr. 19), and Reg. v. Budhu Nanku (I. L. R., 1 Bom. 475) referred to. Per Edge, C.J., and Straight, J.: Every case, as it arises, must be decided on its own facts, and not on supposed analogies to other cases. Queen-Empress v. Gayadin (I. L. R., 4 All. 148) distinguished. Queen-Empress v. Gayadin (I. L. R., 4 All. 148) followed by Brodhurst, J., as to the principles applicable to the determination of appeals preferred by the Local Government from judgments of acquittal Per Edge, C.J.: In capital cases, where the Local Government appeals, under s. 417 of the Criminal Procedure Code, from an order of acquittal, it is, generally speaking, undesirable that the prisoner's fate should be discussed while he remains at large; and the Government should, in such cases, apply for the arrest of the accused under s 427 of the Code.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GOBARDHAN, I. L R, 9 All. 528 [Edge, C J, and Straight and Brodhurst, JJ. June 10, 1887.]

37. A Judge should caution a jury not to accept the evidence of an approver unless it is corroborated: the omission to do so amounts to misdirection. — QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ARUMUGA, I. L. R., 12 Mad. 196. [Collins, C J., and Muttusami Ayyar, J. Nov. 22, 1888.]

38. A prisoner charged before a Magistrate at Benares with offences punishable under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code, made a confession to the Magistrate in respect of those offences. He was then sent in custody to Calcutta, and was there, together with other persons, charged before a Magistrate with offences punishable under ss. 467, 473, and 475. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first mentioned had reference. Under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the conditions specified in that section, and the prisoner accepted the pardon, and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated, and accordingly discharged all the accused, but the pardon was not withdrawn, and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statements, or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was tendered. Subsequently, the pri-sooner was committed by the Magistrate of Benares for trial before the Court of Session upon the charges under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code. He pleaded not guilty, but did not in terms plead the pardon as a bar to the trial, though he made some reference to the subject; and the Sessions Judge, having made a brief inquiry as to the proceedings at Calcutta, came to the conclusion that there was no sufficient [illegible] of any conditional pardon, and convicted and sentenced the accused. Held that, by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate, the conditions of which were satisfied as was shown by its never having been withdrawn, the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss. 471, 472, and 474, and was not liable to be proceeded against in respect of them, and that the trial and conviction were, therefore, illegal. Although s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not in terms cover a case where a Magistrate, holding a preliminary inquiry for committal against several persons, tenders a conditional pardon to one of them, examines him as a witness, and subsequently discharges all the accused for want of a primâ-facie case against them, the words, "every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case," mean that for all purposes (subject to failure to satisfy the conditions of the pardon as provided for by s. 339) such a person ceases to be triable for the offence or offences under inquiry, or (with reference to s. 339) for "any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter," while making "a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences" directly under inquiry. The words last quoted refer to the importance, when a pardon is tendered, of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how far the pardon protects him, and what portion of it should not protect him, ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GUNGA CHARAN, I. L. R., 11 All. 79. [Straight, J. Nov. 23, 1888.]

S. 133.

39. The accused, who were classers employed in the Revenue Survey Department, were charged, under s. 161 of the Indian Penal Code, with taking bribes from the rayats of certain villages. The only evidence against the accused was that of persons who had either subscribed to the bribes, or collected subscription, or paid the money to the accused. They stated that they had offered the bribes, because the classers had threatened to raise the assessment, cut down the hedges, and erect new boundary-marks. As regards this evidence, the trying Magistrate remarked that, even if all the witnesses for the prosecution were treated as accomplices, it was open to him to convict on their uncorroborated testimony, as "there was inherent truth in their statements, and circumstances existed which negatived the presumption of a conspiracy, and evidenced signs of truthfulness." The Magistrate was also of opinion that there was a distinction between accomplices who volunteered to assist in the receipt of illegal gratifications and those who assisted under compulsion. In the opinion of the Magistrate, the witnesses in the present case belonged to the latter class, and there was no reason to disbelieve their evidence. He therefore convicted the accused under s. 161 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them to rigorous imprisonment and fine. Held (Scott, J., dissenting) that the convictions were illegal, there being no evidence to corroborate the witnesses for the prosecution, all of whom were accomplices. Held also (Scott, J., dissenting) that there was such error in the consideration by the Magistrate of the evidence as to prejudice the accused, and such a failure of justice as to justify the Court, in revision, in setting aside the convictions. Per Curiam: The limits of the application of the doctrine of necessity as an excuse for an act otherwise criminal are those prescribed in s. 94 of the Penal Code. Therefore, witnesses, who, in order to avoid pecuniary injury or personal molestation, had offered or given bribes to a public servant, were abettors of the offence of taking an illegal gratification, and their evidence should be treated as that of accomplices. By the law, both of India and England, the evidence of an accomplice is admissible, and a conviction is not illegal, because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice (s 133 of the Evidence Act, I. of 1872). But the presumption that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless corroborated in material particulars, has become a rule of practice of almost universal application. Per Scott, J.: There may be, however, cases of an exceptional character in which the accomplice-evidence alone convinces a Judge; and, if he acts on that conviction, with the character of the witnesses clearly present in his mind, a Revisional Court ought not to interfere in the absence of other circumstances showing a want of judicial discretion. Per Jardine, J.: The mere circumstance of a person being present on a lawful occasion does not raise a presumption of that person's complicity in an offence then committed, so as to make s. 34 of the Penal Code applicable — Reg. v. Farler (8 C. & P. 106). Where the Magistrate, on that ground, did make that presumption against an accused person,

Ss. 34-36. and applied the provisions of s. 34, he committed an error in law, and the High Court, as a Court of Rivision, might acquit the accused. — QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MAGANLAL AND MOTILAL, I. L. R., 14 Bom. 115. [Bayley, Scott, and Jardine, JJ. Sep 24, 1889.]

Rulings.

1. Held by the majority of the Court (Campbell, J., dissenting) that the evidence of one witness uncorroborated is not legally sufficient for a conviction of perjury.—QUEEN v. LAL CHAND COWRAH CHOWKEEDAR, 5 W. R. 23; I. Ind Jur. N. S. 83. [Peacock, C.J., and Bayley, Norman, Pundit, and Campbell, JJ Feb. 7, 1866.]

2. Comparison of signatures is one kind of corroboration which would justify a conviction on the testimony of a single witness in a case of false evidence.—QUEEN v. BAKHOREE CHOWREY, 5 W. R. 98 [Seton-Karr, J. June 5, 1866.]

3. A person accused of perjury is entitled to have the specific charge made against him tried quite independently of a like charge against another person, and the Court of Session must find judicially whether all, or, if not all, which of the particular charges of perjury, where there is more than one charge, is made out against each prisoner. A conviction for perjury, moreover, should not be sustained on the bare testimony of one witness.—QUEEN v. KHOAB LAL, 9 W. R. 66. [Phear and Hobhouse, JJ. May 12, 1868.]

4. The evidence of one witness in cases of perjury is sufficient to establish the factum of the statement which is charged as being false. The measure of punishment is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Court of Session.—QUEEN v. ISSEN CHUNDER GHOSE PATRI, 14 W. R. 53. [Jackson and Mitter, JJ. Sep. 12, 1870.]

CHAPTER X.—OF THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

Order of production and examination of witnesses.

135. The order in which witnesses are produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the time being relating to civil and criminal procedure respectively, and, in the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the Court.

Judge to decide as to admissibility of evidence.

136. When either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask the party proposing to give the evidence in what manner the alleged fact, if proved, would be relevant; and the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks that the fact, if proved, would be relevant, and not otherwise.

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such last-mentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the fact first mentioned, unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact, and the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved, the Judge may, in his discretion, either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

Illustrations.

(a.) It is proposed to prove a statement about a relevant fact by a person alleged to be dead, which statement is relevant under section 32.

The fact that the person is dead must be proved by the person proposing to prove the statement before evidence is given of the statement.

(b.) It is proposed to prove, by a copy, the contents of a document said to be lost.

The fact that the original is lost must be proved by the person proposing to produce the copy, before the copy is produced.

(c.) A is accused of receiving stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen.

It is proposed to prove that he denied the possession of the property.

The relevancy of the denial depends on the identity of the property. The Court may, in its discretion, either require the property to be identified before the denial of the possession is proved, or permit the denial of the possession to be proved before the property is identified.

(d.) It is proposed to prove a fact (A), which is said to have been the cause or effect of a fact in issue. There are several intermediate facts (B, C, and D), which must be proved to exist before the fact (A) can be regarded as the cause or effect of the fact in issue. The Court may either permit A to be proved before B, C, or D is proved, or may require proof of B, C, and D before permitting proof of A.

Examination-in-chief.

137. The examination of a witness by the party who calls him shall be called his examination-in-chief.

Cross-examination.

The examination of a witness by the adverse party shall be called his cross-examination.

Re-examination.

The examination of a witness, subsequent to the cross-examination, by the party who called him, shall be called his re-examination.

Ruling.

One accused person may cross-examine a witness called by another co-accused for his defence when the case of the second accused is adverse to that of the first.—RAM CHAND CHATTERJEE v. HANIF SHEIKH, I. L. R., 21 Cal. 401. [Trevelyan and Rampini, JJ. Nov. 17, 1893.]

Order of examinations. Direction of re-examination.

138. Witnesses shall be first examined-in-chief, then (if the adverse party so desires) cross-examined, then (if the party calling him so desires) re-examined.

The examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts, but the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination-in-chief.

The re-examination shall be directed to the explanation of matters referred to in cross-examination; and if new matter is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross-examine upon that matter.

Rulings.

1. It is irregular to allow a witness to be examined on behalf of the prosecution after the prisoner had made his defence, when the witness is not a witness to contradict any new case set up by the prisoner. Where, however, the prisoner had full notice of the evidence which was to be given by such witness, and made his defence in allusion to the evidence of the witness, the High Court refused to set aside the conviction, having regard to s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code.—QUEEN v. SHAM KISHORE HOLDAR, 13 W. R. 36. [Norman, Offg. C.J., and Bayley, J. Mar. 5, 1870.]

2. Where a riot occurred and complaints were lodged by both parties, the witnesses for the prosecution were in each case in turn examined-in-chief, then also in turn cross-examined, and in like manner re-examined, and the Court thereupon discharged the accused in one case, and called upon the accused in the other to go into his defence. held that the procedure adopted was improper, and there should be a new trial. Empress v. Chandra Nath Sircar (I. L. R., 7 Cal. 65; 8 C. L R. 352) followed. The provisions of s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code in no way affects the powers of the High Court as a Court of Revision vested in it by the High Courts Act.—IN THE MATTER OF CHAKOWRI LALL, 13 C. L. R. 275 [Prinsep, J. Aug. 13, 1883.]

3 At the trial of a party of Hindus for rioting, the Magistrate, instead of examining the witnesses for the prosecution, caused to be produced copies of the examination-in-chief of the same witnesses which had been recorded at a previous trial of a party of

s. 139-45. Muhammadans who were opposed by the Hindus in the same riot. These copies were read out to the witnesses, who were then cross-examined by the prisoners, and no objection to this procedure was taken on the prisoner's behalf. The accused were convicted. Held that, although the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was irregular, the irregularity was cured by the provisions of s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code and of s. 167 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), as it was not shown that there had been any failure of justice, or that the accused had been substantially prejudiced, and as the matters elicited in cross-examination were sufficient to sustain the conviction.—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NAND RAM, I. L. R., 9 All. 609. [Mahmood, J. April 30, 1887.]

See NOOR BUX KAZI v. EMPRESS, I. L. R., 6 Cal. 279; 7 C. L. R. 385, ruling 24, under s. 30, pp. 35-36.

Cross-examination of person called to produce a document.

139. A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it, and cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness.

Witnesses to character.

140. Witnesses to character may be cross-examined and re-examined.

Leading questions.

141. Any question suggesting the answer which the person putting it wishes or expects to receive is called a leading question.

When they must not be asked.

142. Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination-in-chief, or in a re-examination, except with the permission of the Court.

The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory or undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved.

When they may be asked

143. Leading questions may be asked in cross-examination.

Evidence to matters in writing.

144. Any witness may be asked, whilst under examination, whether any contract, grant, or other disposition of property as to which he is giving evidence, was not contained in a document; and, if he says that it was, or if he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document, which, in the opinion of the Court, ought to be produced, the adverse party may object to such evidence being given until such document is produced, or until facts have been proved which entitle the party who called the witness to give secondary evidence of it.

Explanation.—A witness may give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts.

The question is, whether A assaulted B:

C deposes that he heard A say to D, "B wrote a letter accusing me of theft, and I will be revenged on him." This statement is relevant as showing A's motive for the assault, and evidence may be given of it, though no other evidence is given about the letter.

Cross-examination as to previous statements in writing.

145. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or reduced into writing, and relevant to matters in question, without such writing being shown to him, or being proved; but, if it is intended to contradict him by the writing,* his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. Ss. 146-148

Rulings.

1. Remarks upon the objectionable practice of permitting police-officers to conduct prosecutions in the Sessions Court. A witness, when under examination-in-chief before the Court of Session, should not have his attention directed to his deposition before the Magistrate. He may, under s 23, Act II. of 1855, be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, when his attention may be drawn to the parts of the former writing which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. —QUEEN v. RAM CHANDER SIRCAR, 13 W. R. 18. [Kemp and Jackson, JJ. Jan 29, 1870.]

2. Although previous statements made by witnesses may be used, under s. 145 of the Evidence Act, for the purpose of contradicting statements made by them subsequently at the trial of an accused person, they cannot, if they have been made in the absence of the accused, be treated as independent evidence of his guilt or innocence; s. 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code will not avail anything for this purpose. Where witnesses appeared to have taken an active part in carrying away a person after he had been grievously assaulted and was in a helpless condition, and then leaving him in a field where he was subsequently found dead, held that their evidence was no better than that of accomplices; at any rate, it would be most unsafe for the Court to rely upon their evidence, unless corroborated in material respects. in convicting the accused.—ALIMUDDIN v QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 23 Cal. 361. [Ghose and Hill, JJ. Oct. 11, 1895.]

146. When a witness is cross-examined, he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend—

Questions lawful in cross-examination.

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who he is, and what is his position in life, or

(3) to shake his credit by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend, directly or indirectly, to criminate him, or might expose, or tend, directly or indirectly, to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.

147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of section 132 shall apply thereto.

When witness to be compelled to answer.

148. If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may, if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

Court to decide when question shall be asked, and when witness compelled to answer.

(1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time, or of such a character, that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:

(3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence:

(4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer, if given, would be unfavourable.

Ss. 149-53.

See QUEEN v. GOPAL DASS, I. L. R., 3 Mad. 271, ruling 2, under s. 132, at pp. 79-80.

149. No such question as is referred to in section 148 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well-founded.

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds.

Illustrations.

(a.) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dakait: This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(b.) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dakait. The informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(c.) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dakait · There are here no reasonable grounds for the question.

(d.) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, being questioned as to his mode of life and means of living, gives unsatisfactory answers: This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dakait.

150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable grounds, it may, if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil, or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil, or attorney, is subject in the exercise of his profession.

Procedure of Court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds.

151. The Court may forbid any questions or inquiries which it regards as indecent or scandalous, although such questions or inquiries may have some bearing on the questions before the Court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed.

Indecent and scandalous questions.

152. The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy, or which, though proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form.

Questions intended to insult or annoy.

153. When a witness has been asked, and has answered, any question which is relevant to the inquiry only in so far as it tends to shake his credit by injuring his character, no evidence shall be given to contradict him; but, if he answers falsely, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Exclusion of evidence to contradict answers to questions testing veracity.

Exception 1.—If a witness is asked whether he has been previously convicted of any crime, and denies it, evidence may be given of his previous conviction.

Exception 2.—If a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality, and answers it by denying the facts suggested, he may be contradicted.

Illustrations.

(a.) A claim against an underwriter is resisted on the ground of fraud.

The claimant is asked whether, in a former transaction, he had not made a fraudulent claim. He denies it,

Evidence is offered to show that he did make such a claim:

The evidence is inadmissible.

(b) A witness is asked whether he was not dismissed from a situation for dishonesty. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that he was dismissed for dishonesty:

The evidence is not admissible.

(c.) A affirms that on a certain day he saw B at Lahore.

A is asked whether he himself was not on that day at Calcutta. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that A was on that day at Calcutta:

The evidence is admissible, not as contradicting A on a fact which affects his credit, but as contradicting the alleged fact that B was seen on the day in question in Lahore.

In each of these cases the witness might, if his denial was false, be charged with giving false evidence.

(d.) A is asked whether his family has not had a blood-feud with the family of B against whom he gives evidence.

He denies it. He may be contradicted on the ground that the question tends to impeach his impartiality.

Rulings.

S. 11 of the Evidence Act should not be construed in its widest signification, but considered as limited in the effect by s. 34 of the Act. So construed, s 11 renders inadmissible the evidence of one crime (not reduced to legal certainty by a conviction) to prove the existence of another unconnected crime, even though it be cognate Accordingly, the possession by an accused person of a number of documents suspected to be forged is evidence to prove that he has forged the particular document, with the forgery of which he is charged. Per West, J.—Where a person charges another with having forged a promissory note, and denies having ever executed any promissory note at all, the evidence that a note, similar to the one alleged to be forged, was, in fact, executed by that person, is not admissible, nor even would a judgment founded upon such note be so (ss. 43 and 153 of the Evidence Act).—REG. v. PARBHUDAS AMBARAM, 11 Bom. H. C. R 90. [Melvill and West, JJ. Jan. 2, 1874.]

See REG. v. SAKHARAM MUKUNDJI, 11 Bom H. C. R. 166, ruling 1, under s. 5, p. 5.

Question by party to his own witness.

154. The Court may, in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

Ruling.

The mere fact that at a Sessions trial a witness tells a different story from that told by him before the Magistrate does not necessarily make him hostile. The proper inference to be drawn from contradictions going to the whole texture of the story is not that the witness is hostile to this side or to that, but that the witness is one who ought not to be believed unless supported by other satisfactory evidence.—KALACHAND SIRCAR v. QUEEN-EMPRESS, I. L. R., 13 Cal. 53. [Wilson and Porter, JJ. April 16, 1886].

Impeaching credit of witness.

155. The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways by the adverse party or, with the consent of the Court, by the party who calls him—

(1) by the evidence of persons who testify that they, from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit;

(2) by proof that the witness has been bribed, or has accepted* the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence;

(3) by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted;

(4) when a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character.

* The word "accepted" has been substituted for the word "had" by Act XVIII. of 1872, s. 11.

Explanation.—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted, though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

The evidence is admissible.

Rulings.

A statement reduced to writing by a police-officer under s. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X. of 1882) cannot be used as evidence for the accused. But though it is not evidence, the police-officer to whom it was made may use it to refresh his memory under s. 159 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), and may be cross-examined upon it by the party against whom the testimony aided by it is given. The person making the statement may also be questioned about it; and, with a view to impeach his credit, the police-officer, or any other person in whose hearing the statement was made, can be examined on the point under s. 155 of the Evidence Act. Reg. v. Uttamchand (11 Bom. H. C. R. 120) followed. — QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SITARAM VITHAL, I. L. R., 11 Bom. 657. [West and Birdwood, JJ. Mar. 24, 1887.]

156. When a witness, whom it is intended to corroborate, gives evidence of any relevant fact, he may be questioned as to any other circumstances which he observed at or near to the time or place at which such relevant fact occurred, if the Court is of opinion that such circumstances, if proved, would corroborate the testimony of the witness as to the relevant fact which he testifies.

Questions tending to corroborate evidence of relevant fact, admissible.

157. In order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact at or about the time when the fact took place, or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact, may be proved.

Former statements of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact.

The accused complained to the police that A and B had robbed him. After inquiry the police reported to the Magistrate that the charge was false. The Magistrate thereupon struck off the case without holding any further inquiry himself. The accused was subsequently charged and convicted under s. 211 of the Penal Code of making a false charge. On appeal it was contended that as the accused had not been given an opportunity of substantiating his complaint before a Magistrate, his prosecution was illegal, or at the most he ought to have been charged under s. 182, and not s. 211. Held that, in order to constitute an offence under s. 211, it was not necessary that the complaint should be made to a Magistrate. It was enough that it was made to the police-authorities and related to a cognizable offence, and that action was thereupon taken by the police. Held, also, that the fact that no opportunity was allowed to the accused by the Magistrate to substantiate his complaint before striking it off was not a circumstance which invalidated the commitment duly made, and the conviction otherwise good could not be set aside on account of such omission. The trial before the committing Magistrate and in the Sessions Court gave ample opportunity to the accused to substantiate his complaint, and he was not prejudiced by the omission. The positive prohibition under s. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X. of 1882), viz., that statements to the police other than dying declarations shall not be used in evidence against the accused, cannot be set aside by reference to s. 157 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872).—IMPERATRIX v. JIJIBHAI GOVIND, I. L. R., 22 Bom. 596. [Parsons and Ranade, JJ. Dec. 14, 1896.]

What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under section 32 or 33.

158. Whenever any statement relevant under section 32 or 33 is proved, all matters may be proved, either in order to contradict or to corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved if that person had been called as a witness, and had denied upon cross-examination the truth of the matter suggested.

Refreshing memory.

159. A witness may, while under examination, refresh his memory by referring to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned, or so soon afterwards that the Court considers it likely that the transaction was at that time fresh in his memory.

The witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person and read by the witness within the time aforesaid, if, when he read it, he knew it to be correct.

When witness may use copy of document to refresh memory.

Whenever a witness may refresh his memory by reference to any document, he may, with the permission of the Court, refer to a copy of such document: Provided the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient reason for the non-production of the original.

An expert may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises.

Rulings.

1. In giving evidence a police-officer may refresh his memory by referring to documents in which he has, under s. 119 of Act X. of 1872, reduced into writing statements of persons examined by him during an investigation, but the documents themselves cannot be used as evidence, and a Judge should not read such documents to a jury in order to point out discrepancies between the evidence and previous statements of the witnesses. The evidence of a medical man who has seen, and has made a post-mortem examination of, the corpse of the person touching whose death the inquiry is, is admissible, firstly, to prove the nature of injuries which he observed; and, secondly, as evidence of the opinion of an expert as to the manner in which those injuries were inflicted, and as to the cause of death. A medical man who has not seen the corpse is

Ss. 160-64. only in a position to give evidence of his opinion as an expert. The proper mode of eliciting such evidence is to put to the witness hypothetically the facts which the evidence of the other witnesses attempts to prove, and to ask the witness's opinion on those facts. S. 323 of Act X. of 1872 does not in any way preclude the Judge at a Sessions trial from calling and examining the medical witness who has been examined before the Magistrate, and in every case in which the deposition taken by the Magistrate is essentially deficient or requires further elucidation, such witness should be called and examined by the Sessions Judge. A medical man, in giving evidence, may refresh his memory by referring to a report which he has made of his post-mortem examination, but the report itself cannot be treated as evidence, and no facts can be taken therefrom.—ROGHUNI SINGH v EMPRESS, I. Testimony to facts stated in document mentioned in section 159.

160. A witness may also testify to facts mentioned in any such document as is mentioned in section 159, although he has no specific recollection of the facts themselves, if he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document.

Illustration.

A book-keeper may testify to facts recorded by him in books regularly kept in the course of business, if he knows that the books were correctly kept, although he has forgotten the particular transactions entered.

Right of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory.

161. Any writing referred to under the provisions of the two last preceding sections must be produced and shown to the adverse party, if he requires it; such party may, if he pleases, cross-examine the witness thereupon.

Production of documents.

162. A witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to Court, notwithstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be decided on by the Court.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.

Translation of documents.

If, for such a purpose, it is necessary to cause any document to be translated, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct the translator to keep the contents secret, unless the document is to be given in evidence; and, if the interpreter disobeys such direction, he shall be held to have committed an offence under section 166 of the Indian Penal Code.

Giving, as evidence, of document, called for and produced on notice.

163. When a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence, if the party producing it requires him to do so.

Using, as evidence, of document, production of which was refused on notice.

164. When a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the document as evidence, without the consent of the other party, or the order of the Court.

B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A, or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped: He cannot do so.

165. The Judge may, in order to discover, or to obtain proper proof of, relevant facts, ask any question he pleases, in any form, at any time, of any witness, or of the parties, about any fact relevant or irrelevant; and may order the production of any document or thing: and neither the parties, nor their agents, shall be entitled to make any objection to any such question or order, nor, without the leave of the Court, to cross-examine any witness upon any answer given in reply to any such question:

Judge's power to put questions or order production.

Provided that the judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant, and duly proved:

Provided also that this section shall not authorize any Judge to compel any witness to answer any question, or to produce any document, which such witness would be entitled to refuse to answer or produce under sections 121 to 131, both inclusive, if the question were asked, or the document were called for, by the adverse party; nor shall the Judge ask any question which it would be improper for any other person to ask under section 148 or 149; nor shall he dispense with primary evidence of any document, except in the cases hereinbefore excepted.

Rulings.

1. Witnesses summoned on behalf of the prosecution, and not called, ought to be placed in the box for cross-examination, in order that the defence may have the opportunity of exercising this right, and à fortiori, if such a witness is called and examined by the Court under s 165 of the Evidence Act, the prisoner should be allowed to cross-examine.—IN THE MATTER OF GRISH CHUNDER TALUKDAR: EMPRESS v. GRISH CHUNDER TALUKDAR I. 2. Under s. 165 of the Evidence Act (I. of 1872), a Judge has the power of asking irrelevant questions to a witness, if he does so in order to obtain proof of relevant facts; but if he asks questions with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against witness, the witness is not bound to answer them, and cannot be punished for not answering them, under s. 179 of the Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860).—QUEEN-EMPRESS v. HARI LAKSHMAN, I. 3. Where, in the course of a criminal proceeding, a Magistrate himself summoned a witness, and examined her under s. 165 of the Evidence Act, but refused to allow the attorney who appeared for the complainant to cross-examine the witness, held that the Magistrate was wrong in not allowing the complainant's attorney to cross-examine the witness when she was summoned. Held, also, that there is nothing in s 165 debarring or disqualifying a party to a proceeding from cross-examining any witness summoned by the Court.—GOPAL LALL SEAL v. MANICK LALL SEAL, I. Power of jury or assessors to put questions.

CHAPTER XI.—OF IMPROPER ADMISSION AND REJECTION OF EVIDENCE.

167. The improper admission or rejection of evidence shall not be ground of itself for a new trial or reversal of any decision in any case, if it shall appear to the Court before which such objection is raised that, independently of the evidence objected to and admitted, there was sufficient evidence to justify the decision, or that, if the rejected evidence had been received, it ought not to have varied the decision.

No new trial for improper admission or rejection of evidence.

2. Per FIELD, J.: The grounds upon which the opposite party is permitted to inspect a writing, and to refresh the memory of a witness, are threefold. (i) to secure the full benefit of the witness's recollection as to the whole of the facts; (ii) to check the use of improper documents; (iii) to compare his oral testimony with his written statement. Per Field, J.: The opposite party has a right to look at any particular writing before or at the moment when the witness uses it to refresh his memory in order to answer a particular question; but if he then neglects to exercise his right, he cannot continue to retain the right throughout the whole of the subsequent examination of the witness. Per Field, J.: Under the provisions of s. 323 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the examination of a medical witness taken and duly attested may be given in evidence in any criminal trial; but in order that such evidence may be admissible against any individual accused person, the examination must have been taken in the presence of the accused person. Per Field, J.: It is the duty of a Judge to give a direction upon the law to the jury so far as to make them understand the law as bearing upon the facts; and if he does not give them an explanation of the law sufficiently comprehensive to enable them to decide the particular issue, it is a misdirection. Per Field, J.: Where a prisoner is constructively guilty of murder under s. 34 of the Penal Code, it is doubtful if he can be said to have committed the offence of murder within the meaning of s. 149, so as to make other prisoners, by a double construction, guilty of murder. Per Field, J.: Irregularities under s. 240 of the Criminal Procedure Code in the selection of the jurors, and in the admission of the deposition of a medical witness treated, it not being shown that the prisoners had been thereby prejudiced, as being objections which ought not to be entertained for the purpose of interfering with the verdict, regard being had to the provisions of s 283 of the Criminal Procedure Code and s. 167 of the Evidence Act.—EMPRESS v JHUBBOO MAHTON, I. (3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

69. (1) The summons shall, if practicable, be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons

72. (1) Where the person summoned is in the active service of the Government or of a Railway Company, the Court issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate to the head of the office in which such person is employed; and such head shall thereupon cause the summons to be served in manner provided by section 69, and shall return it to the Court under his signature with the endorsement required by that section.

(2) Such signature shall be evidence of due service.

Service of summons outside local limits.

73. When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is, to be there served.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may, in its discretion, direct, by endorsement on the warrant, that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security, and shall release such person from custody.

* These provisions apply to warrants issued under s. 10 of the Upper Burma Ruby Regulation (XII. of 1887), sub s. (2) of that section.

(2) The endorsement* shall state—

(a) the number of sureties;

(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued are to be respectively bound; and

(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court.

Recognizance to be forwarded.

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall forward the bond to the Court.

Warrants to whom directed.

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers, and, when issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall always be so directed; but any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary, and no police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons; and such person or persons shall execute the same.

(2) Such landholder, farmer, or manager, shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge.

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest police-officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76.

Where warrant may be executed.

82. A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India.

* For forms, see Sch. V., Form II, infra.

88. (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, such Court may, instead of directing such warrant to a police-officer, forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police, or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency-town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed.

(2) The Magistrate, or District Superintendent, or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded, shall endorse his name thereon, and, if practicable, cause it to be executed, in manner hereinbefore provided, within the local limits of his jurisdiction

(2) Such Magistrate or police-officer shall endorse his name thereon, and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the police officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local police shall, if so required, assist such officer in executing such warrant

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or police-officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed will prevent such execution, the police-officer to whom it is directed may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it.

(4) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

85. When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued, the person arrested shall unless the Court which issued the warrant is within twenty miles of the place of arrest or is nearer than the Magistrate, or District Superintendent of Police, or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency-town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was made, or unless security is taken under section 76, be taken before such Magistrate, or Commissioner, or District Superintendent.

86. (1) Such Magistrate, or District Superintendent, or Commissioner, shall, if the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court :

Provided that, if the offence is bailable, and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate, District Superintendent, or Commissioner, or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant, and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction, the Magistrate, District Superintendent, or Commissioner shall take such bail or security * as the case may be, and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a police-officer from taking security undersection 76.

* See Sch. V., Form III., infra.

Proclamation for person absconding.

87. (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it has absconded, or is concealing himself, so that such warrant cannot be executed, such Court may publish a written proclamation* requiring him to appear at a specified place, and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation.

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows:—

(a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides;

(c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court-house.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under section 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property, moveable or immoveable, or both, belonging to the proclaimed person.

(4) If the property ordered to be attached is immoveable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of land paying revenue to Government, be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

(e) by taking possession; or

(f) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person, or to any one on his behalf; or

(h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

* See Sch. V., Forms IV. and V., infra.

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of live-stock, or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such case the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court.

(6) The powers, duties, and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI. of the Code of Civil Procedure.*

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation, the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of Government; but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment, unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner, in either of which cases, the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit.

89. If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is, or has been, at the disposal of Government under sub-section (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily, or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached, or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves, to the satisfaction of such Court, that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property or, if the same has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him.

Issue of warrant in lieu of, or in addition to, summons.

(a) if, either before the issue of such summons, or after the issue of the same, but before the time fixed for his appearance, the Court see reasons to believe that he has absconded, or will not obey the summons; or

(b) if at such time he fails to appear, and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith, and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure.

CHAPTER VIII.*—OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR.

A.—Security for keeping the Peace on Conviction.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of rioting, assault, or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or of assembling armed men, or taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session, or the and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace, such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond* for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix.

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

B.—Security for keeping the Peace in other cases and Security for Good Behaviour.

107. (1) Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class, is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquillity, the Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Security for keeping the peace in other cases.

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against, or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and no proceedings shall be taken before any Magistrate, other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, unless both the person informed against, and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub-section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquillity, and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate may, after recording his reasons, issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court), and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case, together with a copy of his reasons.

Procedure of Magistrate not empowered to act under sub-section (1).

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under this section may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed.

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or*

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or*

*(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

No proceedings shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer, or publisher of any publication registered under, or printed or published in conformity with, the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867,† except by the order or under the authority of the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government, or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf.

Security for good behaviour from vagrants and suspected persons.

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class, receives information—

(a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence, or

(b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders.

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

(f) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community,

such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.*

Proviso as to European vagrants.

111 The provisions of sections 109 and 110 do not apply to European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874.†

112‡§ When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109, or section 110, deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character, and class of sureties (if any) required.

114.§ If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is to bring him before the Court:

Provided that, whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer, or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

Copy of order under section 112 to accompany summons or warrant.

115.‡§ Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112, and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

Power to dispense with personal attendance.

116.§ The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

§ Ss 112 to 125 apply to all cases requiring security for good behaviour under the Upper Burma Frontier Crossing and Disturbed Districts Regulation (IX. of 1887).—See s. 5 (2) of that Regulation.

117.† (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court, or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and, where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is a habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(4) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

118† (1) If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly:

Order to give security.

Provided,—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112;

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive;

thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

119.† If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and, if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

Discharge of person informed against.

C.—Proceedings in all Cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

120.† (1) If any person, in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 105 or section 118, is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be; and, in the latter case, the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

Power to reject sureties.

122. A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered under this chapter on the ground that, for reasons to be recorded by the Magistrate, such surety is an unfit person.

Imprisonment in default of security.

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison,† or, if he is already in prison, be detained in prison‡ until such period expires, or until within such period he gives the security § to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it.

Proceedings when to be laid before High Court or Court of Session.

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge, or, if such Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings, and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit:

Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years.

(4) If the security is tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

(5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple.

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour may be rigorous or simple, as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.

§ See Sch. V, Form XV, infra

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter, the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties, or the time for which security has been required.

(3) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opin on that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter, as ordered by the Court of Session or High Court, may be released without hazard to the community, such Magistrate shall make an immediate report of the case for the orders of the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be, and such Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be discharged *

Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or good behaviour.

Discharge of sureties.

126. (1) Any surety for the peaceable conduct or good behaviour of another person may at any time apply to a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class, to cancel any bond executed under this chapter within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

(3) When such person appears or is brought before the Magistrate, such Magistrate shall cancel the bond, and shall order such person to give, for the unexpired portion of the term of such bond, fresh security of the same description as the original security. Every such order shall, for the purposes of sections 121, 122, 123, and 124, be deemed to be an order made under section 106 or section 118, as the case may be.

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse; and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Use of civil force to disperse.

128 If, upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police station, whether within or without the presidency-towns, may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person, not being an

Use of military force.

129. If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed, and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force.

Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse assembly.

130. (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in Her Majesty's Army, or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869,* to disperse such assembly by military force, and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct, or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly, or to have them punished according to law.

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit; but, in so doing, he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly, and arresting and detaining such persons.

Power of commissioned military officers to disperse assembly.

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with, any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force, and may arrest and confine any persons forming part of it, in order to disperse such assembly, or that they may be punished according to law; but, if, while he is acting under this section, it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate, he shall do so, and shall thence forward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action.

that any tank, well, or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such a manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, such Magistrate may make a conditional order‡ requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance, or carrying on such trade or occupation, or keeping any such goods or merchandise, or owning, possessing, or controlling such building, substance, tank, well, or excavation, within a time to be fixed in the order,

(Signed) A. B.,
Magistrate."

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

When officer in charge of police-station may require another to issue search-warrant.

166. (1) An officer in charge of a police-station may require an officer in charge of another police-station, whether in the same or a different district, to cause a search to be made in any place, in any case in which the former officer might cause such search to be made within the limits of his own station.

(2) Such officer, on being so required, shall proceed according to the provisions of section 165 and shall forward the thing found, if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made.

Procedure when investigation cannot be completed in twenty-four hours.

167 (1) Whenever it appears that any investigation under this chapter cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well-founded, the officer in charge of the police-station shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall, at the same time, forward the accused (if any) to such Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorize the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction.

(3) A Magistrate authorizing under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

Report of investigation by subordinate police officer.

168. When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of the police-station.

* See ss. 96 to 99, supra.

169. If, upon an inves igation under this chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond,* with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cogn'zance of the offence on a police-report, and to try the accused, or commit him for trial.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons.

(4) The day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate if he is to be forwarded in custody

* See Sch. V., Form XXV, infra.
† See Sch V., Form XXVI., infra.

172. (1) Every police officer making an investigation under this chapter shall, day by day, enter his proceedings in the investigatoin in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him, the time at which he began and closed his investigation, the place or places visited by him, and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through his investigation.

Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but, if they are used by the police-officer who made them to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872,* section 161 or section 145, as the case may be, shall apply.

173. (1) Every investigation under this chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed the officer in charge of the police-station shall forward, to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report, a report in the form prescribed by the Local Government, setting forth the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused person has been forwarded in custody, or has been released on his bond, and, if so, whether with or without sureties.

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay, investigations under this section may be made by the head of the village, who shall then report the result to the nearest Magistrate authorized to hold inquests.

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests, namely any District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, and any Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture.

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies, such persons shall not be required by the police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court.

Inquiry by Magistrate into cause of death.

176. (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and, in any other case mentioned in section 174, clauses (a), (b), and (c) of sub section (1), any Magistrate so empowered may hold an inquiry into the cause of death, either instead of, or in addition to, the investigation held by the police-officer; and, if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. ## CHAPTER XIX.—OF THE CHARGE.

Form of Charges.†

221. (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged.

Charge to state offence.

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

Specific name of offence sufficient description.

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

How stated where offence has no specific name.

(4) The law and section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge.

(5) The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case.

What implied in charge.

(6) In the presidency-towns the charge shall be written in English; elsewhere it shall be written either in English, or in the language of the Court.

Language of charge.

(7) If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award,‡ the fact, date, and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

Previous conviction when to be set out.

Illustrations.

(a.) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code;§ that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code; and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to section 300; or that, if it did fall within Exception 1., one or other of the three provisos to that exception applied to it.

---

* See Ch. XXXIX., infra.

† See Sch. V., Form XXVIII., infra.

‡ See the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV. of 1860), s. 75; see the Whipping Act (VI. of 1864), ss. 3 and 4. See also, infra, ss. 310, 348, and 511.

§ Act XLV. of 1860.

(b.) A is charged, under section 326 of the Indian Penal Code,* with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by section 335 of the Indian Penal Code,* and that the general exceptions did not apply to it.

(c.) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery, or criminal intimidation, or using a false property-mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery, or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property-mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code;* but the sections under which the offence is punishable must, in each instance, be referred to in the charge.

(d.) A is charged, under section 184 of the Indian Penal Code,* with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words.

222. (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

Particulars as to time, place, and person.

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust, or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates; and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234:

Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose.

When manner of committing offence must be stated.

Illustrations.

(a.) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected.

(b.) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B.

(c.) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.

(d.) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.

(e.) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.

(f.) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged, and the law infringed.

224. In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable.

Words in charge taken in sense of law under which offence is punishable.

* Act XLV. of 1860.

225. No error in stating either the offence or the particulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission to state the offence or those particulars, shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was, in fact, misled by such error or omission, and it has occasioned a failure of justice.

Effect of errors.

(a.) A is charged, under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code,* with "having been in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit," the word "fraudulently" being omitted in the charge. Unless it appears that A was, in fact, misled by this omission, the error shall not be regarded as material.

(b.) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge, or is set out incorrectly. A defends himself, calls witnesses, and gives his own account of the transaction. The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material.

(c.) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge. There were many transactions between A and B, and A had no means of knowing to which of them the charge referred, and offered no defence. The Court may infer from such facts that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating was, in this case, a material error.

(d.) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the 21st January 1882. In fact, the murdered person's name was Haidar Baksh, and the date of the murder was the 20th January 1882. A was never charged with any murder but one, and had heard the inquiry before the Magistrate, which referred exclusively to the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from these facts that A was not misled, and that the error in the charge was immaterial.

(e.) A was charged with murdering Haidar Baksh on the 20th January 1882 and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January 1882. When charged for the murder of Haidar Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh. The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from this that A was misled and that the error was material.

226. When any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to the form of charges.

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge.

Illustrations.

(a.) A is charged with the murder of C. A charge of abetting the murder of C may be added or substituted.

(b.) A is charged with forging a valuable security under section 467 of the Indian Penal Code. * A charge of fabricating false evidence under section 193 may be added.

(c.) A is charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen. During the trial it incidentally appears that he has in his possession instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin. A charge under section 235 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be added.*

227. (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced, or, in the case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court, before the verdict of the jury is returned, or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

Court may alter charge.

(2) Every such alteration or addition shall be read and explained to the accused.

* Act XLV. of 1860.

When trial may proceed immediately after alteration.

228. If the charge framed, or alteration or addition made, under section 226 or section 227, is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence, or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration or addition has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

When new trial may be directed, or trial suspended.

229. If the new or altered or added charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial, or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require previous sanction.

230. If the offence stated in the new or altered or added charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary, the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained, unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded.

Recall of witnesses when charge altered.

231. Whenever a charge is altered or added to by the Court after the commencement of the trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to re-call or re-summon, and examine with reference to such alteration or addition, any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

Effect of material error.

232. (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision, or of its powers under Chapter XXVII., is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge, or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit.

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved, it shall quash the conviction.

Illustration.

A is convicted of an offence, under section 196 of the Indian Penal Code,* upon a charge which omits to state that he knew the evidence, which he corruptly used or attempted to use as true or genuine, was false or fabricated. If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge, and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it, it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge; but, if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction.

Joinder of Charges.

Separate charges for distinct offences.

233. For every distinct offence of which any person is accused, there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in sections 234, 235, 236, and 239.

Illustration.

A is accused of a theft on one occasion, and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion. A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt.

---

* Act XLV. of 1860.

284. (1) When a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, any number of them not exceeding three.

Three offences of same kind within year may be charged together.

(2) Offences are of the same kind when they are punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian Penal Code,* or of any special or local law.

285. (1) If, in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, every such offence.

Trial for more than one offence.

(2) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, each of such offences.

Offence falling within two definitions.

(3) If several acts, of which one or more than one would, by itself or themselves, constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, the offence constituted by such acts when combined, and for any offence constituted by any one or more of such acts

Acts constituting one offence, but constituting, when combined, a different offence.

(4) Nothing contained in this section shall affect the Indian Penal Code,* section 71.

(b.) A commits house-breaking by day with intent to commit adultery, and commits, in the house so entered, adultery with B's wife. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 454 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.*

(d.) A has in his possession several seals, knowing them to be counterfeit, and intending to use them for the purpose of committing several forgeries punishable under section 466 of the Indian Penal Code.* A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, the possession of each seal under section 473 of the Indian Penal Code.*

(e.) With intent to cause injury to B, A institutes a criminal proceeding against him, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding; and also falsely accuses B of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charges. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, two offences under section 211 of the Indian Penal Code.*

(f.) A, with intent to cause injury to B, falsely accuses him of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. On the trial, A gives false evidence against B, intending thereby to cause B to be convicted of a capital offence. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 211 and 194 of the Indian Penal Code.*

(g.) A, with six others, commits the offences of rioting, grievous hurt, and assaulting a public servant endeavouring, in the discharge of his duty as such, to suppress the riot.

(m.) A commits robbery on B, and in doing so, voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 323, 392, and 394 of the Indian Penal Code *

236. If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once, or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences.

Where it is doubtful what offence has been committed

(a) A is accused of an act which may amount to theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust, or cheating. He may be charged with theft, receiving stolen property, criminal breach of trust and cheating, or he may be charged with having committed theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust, or cheating

(b.) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club. Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

237. (1) If, in the case mentioned in section 236, the accused is charged with one offence, and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section, he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed, although he was not charged with it.

When a person is charged with one offence, he can be convicted of another.

(2) When the accused is charged with an offence, he may be convicted of having attempted to commit that offence, although the attempt is not separately charged.

Illustration.

(2) When a person is charged with an offence, and facts are proved which reduce it to a minor offence, he may be convicted of the minor offence, although he is not charged with it.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 407 of the Indian Penal Code,* with criminal breach of trust in respect of property entrusted to him as a carrier. (b) A and B are accused of a robbery, in the course of which A commits a murder with which B has nothing to do. A and B may be tried together on a charge, charging both of them with the robbery, and A alone with the murder.

(c) A and B are both charged with a theft, and B is charged with two other thefts committed by him in the course of the same transaction. A and B may be both tried together on a charge charging both with the one theft, and B alone with two other thefts.

Such withdrawal shall have the effect of an acquittal on such charge or charges, unless the conviction be set aside, in which case the said Court (subject to the order of the Court setting aside the conviction) may proceed with the inquiry into, or trial of, the charge or charges so withdrawn.

Withdrawal of remaining charges on conviction on one of several charges.

CHAPTER XX.—OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in summons-cases.

241. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons-cases :—

Substance of accusation to be stated.

242. When the accused appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence of which he is accused shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted; but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge.*

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation.

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence of which he is accused, his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him; and, if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, the Magistrate shall convict him accordingly.

Procedure when no such admission is made.

244. (1) If the accused does not make such admission, the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence as he produces in his defence.

(2) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on the application of the complainant or accused, issue process to compel the attendance of any witness, or the production of any document or other thing.

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial be deposited in Court.

Acquittal.

245. (1) If the Magistrate, upon taking the evidence referred to in section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may, of his own motion, cause to be produced, and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused, finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Sentence.

(2) If he finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law †

Finding not limited by complaint or summons.

246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245, convict the accused of any offence triable under this chapter which, from the facts admitted or proved, he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons.

Non-appearance of complainant.

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear, the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day:

Provided that, where the complainant is a public servant and his personal attendance is not required, the Magistrate may dispense with his attendance, and proceed with the case.

* Except in the case of trials of European British subjects by District Magistrates, see s. 451 (4), infra.

† See Sch. V., Form XXIX., infra.

Withdrawal of complaint.

248. If a complainant, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same, and shall thereupon acquit the accused.

Power to stop proceedings when no complainant.

249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint, a Presidency Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, or, with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, for reasons to be recorded by him, stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment, either of acquittal or conviction, and may thereupon release the accused.

Frivolous Accusations in Summons and Warrant-cases.

Frivolous or vexatious accusations.

250. (1) If, in any case instituted by complaint as defined in this Code, or upon information given to a police-officer or to a Magistrate, a person is accused before a Magistrate of any offence triable by a Magistrate, and the Magistrate by whom the case is heard discharges or acquits the accused, and is satisfied that the accusation against him was frivolous or vexatious, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, by his order of discharge or acquittal, direct the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made to pay to the accused, or to each of the accused where there are more than one, such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as the Magistrate thinks fit:

Provided that, before making any such direction, the Magistrate shall—

(a) record and consider any objection which the complainant or informant may urge against the making of the direction, and,

(b) if the Magistrate directs any compensation to be paid, state in writing, in his order of discharge or acquittal, his reasons for awarding the compensation.

(2) Compensation of which a Magistrate has ordered payment under sub-section (1) shall be recoverable as if it were a fine:

Provided that, if it cannot be recovered, the imprisonment to be awarded shall be simple, and for such term, not exceeding thirty days, as the Magistrate directs.

(3) A complainant or informant who has been ordered under sub-section (1) by a Magistrate of the second or third class to pay compensation to an accused person may appeal from the order, in so far as the order relates to the payment of the compensation, as if such complainant or informant had been convicted on a trial held by such Magistrate.

(4) Where an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case which is subject to appeal under sub-section (3), the compensation shall not be paid to him before the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal is presented, before the appeal has been decided.

(5) At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any compensation paid or recovered under this section.

CHAPTER XXI.—OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in warrant-cases.

251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of warrant-cases:—

Evidence for prosecution.

252. (1) When the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate, such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution.

(2) The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon* to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary.

Discharge of accused.

253. (1) If, upon taking all the evidence referred to in section 252, and making such examination (if any) of the accused as the Magistrate thinks necessary, he finds that no case against the accused has been made out which, if unrebutted, would warrant his conviction, the Magistrate shall discharge him.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved.

254 † If, when such evidence and examination have been taken and made, or at any previous stage of the case, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable under this chapter, which such Magistrate is competent to try, and which, in his opinion, could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused.

Plea.

255. (1) The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make.

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the Magistrate shall record the plea, and may, in his discretion, convict him thereon.

Defence

256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be required to state whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and, if so, which, of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken. If he says he does so wish, the witnesses named by him shall be re-called, and, after cross-examination and re-examination (if any), they shall be discharged. The evidence of any remaining witnesses for the prosecution shall next be taken, and, after cross-examination and re-examination (if any), they also shall be discharged. The accused shall then be called upon to enter upon his defence, and produce his evidence.

(2) If the accused puts in any written statement, the Magistrate shall file it with the record.

Process for compelling production of evidence at instance of accused.

257. (1) If the accused, after he has entered upon his defence, applies to the Magistrate to issue any process for compelling the attendance of any witness for the purpose of examination or cross-examination, or the production of any document or other thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless he considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay, or for defeating the ends of justice. Such ground shall be recorded by him in writing:

---

* See Sch. V., Form XXXI., infra.

† See ss. 252 and 208, supra.

Provided that, when the accused has cross-examined, or had the opportunity of cross-examining, any witness after the charge is framed, the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(a) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial be deposited in Court.

258. (1) If, in any case under this chapter in which a charge has been framed, the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Acquittal.

Conviction.

(2) If, in any such case, the Magistrate finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.*

259. When the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint, and, upon any day fixed for the hearing of the case, the complainant is absent, and the offence may be lawfully compounded,† the Magistrate may, in his discretion, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, at any time before the charge has been framed, discharge the accused.

Absence of complainant.

CHAPTER XXII.—OF SUMMARY TRIALS.

Power to try summarily

260.‡ (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Code,—

(a) the District Magistrate,

(b) any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, and

(c) any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class, and specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may, if he or they think fit, try in a summary way all or any of the following offences:—

§ In the Sonthal Parganas, the Commissioner is the High Court in certain cases, see s. 4 of the Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation (V. of 1893), as modified up to 1st October, 1899.

Trials before High Court to be by jury.

267. All trials under this chapter before a High Court shall be by jury; and, notwithstanding anything herein contained, in all criminal cases transferred to a High Court under this Code, or under the Letters Patent of any High Court established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861,* the trial may, if the High Court so directs, be by jury.

Trials before Court of Session to be by jury or with assessors.

268. All trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury, or with the aid of assessors.

Local Government may order trials before Court of Session to be by jury.

269. (1) The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, by order in the official Gazette, direct that the trial of all offences, or of any particular class of offences, before any Court of Session, shall be by jury in any district, and may, with the like sanction, revoke or alter such order.

(2) The Local Government, by like order, may also declare that, in the case of any district in which the trial of any offence is to be by jury, the trial of such offences shall, if the Judge, on application made to him, or of his own motion, so directs, be by jurors summoned from a special jury list, and may revoke or alter such order.

(3) When the accused is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are, and some are not, triable by jury, he shall be tried by jury for such of those offences as are triable by jury, and, by the Court of Session, with the aid of the jurors as assessors for such of them as are not triable by jury.

Trial before Court of Session to be conducted by Public Prosecutor.

Commencement of trial.

271. (1) When the Court is ready to commence the trial, the accused shall appear or be brought before it, and the charge shall be read out in Court and explained to him, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty of the offence charged, or claims to be tried.

Plea of guilty.

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the plea shall be recorded, and he may be convicted thereon.

Refusal to plead, or claim to be tried.

272. If the accused refuses to, or does not, plead, or if he claims to be tried, the Court shall proceed to choose jurors or assessors as hereinafter directed, and to try the case:

Trial by same jury or assessors of several offenders in succession.

Provided that, subject to the right of objection hereinafter mentioned, the same jury may try, or the same assessors may aid in the trial of, as many accused persons successively as the Court thinks fit.

Entry on unsustainable charges.

273. (1) In trials before the High Court, when it appears to the High Court, at any time before the commencement of the trial of the person charged, that any charge or any portion thereof is clearly unsustainable, the Judge may make on the charge an entry to that effect.

Effect of entry.

(2) Such entry shall have the effect of staying proceedings upon the charge or portion of the charge, as the case may be.

* Stat 24 & 25 Vic., c. 104, printed in the "Collection of Statutes relating to India," Vol. I., Ed. 1899, p. 355.

C.—Choosing a Jury.

Number of jury.

274. (1) In trials before the High Court, the jury shall consist of nine persons.

(2) In trials by jury before the Court of Session, the jury shall consist of such uneven number, not being less than three or more than nine, as the Local Government, by order applicable to any particular district, or to any particular class of offences in that district, may direct.

Jury for trial of persons not Europeans or Americans before Court of Session.

275. In a trial by jury before the Court of Session of a person not being an European or an American, a majority of the jury shall, if he so desires, consist of persons who are neither Europeans nor Americans.

Jurors to be chosen by lot.

276. The jurors shall be chosen by lot from the persons summoned to act as such, in such manner as the High Court may from time to time by rule direct:

Provided that—

Existing practice maintained;

first, pending the issue under this section of rules for any Court, the practice now prevailing in such Court in respect to the choosing of jurors shall be followed; persons not summoned when eligible;

secondly, in case of a deficiency of persons summoned, the number of jurors required may, with the leave of the Court, be chosen from such other persons as may be present; trials before special jurors.

thirdly, in the presidency-towns—

(a) if the accused person is charged with having committed an offence punishable with death, or

(b) if in any other case a Judge of the High Court so directs, the jurors shall be chosen from the special jury list hereinafter prescribed; and fourthly, in any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences may be by special jury, the jurors shall, in any case in which the Judge so directs, be chosen from the special jury list prescribed in section 325.

Names of jurors to be called.

277. (1) As each juror is chosen, his name shall be called aloud, and, upon his appearance, the accused shall be asked if he objects to be tried by such juror.

Objection to jurors

(2) Objection may then be taken to such juror by the accused or by the prosecutor; and the grounds of objection shall be stated:

Objection without grounds stated.

Provided that, in the High Court, objections without grounds stated shall be allowed to the number of eight on behalf of the Crown and eight on behalf of the person or all the persons charged.

Grounds of objection.

278. Any objection taken to a juror on any of the following grounds, if made out to the satisfaction of the Court, shall be allowed:—

(a) some presumed or actual partiality in the juror;

(b) some personal ground, such as alienage, deficiency in the qualification required by any law or rule having the force of law for the time being in force, or being under the age of twenty-one or above the age of sixty years;

(c) his having by habit or religious vows relinquished all care of worldly affairs;

(d) his holding any office in or under the Court;

(e) his executing any duties of police, or being entrusted with police-duties;

(f) his having been convicted of any offence which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him unfit to serve on the jury;

(g) his inability to understand the language in which the evidence is given or, when such evidence is interpreted, the language in which it is interpreted;

(h) any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him improper as a juror.

Decision of objection.

279. (1) Every objection taken to a juror shall be decided by the Court, and such decision shall be recorded, and be final.

Supply of place of juror against whom objection allowed.

(2) If the objection is allowed, the place of such juror shall be supplied by any other juror attending in obedience to a summons, and chosen in manner provided by section 276; or if there is no such other juror present, then by any other person present in the Court whose name is on the list of jurors, or whom the Court considers a proper person to serve on the jury:

Provided that no objection to such juror or other person is taken under section 278 and allowed.

Foreman of jury.

280. (1) When the jurors have been chosen, they shall appoint one of their number to be foreman.

(2) The foreman shall preside in the debates of the jury, deliver the verdict of the jury, and ask any information from the Court that is required by the jury or any of the jurors.

(3) If a majority of the jury do not, within such time as the Judge thinks reasonable, agree in the appointment of a foreman, he shall be appointed by the Court.

Swearing of jurors.

281. When the foreman has been appointed, the jurors shall be sworn under the Indian Oaths Act, 1873.*

Procedure when juror ceases to attend, &c.

282. (1) If, in the course of a trial by jury, at any time before the return of the verdict, any juror, from any sufficient cause, is prevented from attending throughout the trial, or if any juror absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, or if it appears that any juror is unable to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or, when such evidence is interpreted, the language in which it is interpreted, a new juror shall be added, or the jury shall be discharged, and a new jury chosen.

(2) In each of such cases the trial shall commence anew.

Discharge of jury in case of sickness of prisoner.

283. The Judge may also discharge the jury whenever the prisoner becomes incapable of remaining at the bar.

Assessors how chosen.

284. When the trial is to be held with the aid of assessors, two or more shall be chosen, as the Judge thinks fit, from the persons summoned to act as such.

* Act X. of 1873.

285. (1) If, in the course of a trial with the aid of assessors, at any time before the finding, any assessor is, from any sufficient cause, prevented from attending throughout the trial, or absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, the trial shall proceed with the aid of the other assessor or assessors.

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend.

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending, or absent themselves, the proceedings shall be stayed, and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors.

E.—Trial to Close of Cases for Prosecution and Defence.

286. (1) When the jurors or assessors have been chosen, the prosecutor shall open his case, by reading from the Indian Penal Code* or other law the description of the offence charged, and stating shortly by what evidence he expects to prove the guilt of the accused.

Opening case for prosecution.

(2) The prosecutor shall then examine his witnesses.

Examination of witnesses.

287. The examination of the accused duly recorded by or before the committing Magistrate shall be tendered by the prosecutor, and read as evidence.†

Examination of accused before Magistrate to be evidence.

288. The evidence of a witness duly taken in the presence of the accused before the committing Magistrate may, in the discretion of the presiding Judge, if such witness is produced and examined, be treated as evidence in the case.

Evidence given at preliminary inquiry admissible.

289. (1) When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination (if any) of the accused are concluded, the accused shall be asked whether he means to adduce evidence.

Procedure after examination of witnesses for prosecution.

(2) If he says that he does not, the prosecutor may sum up his case; and, if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, it may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(3) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(4) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is evidence that he committed the offence, or, if, on his saying that he does not mean to adduce evidence, the prosecutor sums up his case, and the Court considers that there is evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court shall call on the accused to enter on his defence.

290. The accused or his pleader may then open his case, stating the facts or law on which he intends to rely, and making such comments as he thinks necessary on the evidence for the prosecution. He may then examine his witnesses (if any), and, after their cross-examination and re-examination (if any), may sum up his case.

Defence.

* Act XLV. of 1860.

† See the Indian Evidence Act (I. of 1872), s. 80.

Right of accused as to examination and summoning of witnesses.

291. The accused shall be allowed to examine any witness not previously named by him, if such witness is in attendance; but he shall not, except as provided in sections 211 and 231, be entitled of right to have any witness summoned, other than the witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate by whom he was committed for trial.

Prosecutor's right of reply.

292. If the accused, or any of the accused, adduces any evidence, the prosecutor shall be entitled to reply.

View by jury or assessors.

293. (1) Whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court shall make an order to that effect, and the jury or assessors shall be conducted in a body, under the care of an officer of the Court, to such place, which shall be shown to them by a person appointed by the Court.

(2) Such officer shall not, except with the permission of the Court, suffer any other person to speak to, or hold any communication with, any of the jury or assessors, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, they shall, when the view is finished, be immediately conducted back into Court.

When juror or assessor may be examined.

294. If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case, whereupon he may be sworn, examined, cross-examined, and re-examined in the same manner as any other witness.

Jury or assessors to attend at adjourned sitting.

295. If a trial is adjourned, the jury or assessors shall attend at the adjourned sitting, and at every subsequent sitting, until the conclusion of the trial.

Locking up jury.

296. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules as to keeping the jury together during a trial before such Court lasting for more than one day; and, subject to such rules, the presiding Judge may order whether and in what manner the jurors shall be kept together under the charge of an officer of the Court, or whether they shall be allowed to return to their respective homes.

F.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried by Jury.

Charge to jury.

297. In cases tried by jury, when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court shall proceed to charge the jury, summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and laying down the law by which the jury are to be guided.

Duty of Judge.

298. (1) In such cases it is the duty of the Judge—

(a) to decide all questions of law arising in the course of the trial, and especially all questions as to the relevancy of facts which it is proposed to prove, and the admissibility of evidence or the propriety of questions asked by or on behalf of the parties; and, in his discretion, to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties;

(b) to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial;

(c) to decide upon all matters of fact which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given;

(d) to decide whether any question which arises is for himself or for the jury, and upon this point his decision shall bind the jurors.

(2) The Judge may, if he thinks proper, in the course of his summing up, express to the jury his opinion upon any question of fact, or upon any question of mixed law and fact, relevant to the proceeding.

Illustrations.

(a.) It is proposed to prove a statement made by a person not being a witness in the case on the ground that circumstances are proved which render evidence of such statement admissible.

It is for the Judge, and not for the jury, to decide whether the existence of those circumstances has been proved.

(b.) It is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document, the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed.

It is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed.

Duty of jury.

299. It is the duty of the jury—

(a) to decide which view of the facts is true, and then to return the verdict which, under such view, ought, according to the direction of the Judge, to be returned;

(b) to determine the meaning of all technical terms (other than terms of law) and words used in an unusual sense which it may be necessary to determine, whether such words occur in documents or not;

(c) to decide all questions which, according to law, are to be deemed questions of fact;

(d) to decide whether general indefinite expressions do or do not apply to particular cases, unless such expressions refer to legal procedure, or unless their meaning is ascertained by law, in either of which cases it is the duty of the Judge to decide their meaning.

(a.) A is tried for the murder of B.

It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and to tell them under what views of the facts A ought to be convicted of murder or of culpable homicide, or to be acquitted.

It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true, and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong, and whether they do or do not agree with it.

(b) The question is whether a person entertained a reasonable belief on a particular point—whether work was done with reasonable skill or due diligence.

Each of these is a question for the jury.

Retirement to consider.

300. In cases tried by jury, after the Judge has finished his charge, the jury may retire to consider their verdict.

Except with the leave of the Court, no person other than a juror shall speak to, or hold any communication with, any member of such jury.

301. When the jury have considered their verdict, the foreman shall inform the Judge what is their verdict, or what is the verdict of a majority.

Delivery of verdict.

302. If the jury are not unanimous, the Judge may require them to retire for further consideration. After such a period as the Judge considers reasonable, the jury may deliver their verdict, although they are not unanimous.

Procedure where jury differ.

303. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the jury shall return a verdict on all the charges on which the accused is tried, and the Judge may ask them such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is.

Verdict to be given on each charge.

Judge may question jury.

(2) Such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded.

Questions and answers to be recorded.

304. When, by accident or mistake, a wrong verdict is delivered, the jury may, before or immediately after it is recorded, amend the verdict, and it shall stand as ultimately amended.

Amending verdict.

305. (1) When, in a case tried before a High Court, the jury are unanimous in their opinion, or when as many as six are of one opinion, and the Judge agrees with them, the Judge shall give judgment in accordance with such opinion.

Verdict in High Court when to prevail.

(2) When in any such case the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six of them are of one opinion, the foreman shall so inform the Judge.

(3) If the Judge disagrees with the majority, he shall at once discharge the jury.

Discharge of jury in other cases.

(4) If there are not so many as six who agree in opinion, the Judge shall, after the lapse of such time as he thinks reasonable, discharge the jury.

306. (1) When, in a case tried before the Court of Session, the Judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors, or of a majority of the jurors, he shall give judgment accordingly.

Verdict in Court of Session when to prevail.

(2) If the accused is acquitted, the Judge shall record judgment of acquittal. If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

307. (1) If in any such case the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors, or of a majority of the jurors, on all or any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, and is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, he shall submit the case accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion, and, when the verdict is one of acquittal, stating the offence which he considers to have been committed.

Procedure where Sessions Judge disagrees with verdict.

(2) Whenever the Judge submits a case under this section, he shall not record judgment of acquittal or of conviction on any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, but he may either remand the accused to custody, or admit him to bail.

(3) In dealing with the case so submitted, the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal, and subject thereto it shall, after considering the entire evidence, and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury, acquit or convict the accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it; and, if it convicts him, may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session.

G.—Re-trial of Accused after Discharge of Jury.

308. Whenever the jury is discharged, the accused shall be detained in custody or on bail (as the case may be), and shall be tried by another jury, unless the Judge considers that he should not be re-tried, in which case the Judge shall make an entry to that effect on the charge, and such entry shall operate as an acquittal.

Re-trial of accused after discharge of jury.

H.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried with Assessors.

309. (1) When, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court may sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and shall then require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally, and shall record such opinion.

Delivery of opinions of assessors.

(2) The Judge shall then give judgment, but, in doing so, shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors.

Judgment.

(3) If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

I.—Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction.

310. In the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, where the accused is charged with an offence committed after a previous conviction for any offence, the procedure laid down in sections 271, 286, 305, 306, and 309, shall be modified as follows:—

Procedure in case of previous conviction.

(a) the part of the charge stating the previous conviction shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he had been previously convicted as alleged in the charge, unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence:

(b) if he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge:

(c) if he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly; but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the jury, or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be), shall then hear evidence concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again.

S. 310 (last para.) of Act X. of 1882.

J.—List of Jurors for High Court, and summoning Jurors for that Court.

Number of special jurors.

* Act I. of 1872.

313. (1) The Clerk of the Crown shall, before the first day of April in each year, and subject to such rules as the High Court from time to time prescribes, prepare—

Lists of common and special jurors.

(b) a list of persons liable to serve as special jurors only.

(2) Regard shall be had, in the preparation of the latter list, to the property, character, and education of the persons whose names are entered therein.

(3) No person shall be entitled to have his name entered in the special jurors' list merely because he may have been entered in the special jurors' list for a previous year.

(4) The Governor-General in Council, in the case of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal, and, in the case of other High Courts, the Local Government, may exempt any salaried officer of Government from serving as a juror.

(5) The Clerk of the Crown shall, subject to such rules as aforesaid, have full discretion to prepare the said lists as seems to him to be proper, and there shall be no appeal from, or review of, his decision.

Discretion of officer preparing lists.

314. (1) Preliminary lists of persons liable to serve as common jurors and as special jurors, respectively, signed by the Clerk of the Crown, shall be published once in the local official Gazette before the fifteenth day of April next after their preparation.

Publication of lists, preliminary and revised.

333. At any stage of any trial before a High Court under this Code, before the return of the verdict, the Advocate-General may, if he thinks fit, inform the Court on behalf of Her Majesty that he will not further prosecute the defendant upon the charge; and thereupon all proceedings on such charge against the defendant shall be stayed, and he shall be discharged of and from the same. Tender of pardon to accomplice.

337. (1) In the case of any offence† triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class inquiring into the offence, or, with the sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, with the view of obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, the offence under inquiry, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making af ull and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to such offence, and to every other person concerned, whether as principal or abettor, in the commission thereof.

(3) Such person, if not on bail, shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial‡ by the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

(4) Every Magistrate, other than a Presidency Magistrate, who tenders a pardon under this section, shall record his reasons for so doing; and, when any Magistrate has made such tender, and examined the person to whom it has been made, he shall not try the case himself, although the offence which the accused appears to have committed may be triable by such Magistrate.

Power to direct tender of pardon.

338. At any time after commitment, but before judgment is passed, the Court to which the commitment is made may, with the view of obtaining on the trial the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, any such offence, tender, or order the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender, a pardon on the same condition to such person.

Commitment of person to whom pardon has been tendered.

339. (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under section 337 or section 338, and any person who has accepted such tender has, either by wilfully concealing anything essential, or by giving false evidence, not complied with the condition on which the tender was made, he may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered, or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter.

(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him when the pardon has been forfeited under this section.

(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court.

---

* As to tender of pardon to an accomplice in Upper Burma, and trial of the case by the Magistrate himself except in cases affecting European British subjects, see the Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation (V. of 1892), Sch., ss. VIII. and XVII.

Right of accused to be defended.

340. Every person accused before any Criminal Court may of right be defended by a pleader.

341. If the accused, though not insane, cannot be made to understand the proceedings, the Court may proceed with the inquiry or trial; and, in the case of a Court other than a High Court, if such inquiry results in a commitment, or if such trial results in a conviction, the proceedings shall be forwarded to the High Court with a report of the circumstances of the case, and the High Court shall pass thereon such order as it thinks fit.

Power to examine the accused.

342. (1) For the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, the Court may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, without previously warning the accused, put such questions to him as the Court considers necessary, and shall, for the purpose aforesaid, question him generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined, and before he is called on for his defence.

(2) The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions, or by giving false answers to them; but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just.*

(3) The answers given by the accused may be taken into consideration in such inquiry or trial, and put in evidence for or against him in any other inquiry into, or trial for, any other offence which such answers may tend to show he has committed.

No influence to be used to induce disclosures.

343. Except as provided in sections 337 and 338, no influence, by means of any promise or threat or otherwise, shall be used to an accused person to induce him to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge.

Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings.

344.† (1) If, from the absence of a witness, or any other reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn, any inquiry or trial, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by order in writing, stating the reasons therefor, from time to time, postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody:

Remand.

Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this section for a term exceeding fifteen days at a time.

(2) Every order made under this section by a Court other than a High Court shall be in writing signed by the presiding Judge or Magistrate.

Reasonable cause for remand.

Explanation.—If sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence, and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by a remand, this is a reasonable cause for a remand.

349. (1) Whenever a Magistrate of the second or third class, having jurisdiction, is of opinion, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution and the accused, that the accused is guilty, and that he ought to receive a punishment different in kind from, or more severe than, that which such Magistrate is empowered to inflict, or that he ought to be required to execute a bond under section 106, he may record the opinion, and submit his proceedings, and forward the accused, to the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate.

(2) If the witness denies the correctness of any part of the evidence when the same is read over to him, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, instead of correcting the evidence, make a memorandum thereon of the objection made to it by the witness, and shall add such remarks as he thinks necessary.

(3) If the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it has been given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence so taken down shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given, or in a language which he understands.

(3) In cases in which the examination of the accused is not recorded by the Magistrate or Judge himself, he shall be bound, unless he is a Presidency Magistrate, as the examination proceeds, to make a memorandum thereof in the language of the Court, or in English, if he is sufficiently acquainted with the latter language; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Judge with his own hand, and shall be annexed to the record. If the Magistrate or Judge is unable to make a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of such inability.

(2) The whipping shall be inflicted in the presence of the officer in charge of the jail, unless the Judge or Magistrate orders it to be inflicted in his own presence.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize any Court to inflict imprisonment for a term exceeding that to which the accused is liable by law, or that which the said Court is competent to inflict.

396. (1) When sentence is passed under this Code on an escaped convict, such sentence, if of death, fine, or whipping, shall, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, take effect immediately, and, if of imprisonment, penal servitude, or transportation, shall take effect according to the following rules, that is to say:—

Execution of sentences on escaped convicts.

(2) if the new sentence is severer in its kind than the sentence which such convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect immediately;

(3) When the new sentence is not severer in its kind than the sentence the convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect after he has suffered imprisonment, penal servitude, or transportation, as the case may be, for a further period equal to that which, at the time of his escape, remained unexpired of his former sentence.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section—

(a) a sentence of transportation or penal servitude shall be deemed severer than a sentence of imprisonment;

(b) a sentence of imprisonment with solitary confinement shall be deemed severer than a sentence of the same description of imprisonment without solitary confinement; and

(c) a sentence of rigorous imprisonment shall be deemed severer than a sentence of simple imprisonment with or without solitary confinement.

(2) When an award of imprisonment in default of payment of a fine is annexed to a substantive sentence of imprisonment, or to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude for an offence punishable with imprisonment, and the person undergoing the sentence is, after its execution, to undergo a further substantive sentence, or further substantive sentences, of imprisonment, transportation, or penal servitude, effect shall not be given to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine until the person has undergone the further sentence or sentences.

Confinement of youthful offenders in reformatories.

399. (1) When any person under the age of fifteen years is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any offence, the Court may direct that such person, instead of being imprisoned in a criminal jail, shall be confined in any reformatory established by the Local Government as a fit place for confinement, in which there are means of suitable discipline and of training in some branch of useful industry, or which is kept by a person willing to obey such rules as the Local Government prescribes with regard to the discipline and training of persons confined therein.

(2) All persons confined under this section shall be subject to the rules so prescribed.

(3) This section shall not apply to any place in which the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897,† is for the time being in force.

(2) Whenever an application is made to the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government for the suspension or remission of a sentence, the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be, may require the presiding Judge of the Court, before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed, to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused, together with his reasons for such opinion.

* S. 399 is only in force in Coorg and the Punjab.—See ss. 1 (3) and 3 of the Reformatory Schools Act (VIII. of 1897), and supra, s. 3 (1). It will cease to be in force in those provinces also on the extension to them of that Act.—See s. 3 of that Act.

† Act VIII. of 1897.

(3) If any condition on which a sentence has been suspended or remitted is, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council or of the Local Government, as the case may be, not fulfilled, the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government may cancel the suspension or remission, and thereupon the person in whose favour the sentence has been suspended or remitted may, if at large, be arrested by any police-officer without warrant, and remanded to undergo the unexpired portion of the sentence.

(4) The condition on which a sentence is suspended or remitted under this section may be one to be fulfilled by the person in whose favour the sentence is suspended or remitted, or one independent of his will.

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to interfere with the right of Her Majesty to grant pardons, reprieves, respites, or remission of punishment.

(6) The Governor-General in Council and the Local Government may, by general rules or special orders, give directions as to the suspension of sentences and the conditions on which petitions should be presented and dealt with.

Person once convicted or acquitted not to be tried for same offence

403. (1) A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence, and convicted or acquitted of such offence, shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force, not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under section 237.

(2) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 235, sub-section (1).

(3) A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act, constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last-mentioned offence if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted.

(4) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged.

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, or of section 188 of this Code.*

Explanation.—The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249, the discharge of the accused, or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section.

(a) any European British subject so convicted may, at his option, appeal either to the High Court or the Court of Session;

(b) when, in any case, an Assistant Sessions Judge or a Magistrate specially empowered under section 30 passes any sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding four years, or any sentence of transportation, the appeal shall lie to the High Court;

(c) when any person is convicted by a Magistrate of an offence under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code,† the appeal shall lie to the High Court.

Appeals to Court of Session how heard.

409. An appeal to the Court of Session or Sessions Judge shall be heard by the Sessions Judge or by an Additional Sessions Judge.

Appeal from sentence of Court of Session.

410. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Sessions Judge or an Additional Sessions Judge may appeal to the High Court.

Appeal from sentence of Presidency Magistrate.

411. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate may appeal to the High Court, if the Magistrate has sentenced him to imprisonment for a term exceeding six months, or to fine exceeding two hundred rupees.

No appeal in certain cases when accused pleads guilty.

412. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, where an accused person has pleaded guilty, and has been convicted by a Court of Session or any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class on such plea, there shall be no appeal except as to the extent or legality of the sentence.

No appeal in petty cases.

413. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in cases in which a Court of Session or the District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only, or of fine not exceeding fifty rupees only, or of whipping only.

Explanation.—There is no appeal from a sentence of imprisonment passed by such Court or Magistrate in default of payment of fine when no substantive sentence of imprisonment has also been passed.

* As to appeals from sentences of District Magistrates in Upper Burma in cases other than those affecting European British subjects, see the Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation (V. of 1892), Sch., ss. X. and XVII.

Notwithstanding the provisions of s. 408 in places where the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation (IV. of 1887) is in force, appeals lie to the Chief Court, and not to a Court of Session.—See s. 7 (a) of that Regulation.

† Act XLV. of 1860.

114. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in any case tried summarily in which a Magistrate empowered to act under section 260 passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months only, or of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees only, or of whipping only.

No appeal from certain summary convictions.

415. An appeal may be brought against any sentence referred to in section 413 or section 414 by which any two or more of the punishments therein mentioned are combined, but no sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace.

Proviso to sections 413 and 414.

Explanation.—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence by which two or more punishments are combined within the meaning of this section.

416. Nothing in sections 413 and 414 applies to appeals from sentences passed under Chapter XXXIII. on European British subjects.

Saving of sentences on European British subjects.

417. The Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original or appellate order of acquittal passed by any Court other than a High Court.

Appeal on behalf of Government in case of acquittal.

418. An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in which case the appeal shall lie on a matter of law only.

Appeal on what matters admissible.

Explanation.—The alleged severity of a sentence shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a matter of law.

419 Every appeal shall be made in the form of a petition in writing presented by the appellant or his pleader, and every such petition shall (unless the Court to which it is presented otherwise directs) be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, and, in cases tried by a jury, a copy of the heads of the charge recorded under section 367

Petition of appeal.

420. If the appellant is in jail, he may present his petition of appeal and the copies accompanying the same to the officer in charge of the jail, who shall thereupon forward such petition and copies to the proper Appellate Court.

Procedure when appellant in jail.

421. (1) On receiving the petition and copy under section 419 or section 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same, and, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, it may dismiss the appeal summarily:

Summary dismissal of appeal.

Provided that no appeal presented under section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same.

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section, the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so.

---

* As to restrictions in appeals in Upper Burma, except those affecting European British subjects, see the Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation (V. of 1892), Sch., ss. XI. and XVII.

Notice of appeal.

422. If the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, it shall cause notice to be given to the appellant or his pleader, and to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, of the time and place at which such appeal will be heard, and shall, on the application of such officer, furnish him with a copy of the grounds of appeal; and, in cases of appeals under section 417, the Appellate Court shall cause a like notice to be given to the accused.

Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal.

423. (1) The Appellate Court shall then send for the record of the case, if such record is not already in Court. After perusing such record, and hearing the appellant or his pleader, if he appears, and the Public Prosecutor, if he appears, and, in case of an appeal under section 417, the accused, if he appears, the Court may, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, dismiss the appeal, or may,—

(a) in an appeal from an order of acquittal, reverse such order, and direct that further inquiry be made, or that the accused be retried or committed for trial, as the case may be, or find him guilty, and pass sentence on him according to law;

(b) in an appeal from a conviction, (1) reverse the finding and sentence, and acquit or discharge the accused, or order him to be retried by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to such Appellate Court, or committed for trial, or (2) alter the finding, maintaining the sentence, or, with or without altering the finding, reduce the sentence, or (3), with or without such reduction, and with or without altering the finding, alter the nature of the sentence, but, subject to the provisions of section 106, sub-section (3), not so as to enhance the same;

(c) in an appeal from any other order, alter or reverse such order;

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorize the Court to alter or reverse the verdict of a jury, unless it is of opinion that such verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge, or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by him.

Judgments of subordinate Appellate Courts.

424. The rules contained in Chapter XXVI. as to the judgment of a Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court:

Provided that, unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused shall not be brought up, or required to attend, to hear judgment delivered.

Order by High Court on appeal to be certified to lower Court.

425. (1) Whenever a case is decided on appeal by the High Court under this chapter, it shall certify its judgment or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence, or order appealed against was recorded or passed. If the finding, sentence, or order was recorded or passed by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate, the certificate shall be sent through the District Magistrate.

XIII. and XVII. and the Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation (V. of 1893) as modified up to 1st October 1899.

(2) The Court to which the High Court certifies its judgment or order shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the High Court; and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

Suspension of sentence pending appeal. Release of appellant on bail.

426. (1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended, and also, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail, or on his own bond.

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of any appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto.

(3) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude, or transportation, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced.

Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal.

427. When an appeal is presented under section 417, the High Court may issue a warrant directing that the accused be arrested and brought before it or any subordinate Court, and the Court before which he is brought may commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal, or admit him to bail.

Appellate Court may take further evidence, or direct it to be taken.

428. (1) In dealing with any appeal under this chapter the Appellate Court, if it thinks additional evidence to be necessary, shall record its reasons, and may either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate or, when the Appellate Court is a High Court, by a Court of Session or a Magistrate.

(2) When the additional evidence is taken by the Court of Session or the Magistrate, it or he shall certify such evidence to the Appellate Court, and such Court shall thereupon proceed to dispose of the appeal.

(3) Unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused or his pleader shall be present when the additional evidence is taken; but such evidence shall not be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors.

(4) The taking of evidence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter XXV. as if it were an inquiry.

Procedure where Judges of Court of Appeal are equally divided.

429. When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge of the same Court, and such Judge, after such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Finality of orders on appeal.

430. Judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final, except in the cases provided for in section 417 and Chapter XXXII.

Abatement of appeals.

431. Every appeal under section 417 shall finally abate on the death of the accused, and every other appeal under this chapter (except an appeal from a sentence of fine) shall finally abate on the death of the appellant.

CHAPTER XXXII.—OF REFERENCE AND REVISION.

Reference by Presidency Magistrate to High Court.

432. A Presidency Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, refer, for the opinion of the High Court, any question of law which arises in the hearing of any case pending before him, or may give judgment in any such case subject to the decision of the High Court on such reference, and, pending such decision, may either commit the accused to jail, or release him on bail to appear for judgment when called upon.

Disposal of case according to decision of High Court.

433. (1) When a question has been so referred, the High Court shall pass such order thereon as it thinks fit, and shall cause a copy of such order to be sent to the Magistrate by whom the reference was made, who shall dispose of the case conformably to the said order.

Direction as to costs.

(2) The High Court may direct by whom the costs of such reference shall be paid.

Power to reserve questions arising in original jurisdiction of High Court.

434. (1) When any person has, in a trial before a Judge of a High Court consisting of more Judges than one, and acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, been convicted of an offence, the Judge, if he thinks fit, may reserve and refer, for the decision of a Court consisting of two or more Judges of such Court, any question of law which has arisen in the course of the trial of such person, and the determination of which would affect the event of the trial.

Procedure when question reserved.

(2) If the Judge reserves any such question, the person convicted shall, pending the decision thereon, be remanded to jail, or, if the Judge thinks fit, be admitted to bail; and the High Court shall have power to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such question, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment or order as the High Court thinks fit.

Power to call for records of inferior Courts.

435.† (1) The High Court, or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, or any Sub-divisional Magistrate empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court situate within the local limits of its or his jurisdiction for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality, or propriety of any finding, sentence, or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court.

(2) If any Sub-divisional Magistrate acting under sub-section (1) considers that any such finding, sentence, or order is illegal or improper, or that any such proceedings are irregular, he shall forward the record, with such remarks thereon as he thinks fit, to the District Magistrate.

(3) Orders made under sections 143 and 144, and proceedings under Chapter XII. and section 176, are not proceedings within the meaning of this section.

(4) If an application under this section has been made either to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, no further application shall be entertained by the other of them.

* As to review in certain criminal cases by the Chief Court of Lower Burma, when no reference has been made under s. 434, see the Lower Burma Courts Act (VI of 1900), s. 12.

† In the Sonthal Parganas, the Court of Session shall not exercise any of the powers exercised by ss. 435 to 438, see s. 4 of the Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation (V. of 1893) as modified up to 1st October 1899.

436. When, on examining the record of any case under section 435 or otherwise, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate considers that such case is triable exclusively by the Court of Session, and that an accused person has been improperly discharged by the inferior Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may cause him to be arrested, and may thereupon, instead of directing a fresh inquiry, order him to be committed for trial upon the matter of which he has been, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, improperly discharged:

Provided as follows:—

(a) that the accused has had an opportunity of showing cause to such Judge or Magistrate why the commitment should not be made;

(b) that, if such Judge or Magistrate thinks that the evidence shows that some other offence has been committed by the accused, such Judge or Magistrate may direct the inferior Court to inquire into such offence.

437. On examining any record under section 435 or otherwise, the High Court or the Sessions Judge may direct the District Magistrate by himself or by any of the Magistrates subordinate to him to make, and the District Magistrate may himself make, or direct any subordinate Magistrate to make, further inquiry into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203 or sub-section (3) of section 204, or into the case of any accused person who has been discharged.

Power to order inquiry.

438. (1) The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on examining, under section 435 or otherwise, the record of any proceeding, report for the orders of the High Court the result of such examination, and, when such report contains a recommendation that a sentence be reversed or altered, may order that the execution of such sentence be suspended, and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail, or on his own bond.

Report to High Court.

(2) An Additional Sessions Judge shall have and may exercise all the powers of a Sessions Judge under this chapter in respect of any case which may be transferred to him by the Sessions Judge.

439. (1) In the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself, or which has been reported for orders, or which otherwise comes to its knowledge, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by sections 195, 423, 426, 427, and 428, or on a Court by section 338, and may enhance the sentence; and, when the Judges composing the Court of Revision are equally divided in opinion, the case shall be disposed of in manner provided by section 429.

High Court's powers of revision.

(2) No order under this section shall be made to the prejudice of the accused unless he has had an opportunity of being heard either personally or by pleader in his own defence.

(3) Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which, in the opinion of such Court, the accused has committed, than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.

* In the Sonthal Parganas, the Court of Session shall not exercise any of the powers exercised by ss. 435 to 438, see s. 4 of the Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation (V. of 1893) as modified up to 1st October 1899.

(4) Nothing in this section applies to an entry made under section 273, or shall be deemed to authorize a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction.

(5) Where, under this Code, an appeal lies, and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed.

440. No party has any right to be heard either personally or by pleader before any Court when exercising its powers of revision:

Optional with Court to hear parties.

Provided that the Court may, if it thinks fit, when exercising such powers, hear any party either personally or by pleader, and that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect section 439, sub-section (2).

441. When the record of any proceedings of any Presidency Magistrate is called for by the High Court under section 435, the Magistrate may submit with the record a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision or order and any facts which he thinks material to the issue; and the Court shall consider such statement before overruling or setting aside the said decision or order.

Statement by Presidency Magistrate of grounds of his decision to be considered by High Court.

442. When a case is revised under this chapter by the High Court, it shall, in manner hereinbefore provided by section 425, certify its decision or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence, or order revised was recorded or passed, and the Court or Magistrate to which the decision or order is so certified shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the decision so certified; and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

High Court's order to be certified to lower Court or Magistrate.

PART VIII.—SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST EUROPEANS AND AMERICANS.*

443. No Magistrate, unless he is a Justice of the Peace, and (except in the case of a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate) unless he is a Magistrate of the first class and an European British subject, shall inquire into or try any charge against an European British subject.

Magistrates who may inquire into and try charges against European British subjects.

444. No Judge presiding in a Court of Session except the Sessions Judge, shall exercise jurisdiction over an European British subject unless he himself is an European British subject; and if he is an Assistant Sessions Judge, unless he has held the office of Assistant Sessions Judge for at least three years, and has been specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

Sessions Judge to be an European British subject.

Assistant Sessions Judge to have held office for three years, and to be specially empowered.

445. Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall prevent any Magistrate from taking cognizance of an offence committed by any European British subject in any case in which he could take cognizance of a like offence if committed by another person:

Cognizance of offence committed by European British subject.

* As to withdrawal from vagrants of their privileges as European British subjects, see s. 30 of the European Vagrancy Act (IX. of 1874) and s. 3 (t) of this Act, supra.

Provided that, if he issues any process for the purpose of compelling the appearance of an European British subject accused of an offence, such process shall be made returnable before a Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try the case.

Sentences which may be passed by Provincial Magistrates.

446. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 32 or section 34, no Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate shall pass any sentence on an European British subject other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or both, and a District Magistrate shall not pass any such sentence other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or both.

When commitment is to be to Court of Session, and when to High Court.

447. (1) When an European British subject is accused of an offence before a Magistrate, and such offence cannot, in the opinion of such Magistrate, be adequately punished by him, and is not punishable with death or with transportation for life, such Magistrate shall, if he thinks that the accused ought to be committed, commit him to the Court of Session, or, in the case of a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court.*

(2) When the offence which appears to have been committed is punishable with death or with transportation for life, the commitment shall be to the High Court.

Trial of offences of which one is, and the others are not, punishable with death or transportation for life.

448. Where any person committed to the High Court under section 447 is charged with several offences of which one is punishable with death or transportation for life, and the others with a less punishment, and the High Court considers that he should not be tried for the offence punishable with death or transportation, the High Court may nevertheless try him for the other offences.

Sentences which may be passed by Court of Session.

449. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 31, no Court of Session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or fine, or both.

Procedure when Sessions Judge finds his powers inadequate.

(2) If, at any time after the commitment and before signing judgment, the presiding Judge thinks that the offence which appears to be proved cannot be adequately punished by such a sentence, he shall record his opinion to that effect, and transfer the case to the High Court. Such Judge may either himself bind over, or direct the committing Magistrate to bind over, the complainant and witnesses to appear before the High Court.

Jury or assessors before High Court or Court of Session.

450. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a High Court or Court of Session, if, before the first juror is called and accepted or the first assessor is appointed, as the case may be, any such subject requires to be tried by a mixed jury, the trial shall be by a jury of which not less than half the number shall be Europeans or Americans, or both Europeans and Americans. S. 451, Act X., 1882.

*The Chief Court of Lower Burma is the High Court for the whole of Burma (inclusive of the Shan States) in reference to proceedings against European British subjects and persons jointly charged with European British subjects see s. 8 (1) (a) of the Lower Burma Courts Act (VI of 1900).

(2) When any such trial before a Court of Session would, in the ordinary course, be with the aid of assessors, the European British subject accused, or, where there are several European British subjects accused, all of them jointly, may, instead of claiming to be tried by a mixed jury under sub-section (1), require that not less than half the number of the assessors shall be Europeans or Americans, or both Europeans and Americans.

S. 451A, Act X., 1882.

451. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a District Magistrate for any offence, any such subject may, in a summons case before he is heard in his defence under section 244, or in a warrant-case before he enters on his defence under section 256, claim that the trial shall be by a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450.

(2) If a claim is made under sub-section (1) in a summons-case at the time when the Magistrate proceeds under section 244 to hear the accused, or in a warrant-case at the time when the Magistrate calls upon the accused under section 256 to enter upon the defence, the Magistrate shall forthwith issue the necessary orders for the trial by a jury as aforesaid.

(3) If such a claim is made at an earlier stage of the proceedings, the Magistrate shall issue such orders whenever it appears to him from the evidence recorded that there will be a sufficient case to go before a jury.

(4) In every such case the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 242, before issuing any orders as aforesaid, frame a formal charge.

(5) The provisions of sections 211, 216, 217, 219, and 220 shall, so far as may be, apply for the purpose of securing the attendance of the complainant, the accused, and the witnesses at every trial to be held under this section.

(6) The provisions of this Code relating to the procedure in a trial by jury before a Court of Session shall, as nearly as may be, apply to every trial under this section as if the District Magistrate were a Sessions Judge, and the accused had been committed to his Court for trial.

(7) All Courts may construe any of the provisions referred to in sub-section (5) or sub-section (6), in so far as they are made applicable by those sub-sections, with such verbal alterations not affecting the substance as may be necessary or proper to adapt the same to the matter before them.

(8) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of the Magistrate to commit an accused person for trial under section 347 or section 447.

S. 451B, Act X. 1882.

Transfer to another Court in certain cases.

(9) If an accused person claims to be tried by jury under this section, and, in the opinion of the District Magistrate, there is reason to believe that a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450 cannot be constituted for the trial before himself, or cannot be so constituted without an amount of delay, expense, or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, he may, instead of issuing orders for the trial before himself under this section, transfer the case for trial to such other District Magistrate, or to such Sessions Judge, as the High Court may, from time to time, by rules made by it in this behalf, and approved by the Local Government, or by special order, direct.

(10) When a case is transferred under this section to a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, he shall, with all convenient speed, try it with the same powers (including the power of commitment), and according to the same procedure, as if he were a District Magistrate acting under this section.

452. In any case in which an European British subject is accused jointly with a person not being an European British subject, and such European British subject is committed for trial before a High Court or Court of Session, such subject and person may be tried together, and the procedure on the trial shall be the same as it would have been had the European British subject been tried separately:

Trial of European British subject and Native jointly accused.

Provided that, if the European British subject requires under section 450 to be tried by a mixed jury, or by a mixed set of assessors, and the person not being an European British subject requires that he shall be tried separately, the latter person shall be tried separately in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XXIII.

When Native may claim separate trial.

453. (1) When any person claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purposes of the inquiry or trial; and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement, and allow the person making it a reasonable time within which to prove that it is true, and shall then decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If any such person is convicted by such Magistrate, and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Magistrate's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

Procedure on claim of person to be dealt with as European British subject.

(2) When any such person is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person, before such Court, claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, such Court shall, after such further enquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If he is convicted by such Court, and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Court's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

(3) When the Court before which any person is tried decides that he is not an European British subject, such decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial.

454. (1) If an European British subject does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried, or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before, and disallowed by, the committing Magistrate, it is not again made before the Court to which such subject is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as such European British subject, and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the same case.

Failure to plead status a waiver.

(2) Unless the Magistrate has reason to believe that any person brought before him is not an European British subject, the Magistrate shall ask such person whether he is such a subject or not.

455. Where a person, who is not an European British subject, is dealt with as such under this chapter, and does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial, or sentence (as the case may be), shall not, by reason of such dealing, be invalid.

Trial under this chapter of person not an European British subject.

456. When any European British subject is unlawfully detained in custody by any person, such European British subject or any person on his behalf may apply to the High Court* which would have jurisdiction over such European British subject in respect of any offence committed by him at the place where he is detained, or to which he would be entitled to appeal from any conviction for any such offence, for an order directing the person detaining him to bring him before the High Court to abide such further order as it may pass.

Right of European British subject unlawfully detained to apply for order to be brought before High Court.

457. The High Court, if it thinks fit, may, before issuing such order, inquire, on affidavit or otherwise, into the grounds on which it is applied for, and grant or refuse such application; or it may issue the order in the first instance, and, when the person applying for it is brought before it, it may make such further order in the case as it thinks fit, after such inquiry (if any) as it thinks necessary.

Procedure on such application.

458. The High Court may issue such orders throughout the territories within the local limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction, and such other territories as the Governor-General in Council may direct.

Territories throughout which High Court may issue such orders.

459. (1) Unless there is something repugnant in the context, all enactments heretofore or hereafter made by the Governor-General in Council, which confer on Magistrates, or on the Court of Session, jurisdiction over offences, shall be deemed to apply to European British subjects, although such persons are not expressly referred to therein.

Application of Acts conferring jurisdiction on Magistrates or Courts of Session.

460. In every case triable by jury or with the aid of assessors, in which an European (not being an European British subject) or an American, is the accused person, or one of the accused persons, not less than half the number of jurors or assessors shall, if practicable, and if such European or American so claims, be Europeans or Americans.

461. Whenever an European or American is charged before the Court of Session jointly with a person not an European or American, and, in compliance with a claim made under section 460, is tried by a jury, or with the aid of a set of assessors, of which at least one-half consists of Europeans and Americans, the latter person shall, if he so claims, be tried separately.

CHAPTER XXXIV.—LUNATICS.

Procedure in case of accused being lunatic.

464. (1) When a Magistrate holding an inquiry or a trial has reason to believe that the accused is of unsound mind, and consequently incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate shall inquire into the fact of such unsoundness, and shall cause such person to be examined by the Civil Surgeon of the district or such other medical officer as the Local Government directs, and thereupon shall examine such Surgeon or other officer as a witness, and shall reduce the examination to writing.

(2) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind, and consequently incapable of making his defence, he shall postpone further proceedings in the case.

465. (1) If any person committed for trial before a Court of Session or a High Court appears to the Court at his trial to be of unsound mind, and consequently incapable of making his defence, the jury, or the Court with the aid of assessors, shall, in the first instance, try the fact of such unsoundness and incapacity, and, if satisfied of the fact, shall pass judgment accordingly, and thereupon the trial shall be postponed.

Procedure in case of person committed before Court of Session or High Court being lunatic.

(2) The trial of the fact of the unsoundness of mind and incapacity of the accused shall be deemed to be part of his trial before the Court.

466. (1) Whenever an accused person is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, if the case is one in which bail may be taken, may release him on sufficient security being given that he shall be properly taken care of, and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, and for his appearance when required before the Magistrate or Court, or such officer as the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf.

Release of lunatic pending investigation or trial.

(2) If the case is one in which bail may not be taken, or if sufficient security is not given, the Magistrate or Court shall report the case to the Local Government, remanding the accused to custody pending orders, and the Local Government may order the accused to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail, or other suitable place of safe custody, and the Magistrate or Court shall give effect to such order.

Custody of lunatic.

467. (1) Whenever an inquiry or a trial is postponed under section 464 or section 465, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, may at any time resume the inquiry or trial, and require the accused to appear or be brought before such Magistrate or Court.

Resumption of inquiry or trial.

(2) When the accused has been released under section 466, and the sureties for his appearance produce him to the officer whom the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf, the certificate of such officer that the accused is capable of making his defence shall be receivable in evidence.

468. (1) If, when the accused appears or is again brought before the Magistrate or the Court, as the case may be, the Magistrate or Court considers him capable of making his defence, the inquiry or trial shall proceed.

(2) If the Magistrate or Court considers the accused person to be still incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court shall again act according to the provisions of section 464 or section 465, as the case may be.

469. When the accused appears to be of sound mind at the time of inquiry or trial, and the Magistrate is satisfied from the evidence given before him that there is reason to believe that the accused committed an act which if he had been of sound mind, would have been an offence, and that he was, at the time when the act was committed, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the

Judgment of acquittal on ground of lunacy.

470. Whenever any person is acquitted upon the ground that, at the time at which he is alleged to have committed an offence, he was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act alleged as constituting the offence, or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the finding shall state specifically whether he committed the act or not.

Person acquitted on such ground to be kept in safe custody.

471. (1) Whenever such judgment states that the accused person committed the act alleged, the Magistrate or Court before whom or which the trial has been held shall, if such act would, but for the incapacity found, have constituted an offence, order such person to be kept in safe custody in such place and manner as the Magistrate or Court thinks fit, and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government.

(2) The Local Government may order such person to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail, or other suitable place of safe custody.

Power of Governor-General in Council to order criminal lunatics confined by order of Local Government to be removed from one province to another.

(3) The Governor-General in Council may, by general or special order, direct that any person whom the Local Government has ordered under this chapter to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail, or other place of safe custody, shall be removed, from the place where he is confined, to any lunatic asylum, jail, or other place of safe custody in British India.

(4) The Local Government may empower the officer in charge of the jail in which a person is confined, under the provisions of section 466 or this section, to discharge all or any of the functions of the Inspector-General of Prisons under section 472, section 473, or section 474.

Lunatic prisoners to be visited by Inspector-General.

472. When any person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, the Inspector-General of Prisons if such person is confined in a jail, or the visitors of the lunatic asylum or any two of them if he is confined in a lunatic asylum, may visit him in order to ascertain his state of mind; and he shall be visited once at least in every six months by such Inspector-General, or by two of such visitors as aforesaid; and such Inspector-General or visitors shall make a special report to the Local Government as to the state of mind of such person.

473. If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466, and such Inspector-General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their opinion, such person is capable of making his defence, he shall be taken before the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, at such time as the Magistrate or Court appoints, and the Magistrate or Court shall deal with such person under the provisions of section 468; and the certificate of such Inspector-General or visitors as aforesaid shall be receivable as evidence.

474. (1) If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, and such Inspector-General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their judgment, he may be discharged without danger of his doing injury to himself, or to any other person, the Local Government may thereupon order him to be discharged, or to be detained in custody, or to be transferred to a public lunatic asylum if he has not been already sent to such an asylum; and, in case it orders him to be transferred to an asylum, may appoint a commission, consisting of a judicial and two medical officers.

(2) Such commission shall make formal inquiry into the state of mind of such person, taking such evidence as is necessary, and shall report to the Local Government, which may order his discharge or detention as it thinks fit.

475. (1) Whenever any relative or friend of any person confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471 desires that he shall be delivered over to his care and custody, the Local Government, upon the application of such relative or friend, and on his giving security to the satisfaction of such Government that the person delivered shall be properly taken care of, and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, may order such person to be delivered to such relative or friend.

(2) Whenever such person is so delivered, it shall be upon condition that he shall be produced for the inspection of such officer, and at such times as the Local Government directs.

(3) The provisions of sections 472 and 474 shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to persons delivered under the provisions of this section: and the certificate of the inspecting officer appointed under this section shall be receivable as evidence.

CHAPTER XXXV.—PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CERTAIN OFFENCES AFFECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

Procedure in cases mentioned in section 195

476. (1) When any Civil, Criminal, or Revenue Court is of opinion that there is ground for inquiring into any offence referred to in section 195, and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, such Court, after making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary, may send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class, and may send the accused in custody, or take sufficient security for his appearance, before such Magistrate, and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence on such inquiry or trial.

(2) Such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed according to law, and as if upon complaint made and recorded under section 200, and may, if he is authorized under section 192 to transfer cases, transfer the inquiry or trial to some other competent Magistrate.

Power of Court of Session as to such offences committed before itself.

477. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 444, a Court of Session may charge a person for any offence referred to in section 195, and committed before it, or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, and may commit, or admit to bail and try, such person upon its own charge.

(2) Such Court may direct the Magistrate to cause the attendance of any witnesses for the purposes of the trial.

Power of Civil and Revenue Courts to complete inquiry, and commit to High Court or Court of Session.

478. (1) When any such offence is committed before any Civil or Revenue Court, or brought under the notice of any Civil or Revenue Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, and the case is triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session, or such Civil or Revenue Court thinks that it ought to be tried by the High Court or Court of Session, such Civil or Revenue Court may, instead of sending the case under section 476 to a Magistrate for inquiry, itself complete the inquiry, and commit or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be.

(2) For the purposes of an inquiry under this section, the Civil or Revenue Court may, subject to the provisions of section 443, exercise all the powers of a Magistrate; and its proceedings in such inquiry shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVIII., and shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate.

Procedure of Civil or Revenue Court in such cases.

479. When any such commitment is made by a Civil or Revenue Court, the Court shall send the charge with the order of commitment and the record of the case to the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or other Magistrate authorized to commit for trial, and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be, together with the witnesses for the prosecution and defence.

(2) Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall be deemed to apply to proceedings under this section.

Record in such cases.

481. (1) In every such case the Court shall record the facts constituting the offence, with the statement (if any) made by the offender, as well as the finding and sentence.

(2) If the offence is under section 228 of the Indian Penal Code,* the record shall show the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting, and the nature of the interruption or insult.

Procedure where Court considers that case should not be dealt with under section 480.

482. (1) If the Court in any case considers that a person accused of any of the offences referred to in section 480, and committed in its view or presence, should be imprisoned otherwise than in default of payment of fine, or that a fine exceeding two hundred rupees should be imposed upon him, or such Court is, for any other reason, of opinion that the case should not be disposed of under section 480, such Court, after recording the facts constituting the offence and the statement of the accused as hereinbefore provided, may forward

Discharge of offender on submission or apology.

484. When any Court has, under section 480, adjudged an offender to punishment for refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do, or for any intentional insult or interruption, the Court may, in its discretion, discharge the offender, or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court, or an apology being made to its satisfaction.

Imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document.

485. If any witness or person called to produce a document or thing before a Criminal Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him, or to produce any document or thing in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce, and does not offer any reasonable excuse for such refusal, such Court may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment, or, by warrant † under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge, commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court, for any term not exceeding seven days, unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document or thing. In the event of his persisting in his refusal, he may be dealt with according to the provisions of section 480 or section 482, and in the case of a Court established by Royal Charter, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt.

Appeals from convictions in contempt-cases.

486. (1) Any person sentenced by any Court under section 480 or section 485 may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, appeal to the Court to which decrees or orders made in such Court are ordinarily appealable.

(2) The provisions of Chapter XXXI. shall, so far as they are applicable, apply to appeals under this section, and the Appellate Court may alter or reverse the finding, or reduce or reverse the sentence appealed against.

an appeal from such conviction by any other Court of Small Causes shall lie to the Court of Session for the sessions division within which such Court is situate.

(4) An appeal from such conviction by any officer as Registrar or Sub-Registrar appointed as aforesaid may, when such officer is also Judge of a Civil Court, be made to the Court to which it would, under the preceding portion of this section, be made if such conviction were a decree by such officer in his capacity as such Judge; and in other cases may be made to the District Judge, or, in the presidency-towns, to the High Court.

Enforcement of order.

Provided that, if such person offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, such Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her, and may make an order under this section notwithstanding such offer, if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing.

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason, she refuses to live with her husband, or if they are living separately by mutual consent.

CHAPTER XXXIX.—OF BAIL.

In what cases bail to be taken.

496. When any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared, at any time while in the custody of such officer, or at any stage of the proceedings before such Court, to give bail, such person shall be released on bail:

Provided that such officer or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond* without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

497. (1) When any person accused of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of the offence of which he is accused.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry, or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed such offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) Any Court may, at any subsequent stage of any proceeding under this Code, cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested, and may commit him to custody.

Power to direct admission to bail, or reduction of bail.

498. The amount of every bond executed under this chapter shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive; and the High Court or Court of Session may, in any case, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not, direct that any person be admitted to bail, or that the bail required by a police-officer or Magistrate be reduced.

Bond of accused and sureties.

499. (1) Before any person is released on bail, or released on his own bond, a bond* for such sum of money as the police-officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient, shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties, conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court, as the case may be.

(2) If the case so require, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court of Session, or other Court to answer the charge.

Discharge from custody.

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed, the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released; and, when he is in jail, the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release* to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer, on receipt of the order, shall release him.

* See Sch. V, Form XLII., infra.

(2) Nothing in this section, section 496, or section 497, shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.

501. If, through mistake, fraud, or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it, and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and, on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail.

Discharge of sureties.

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged, either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties; and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody.

CHAPTER XL.—OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

503. (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial, or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session, or the High Court, that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense, or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance, and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness.

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer.

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, he or such Magistrate of the first class as he appoints in this behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is, or shall summon the witness before him, and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may, for this purpose, exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant-cases under this Code.

504. (1) If the witness is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Presidency Magistrate, the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission may direct the same to the said Presidency Magistrate, who thereupon may compel the attendance of, and examine, such witness as if he were a witness in a case pending before himself.

(a) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, section 3.*

505. (1) The parties to any proceeding under this Code in which a commission is issued may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue, and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories.

Parties may examine witnesses.

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or, if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross-examine, and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness.

506. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense, or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate, stating the reasons for the application; and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided, or reject the application.

(2) Any deposition so taken, if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872,† may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court.

508. In every case in which a commission is issued under section 503 or section 506, the inquiry, trial, or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission

Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into, or trial for, the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense, or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorize the distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

517. (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order, as it thinks fit for the disposal of any property or document produced before it, or in its custody, or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence.

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order, and cannot, through its own officers, conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate.

(3) When an order is made under this section in a case in which an appeal lies, such order shall not (except when the property is live-stock, or is subject to speedy and natural decay) be carried out until the period allowed for presenting such appeal has passed, or when such appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal has been disposed of Order may take form of reference to District or Sub-divisional Magistrate.

519. When any person is convicted of any offence which includes or amounts to theft or receiving stolen property, and it is proved that any other person has bought the stolen property from him without knowing or having reason to believe that the same was stolen, and that any money has, on his arrest, been taken out of the possession of the convicted person, the Court may, on the application of such purchaser, and on the restitution of the stolen property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, order that, out of such money, a sum not exceeding the price paid by such purchaser be delivered to him.

Payment to innocent purchaser of money found on accused.

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference, or revision, may direct any order under section 517, section 518, or section 519, passed by a Court subordinate thereto, to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter, or annul such order, and make any further orders that may be just.

(2) In the case of every order passed under this section, an appeal shall lie to the Court to which appeals against sentences of the Court passing such order would lie.

525. If the person entitled to the possession of such property is unknown or absent, and the property is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Magistrate to whom its seizure is reported, is of opinion that its sale would be for the benefit of the owner, the Magistrate may at any time direct it to be sold; and the provisions of sections 523 and 524 shall, as nearly as may be practicable, apply to the nett proceeds of such sale.

(b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or

(c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative.

(4) Every application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section shall be made by motion, which shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate-General, be supported by affidavit or affirmation.

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made; and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty-four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under section 197.

(8) If, in any criminal case or appeal, before the commencement of the hearing, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant, or the accused, notifies, to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending, his intention to make an application under this section in respect of the case, the Court shall exercise the powers of postponement or adjournment given by section 344 in such a manner as will afford a reasonable time for the application being made and an order being obtained thereon, before the accused is called on for his defence, or, in the case of an appeal, before the hearing of the appeal.

Adjournment on application under this section.

527. (1) The Governor-General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct the transfer of any particular criminal case or appeal from one High Court* to another High Court, or from any Criminal Court subordinate to one High Court to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court, whenever it appears to him that such transfer will promote the ends of justice, or tend to the general convenience of parties or witnesses.

(2) The Court to which such case or appeal is transferred shall deal with the same as if it had been originally instituted in, or presented to, such Court.

528 (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Sub-divisional Magistrate may withdraw any case from, or recall any case which he has made over to, any Magistrate subordinate to him, and may inquire into or try such case himself, or refer it for inquiry or trial to any other such Magistrate competent to inquire into or try the same.

When irregular commitments may be validated.

532. (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless, during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(c) of the omission to revise any list of jurors or assessors in accordance with section 324, or

(d) of any misdirection in any charge to a jury unless such error, omission, irregularity, want, or misdirection has, in fact, occasioned a failure of justice.

Explanation.—In determining whether any error, omission, or irregularity in any proceeding under this Code has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings.
